J. DOOLITTLE IS SWEPT INTO DEEP WATER

Seven Year Old Boy Playing With Boat Drowns at Napanee

LOST BALANCE

Body Soon Recovered But Life Was Extinct

Toppling over into the deep holes near Springside Park at Napanee, as he was trying to retrieve a stick which he was using to guide his little boat, Jack Doolittle, seven year old son of Mrs. Eva Doolittle, 218 Albert street of this city, was drowned Sunday afternoon shortly after five o'clock and his body was recovered ten minutes later but life was extinct. Dr. Galbraith, Coroner of Napanee was called and after resuscitation had been applied for half an hour, he declared the child dead and deemed it unnecessary to hold an inquest. The death has cast a pall of gloom over the city, where the youngster was deservedly popular with his little playmates in the section of which he resided.

With his aunts, Miss Florence Davis, Mrs. S. Davis, his grandmother, and his sister "Peggy" journeyed to Napanee for a picnic party and before the tragedy occurred was enjoying himself playing with his boat in the shallow water. He was fully clothed excepting his boots and stockings. The little boat went away from him and in his anxiety he reached with a stick to get it and the stick fell out of his hands. He reached further towards the water and fell out. Little "Peggy" tried to catch her brother but was unsuccessful and then Miss Davis reached for the child, as he was being swept out by the rocks into the deep hole. Mrs. Davis also tried to catch the child but again was unsuccessful. Harry Moore of Napanee, who was close by with others, dove repeatedly for the body and finally brought it to the surface.

"Jackie" was a great favorite with his playmate and was also a smart pupil at school. He attended Bridge Street School and also Tabernacle Sunday School. He leaves besides his parents, one sister "Peggy" whose body was prepared for burial in Napanee and will be brought to the city on Monday and taken to the family residence on Albert Street.

High Winds Buffet Flat Bottomed Punt as Belleville Family Try to Make Port—Intensive Search Has Reward

the whole two days and night was a picnic lunch, which had been eaten late Friday afternoon. Failure of the various search parties in boats, which searched each cove and inlet from Belleville to Big Bay to find the family was attributed to the fact that they were well sheltered in Leavett's Cove during the day. It was one of the last places visited by the largest boat party, directed by Chief of Police Alexander Kidd, piloted by "Dan" Whalen and assisted by Pat Collins and Frank Domenico, who kept a sharp lookout with marine glasses in the prow of the boat. Mayor George O. Tice, who had directed another search party along every foot of the south shore of the county from Belleville to Massassaga, also took time for some time in the boat, while a representative of the Ontario Provincial was accompanied both parties. Failure also of the night search parties to sight a fire which had been kept burning at Hubbs Point on the Bay Marmith it afforded was due to the fact that the Hanna family were well inland that night. The search during the night, however, observed several flashes of lightning over the shore some distance away but could not identify what they were. The thought that they had been picked up there was being looked for did not enter their minds, according to Mr. Hanna who related the experience to the Ontario Intelligencer.

Tells Story of Trip

How the time was spent by the Hanna family during their nearly three days' isolation from the rest of the world, marooned on various rocky points near Horse Point where they were driven, had been entertaining time they had attempted to return is related by Mr. Jack Hanna.

They had made arrangements with Charlie Fenner for the use of the boat the night before but it was then that it it became rough that day, we would likely stay down there until evening, on Horse Point, where we intended to fish. We left Belleville just after six o'clock Friday morning and had a fine trip down the river, plant and got to the Point without a bit of trouble. After I had let the family out I went for a little fish for an hour or so, and then we had lunch when it came back. In the afternoon I took Bobbie out with me in the boat and we did a little more fishing until I saw the wind starting to pile up. When the squall broke, I had the boat well up on the land and we huddled around a fire I had built. I didn't rain much, but in all the years I've been on the water I had never seen the bay so rough before. There wasn't a boat on it."

From this point on it appears that the party were not unduly worried about getting back even if the wind started a few times with the boat, only to be driven back to land by the head wind too strong to row again. The boat they had was a 16 foot flat bottomed punt, with a mast on it for a small sail. These were unable to negotiate the heavy passage back to Belleville found them driven from Horse Point well up into Leavett's Cove, and there drew on, still with no abatement of the storm, and it was there that the foregone conclusion that they would be forced to spend the night there and preparations were made for their children to go to bed. All extra clothing the parents were was wrapped around the children. Soon Mrs. Hanna and Bobbie had the best and the little ones were made comfortable. A fire was also built on another and father huddled around it with the children. Finally they dosed at intervals only to awaken occasionally to see the party lights flickering on the shore to the west. That the lights belonged to those relatives who were engaged in the search for the missing family hadn't been thought of by the latter, but learned that the lights belonged to Allan Boyle and Jack McGuire who had been making an all-night search of the shore.

Boats Pass Close By.

In the morning more attempts were made to start for home against the still growing wind. Repeated attempts to row against it resulted in the small boat shipping wave after wave, as it was buffeted to and fro in the heavy swells. At times there was actual danger of them capsizing so land was again made by the exhausted and hungry father. After about two-thirty o'clock on Saturday afternoon, the last attempt was made to leave the mainland and row back to the city. Although several boats had passed very far from the family, who were battling their way to the punt none of them stopped to recognize the small hull in the water. Finally the wind began to lose strength rapidly ebbing, and with the wind holding them almost stationary in the bay, they drew close to a large motor boat approaching from the west. It was the boat owned by Mr. Kokesh, one of several which had been in the locality of the bay between the boats. It was the first time any of them had been in the water. The family were taken to the hospital dock and from there an auto took them to their home where neighbors soon had a meal ready for the hungry and exhausted family. Mrs. Herbert Collins, a next door neighbor, administered to the wants of mother and children and saw to it that they were fed and put in bed. After a meal and some rest the family spent the remainder of the night at the home of Mrs. Catherine Cooke, 75 Gordon street, mother of Mrs. Jack Hanna.

Mr. Kokesh Made Rescue.

Mr Willson Kokesh, who was in the first boat to reach the family, described how he had seen the punt some distance from the shore as he headed for Horse Point. "I knew it was Jack long before I got to the boat. He was roving as if he was dead tired," declared Mr. Kokesh. When we got up to him he asked if we were looking for him. Half the town is looking for you, I told him. Then they all got serious. That was something they hadn't thought of. Then they were all known that the airplanes and boats they had seen were looking for them, and they weren't worried about it in very much, but then we told them how many had been searching all night they wanted to get back as quickly as they could. I don't think they would have had strength enough to row back to Belleville," declared Mr. Kokesh when asked.

Word, that the missing family had been found spread like wildfire about the city as soon as official confirmation of the fact had been made. Boats, which were searching the lower reaches of the bay were advised by passing boats to cease, while search parties in motor cars who had been hunting the shores of the bay on both sides were also advised by others who set out from Belleville to inform them. The party containing Mayor Geo. O. Tice, Charles Hanna, John Hanna, father of the boy, and Louis Clement, who were covering the territory around Massassaga, were told of the find-ing by Mr. McGuire, who ha driven from Belleville.

To all engaged in the search for the family a note of thanks and appreciation is expressed by relatives at the happy outcome of the affair.

ARTICLE NO. 18

Merchandising Again

All merchandising may be divided into three classes (1) Competitive (2) Constructive (3) Co-operative.

"Competitive merchandising" is that which revolves entirely about the matter of price. Two or more suppliers compete for the same order; their only argument being a "lower price." Too many businesses are conducted today with only this point in mind. There is not an iota of creative or constructive effort put forward—nothing but price. Marketing on this basis cannot remain on a firm foundation. Those people make examples of this sort of price war which is going on at our very doors. Its motto is "May the best man win"—regardless of the blindness.

For the present, however, we may dismiss it from our consideration and possibly return to it for a further talk on this subject at greater length.

"Constructive merchandising" is building up sales, not necessarily at a higher price, but perhaps with an added service, an increased use, an improved condition of or any one of a number of constructed features added to a worthy product or service.

This method of merchandising is gaining wider favour with the most successful merchants today. A manufacturer of automobiles can only hope to keep his hold on a portion of the market, so long as he keeps improving his product and his selling methods. Take the Lux chants who constantly improve their stores and their service, can have any hope of building up a real business. Of course the same is true of the grocer and profit.

I know of a merchant who said that he kept his store running just as he did thirty years ago, because he thought the farmers would feel more at home in a store piled with cases and barrels. He found out he was wrong, and now he is trying to bring back the old days. Modern trade is much harder to get back than it was to get it in the first place. Just here, I would like to emphasize the importance of "Service" to the customer and to overlook that your customers are the other fellows' prospects.

"Co-operative merchandising" is constructive merchandising by a group of merchants as distinct from the efforts of individuals or separate firms. Within the last few years this type of merchandising has grown to large proportions. Manufacturers have found the same type of products have joined together in order that they can buy, advertise and sell on a wholesale basis.

I look for a further increase in this type of merchandising, but the success of this method can only be measured by the success of the co-operative efforts of individuals in the group. Think in this group. The whole group will stand or fall by the average of the service system.

Summing up, I would recommend the most careful study and practice of "constructive merchandising." The constructive phase of any campaign can be developed in a few days but it takes years to develop things that have built big businesses and profits.

Even such a simple and necessary article as soap is a wide scope for delivery. Here are a few suggestions for increasing sales.

As we speak of "constructive merchandising," we should not fail to mention Dominion Thanksgiving Day, October 10th, the time of the store which at Christmas time put a sign on its door "NO STAMPS" because the merchandising efforts of every clerk was bolstered with people coming into his store. They didn't go in and today he is out of business.

As against that, I know of a store where trading stamps are on sale. Even if a person comes in the boy can't even stamp the clerk always offers "May we mail your letter for you? Our boy is going to the Post Office shortly." It is a little extra service to the customer and I am sure it makes many sales of other articles.

Watch for little things that might turn business away from you. They may seem small at first sight, but counted in Dollars and Cents over a period, they cost more than you can afford these days.

NEXT WEEK—"TIMELY MERCHANDISING"

Dodgers - Circulars - Hand Bills - Fly Sheets

Are they good advertising? There are many different types and methods of advertising, and any advertising is "advertising" but some types and methods are far more effective.

The method to be-used depends on the job to be done—the merchant —his location—the people he wishes to reach—and the results he wants.

The fly sheet advertising medium was the town crier—then the sandwich man—then the dodger or handbill—then the newspaper.

In the dodger days the people lived in a country town or small city had two opposing papers each reaching only a part of the population. Therefore the merchants preparing to reach the whole population had to use two papers—or use dodgers rather than use two papers and even then not be sure he was reaching all the people. Today, with one paper in the field reaching practically all the people in the publication and the circulation of three families in the district, the newspaper ensures a most thorough covering.

Dodgers—Are an individual message from you to your customer—you must arrange distribution yourself either through your own messengers—through the mail with the work of addressing and expense of mailing, or without addressing have your post office deliver over a certain area. The individual message is not an advantage as the dodger gets only a very short reading. Distribution is difficult and expensive. The cost of circulars depends on the quantity required, and when you add the charges for delivery, the cost climbs up. Continuity with circular or dodger is expensive and difficult.

Newspapers—The newspaper is purchased by the subscriber for its news, is read by the young and old—the advertisement appears on a page with the news and reading matter and has the support and prestige of the paper.

Dodgers the same size as an advertisement 12½" deep by 4 columns wide for a quantity sufficient to cover your district will cost practically as much as the advertisement in the paper. Add to this the cost of delivery would make the cost twice that of the advertisement—and the paper issuing two to three times the number of subscribers has a larger circle. True, some of the message before all the families of the district, but you would be outside the immediate district of the merchant but in present days of good roads the merchant's field is steadily widening.

As a dodger it is necessary to use a fairly good size that it may not appear too small and the distribution is the same whether the dodger is large or small. An advertisement in your local paper may be whatever size you care to make it and the reading matter is the same if you carry a column or a half column. Say, for instance, the question in your mind is whether to use a dodger 12" x 9" and send it out to 2000 addressed or a 3½" by 4 column wide advertisement in your local paper going into over 6000 homes.

The dodger would probably cost you	$10.75
Postage—mailed unsealed @ ½c apiece in the city	10.00

An advertisement this size in your paper entering over 6000 homes would only cost you $3.50 to cover the same number in dodger form would be $23.75—would not be thrown away but kept around the house until the next issue—and even including the extra distribution is cost-ing less than the dodger because of the circular. Your better plan for the advertisement would be to reduce the size and instead of using 12½" by 4 columns use 6" by 2 columns—or one line—a 4" by 2 column 110 inches) once a week for five weeks. This 10" advertisement once a week for a year (52 times) would cost $94.00 a line, and reach the complete district, while your circular once a month would cost $20.75 a month to reach only a portion of the people.

There are, however, merchants so located that they cannot use 2000 circulars to advantage, but wish to reach only a few hundred possible customers and the circular distribution is the only method to use. Here it might better serve the purpose than the newspaper with its larger circulation. Would, however, be well in looking into the matter very carefully as the newspaper is the medium used successfully by National and Local advertisers alike, and a dodger is at best a substitute or supplementary.

In any case, and in all cases, we are interested. He is more interested in making you a successful advertiser than he is in selling you an advertising contract and has studied all your problems will be available, however, you would care to outline what you wish to accomplish, circular or advertisement in your paper, the number and class of people you wish to reach, write Mr. Edgar in care of the Ontario Intelligencer, using a pen name for identification and he will reply in an early issue

The Changing Tide of Business

Fashions change in every phase of life and trade, and there never was a time when the change was as rapid as it is today.

Look back five, ten, fifteen, twenty years, and note the changes in the goods you or your fellow merchants carry now more lines have been added and the assortment increased in sales — still others are gradually passing out. Look ahead — you cannot see the changes that are to come, of course you can see but you cannot foretell what changes the past will be matched by even more drastic and rapid changes in the future. These changes in the future are foreshadowed in the present.

I bring this matter up at this time to impress on each of us that there is no use believing that conditions will come back to the same as they were. History repeats itself, and it always has, the future built upon the past will be better than the past.

Just now we are in the midst of a new era not with women year crinolines; but with the clean shaven face came more business for the straight blade razor, rapidly displacing the safety razor with guaranteed blade, the individual water blade used a few times and thrown away; the shaving mug, the shaving stick, shaving cream, shaving lotions; daily shaves created demand for shaving lotions, and today the men are spending more time and money to keep a bare faced world. With this change in the demand for shaving goods came the demand for more taste in ties, better fitting collars and shirts, shoes with appearance as well as wear, more attention to hair cut and so on.

The same story is pictured on the woman's side — the crinoline, the hoop skirt, the bustle, the hobble skirt, the skirt binding the armored corsets, the above the ankle boots have all gone by the boards and been replaced gradually by more attractive, more healthy and in many cases more practical wearing apparel.

One could go on with many parallels; trade, work, education, transportation, and finance. Constantly, but sufficient has been said to make the point I am driving at; namely that, conditions are not going to be the same in the future as in the past month, last year, or any time of the past and the merchant who will recognize this and look ahead to the future, studying the trends of the present will profit most.

Every class of trade is affected by these trends and will gain by looking ahead and studying the past.

Hardware Merchants	The desire to change things around the place — new paint — new wall paper — new brushes — new carpentry tools — new garden tools.
Druggists	New toiletries — beauty aids — the changing trend in medicinal demands.
Grocers	Package goods — trade mark lines — easy to handle — already half sold. The swing of the past generation was away from the category of the grocery store with belsel stoves, ventilated kitchens, the younger matrons are swinging back to things they joy in making; salads of many kinds, new ideas in home baking, new fruits and vegetables, and the desire to serve something new and better.
Dry Goods	Notwithstanding the huge trade in made up dresses, the paper pattern people report very active business, piece goods trade is increasing, bolts of wool and bunks of yarn are being turned into sweaters of many hues and styles, afghans and throwovers.

The merchant these days can well take a tip from the politicians who instead of trying to lead the parties seem which way they are going — and jumps in front.

The "Timely Merchandising" was announced for this week it was thought best to have this talk instead and next week "Timely Merchandising" will appear.

NEW JAIL GOVERNOR.

Sarnia, July 25.—Elwood Moit, years of Oil Springs, has been appointed governor of the Lambton county jail, the appointment to date from July 16, and the salary to be $1,045, with living quarters. Sheriff Albert J. Johnston, who made the announcement, said that Mrs. A. Dunn, matron in charge of the women's ward, will be retained in that capacity.

IRISH EYES

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

The cars began a plaintive honking and beseiging a policeman's whistle sounded in the corner under the roaring shadow of the elevated train. To the uninitiated the scene looked confusion, the crossing of lights and mingling of pedestrians would have meant nothing short of pandemonium, and the hostile glances that were thrown at night would have meant a sudden inability to move at all, as the cars stuck in the warm breath of the subway tunnel might have meant asphyxiation.

But Cecilia and Sheila moved through it all rapidly, without apparent mind-effort. It was their native air; it had environed them from babyhood. This was merely a winter evening, an uninteresting one; Wednesday night. Monday night would be worse, and with all the years each had lived through, the dear memories of Sunday's relaxation and enjoyment would be the most definitely anticipatory. Wednesday evening was nothing.

The subway smelled of heat, cement, steel, and people. Not clean bodies. A few passengers, sleepy and vituperative, straggled out of the cars when the doors opened as the girls and the home-going crowd pushed in. Cecilia and Sheila did not expect to be offered seats, and did not wish to be. Cecilia's home was an equally definite assurance whether one stood or sat, and anywhere but there they could have generously argued. "The boys are tired as we are."

As the express stain the changed to a bumping, grinding local Cecilia again, again stood swaying and rocking above the line of tabloids and evening papers, again the train rushed on shrieking, stopped abruptly, heaved, went off again.

"Hurt you sister?" a man whose face all but rested on her shoulder asked Cecilia, and Cecilia answered in a tone almost singing in its refinement, "Not at all."

Immediately, to cover her sudden flush, she spoke to Sheila.

"Going to tell your mother?"

Sheila as if their conversation in the office had been uninterrupted, answered tranquilly:

"Not right away. She'll kill me."

"I love your purse," Cecilia said. "I wish you could have seen the coat I could have gotten for twelve Twelve mind you! I'll bet it cost sixty. I had her put it aside for me. It was dark blue with a nice of rolled collar. It was simply grand," Sheila said.

She tell the missing. She hated the word grand, thus misused. The nun who had taught her English had always corrected that way of applying the word. Coals were not grand, movies were not swell, good times were never simply elegant.

She insisted. "It was certainly a lovely coat," she corrected the phrase, in her mind, instantly, she was wearing it, and a small dark-blue hat, and a navy-blue wrap to match. Could you get blue face veils? You certainly could.

She thought of meeting Peter when thus attired. Peter what? She did not know that last name. She could only think of him as Peter! But Peter was not an hour of her waking day when she did not remember the laughing face he had brought down from his great height, close to her own, his hard brown hand cupped her chin, his lips meeting hers for a dizzying, drowning eternity of summer and summer night, and the ceaseless rustle and swish of waves breaking on the sand.

She was still in the dream when Cecilia said suddenly, "Come on!" and it was time to jam their way out through the surge again, and ascend the packed stairs to the icy cold wind and darkness and blowing flurries of dirty snow on One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street. Both girls were tired from the office day, the assaulting cold wind, and the stupefying, poisonous air of the underground railway. They did not speak as they fought their way about the worst corner of all, and passed the crowded bright bakery and the fruit entrance, away from the racket of the elevated station, then when they passed the dark portals of the church, Cecilia made a faint inclination of her head toward them.

"Want to go in for a minute?" Sheila urged her on. The wind was bad now, and speaking an effort.

"I think Mamma'll probably make us come with her to the Mission!" she shouted, and Cecilia did not contest it. They went on for three more blocks, made a last turning, and entered the house that was home for both, and for thirty-eight other families.

Above the three chipped brownstone steps from the dirty street, where garbage cans, newspapers, tins of ashes and bundles of rubbish were all frozen into a permanent frieze on the sidewalk, were double doors framing cold, tiled foyer walls lined with bells and mail-boxes. A dimly lighted hallway beyond was completely unfurnished except for worn brown linoleum, and perhaps a dozen shabby hickory carriages chained to the iron stairway rails. There were a hundred children in the tenement a third of them not yet old enough to walk.

The air within the house was dank and chilly, yet some degrees warmer than that of the street. It was thick and fetid with the smells of unaired living quarters, defective plumbing, dust, human beings, and every sort of cooking and cleaning. Boiling cabbage, stove ashes, coal smoke, hot laundry suds broiling meat, frying onions united with a thousand other domestic scents to give it character. Only a breath of it blown through the web of odors was that of carbolic acid.

Sounds rang through the place; there was always a noise of the steady thumping of food and the slamming of doors, always the droning of phonographs and radio, always ways loud voices and the rattle of heavy pots and plates.

"It's good to get home!" Sheila said, mounting.

"Yes, I it?" Cecilia agreed. "You think you'll never make it, and then you get there and have dinner with us, Ceci."

"I can't Mamma's alone. And I think it's the anniversary of my aunt's death or something. Anyway, she was crying at breakfast."

Cecilia stopped on the second floor, Sheila mounted on to the fourth, as high as she could go.

Her mother, at about woman with graying hair, was cooking at the stove when Sheila opened the door. There was no hallway, no foyer; the main artery of the house opened straight upon this small kitchen fully furnished by the gas stove, the sink, the parlor table, and the table and chairs. Off the kitchen on one side was a tiny bathroom; on the other side a dark bedroom with a double cot-in and a single bed in it, served as merely a wide passage to the third and last room, where there were a couch, a rocking chair, ograph, tapestry cushions, Sunday-school prizes, and other evidence testifying to its character as the parlor of the suite.

Mary Carscadden now cooking dinner, had, in defiance of all theories of economy, budgeting, and the bearing of young, brought seven children into the world in the three dark rooms and had raised five of them. Now it had been done how she had weathered widowhood, the children's illnesses, poverty, cold indifference; from whence their daily and meals spiece per annum had come, she knew as little as the cat that had behing her woodbox, or the dirty-brown dog that came to her sooty fire-escape for crumbs every morning. Her anxieties had rarely gone ahead farther than the next meal, the next month's twenty-seven and a half dollars for rent.

During the war the rent had jumped to forty-two dollars, and Joe and Margret, mere children, had gone staunchly to work to help Mamma. But now the rent was lower than it had ever been, and Margret and the second son, Henry, were both married, and times were different. The bread, flushed face that was turned with a smile to welcome Sheila had no wrinkles in it, the teeth were still white.

"It's a terrible night, isn't it?" she said.

"Awful!" Sheila agreed. Her mother made the tut-tutting sound that was her contribution to every conversation, soon or late. Cheerful and brave, she yet found much in life to deplore. She turned back to the stove.

A black-haired young man was buried in a newspaper at the table. Sheila's brother Joe. She addressed him:

"Aren't you home early, Joe?"

Her mother caught her attention by waving hand, dignified silence. "Leave him be!" her lips said soundlessly. Sheila raised her dark eyebrows.

With no further word, but with an elaborately bewildered expression, she went into the middle room, aiding for her kid cast to the general congestion there, and returned to the kitchen, moving her tired forehead and her silky hair with ten flirsts pressed into. She sank into a chair at the table, Plates, pepper and salt, spoons and forks had been languidly distributed here and there; the mother immediately put on a large teapot. Butter appeared, and cream, thick and yellow, occupying two thirds of a crusted and streaked bottle.

"Come on, Joe!" Sheila said suddenly; "let's eat!"

Her sister Angela, seventeen and delicate, came limping in just before they began and smiled at Sheila as she slipped into her chair. Angela had been a "posthumous" child, according to her mother; she had been born in the very centre of the infantile paralysis panic, war clouds had gathered, gathered about her fatherless little downy head. But Angela 'radiated' sweetness, happiness, content.

"I've been over at Mrs. Burke's," she explained to Sheila.

"Expectin' company?" the mother added, with deep significance, and a warning glance at the absorbed Joe.

"Already?" Sheila exclaimed, pouring tea. "I thought it wasn't until next month, Poor thing—"

Joe put aside his paper, was said, dimly with them. His face was dark.

"Joe," Angela said, pushing his cup toward him, "why don't you try Ragan's again? They liked you, when you substituted there three days ago."

Ragan's shut down. I was 'round there this afternoon," Joe answered. Nobody ever spoke roughly to Angela, but he spoke surlily enough, without looking up.

Sheila sent a wide-eyed glance about the circle, nodded; Joe had been fired, eh? Joe—the incomparable one.

"What do you know?" she asked, "I was there this afternoon. Suddenly she didn't care. Let the skirs fall!

CHAPTER II

"What!" Joe exclaimed. Their mother looked up, with her ready tut-tutting noise;

"It's a dfrible winter; there's many worse off than ourselves," Mrs. Carscadden said vaguely now sliking.

"We're going to be bad enough

Joe told his mother, darkly, going on with his meal.

"Sheila, they never fired you!" Angela's grieved, sweet little voice said sadly.

"Indeed they did, them. He said I was bad breath."

Mrs. Carscadden was pouring tea in her turn. She looked at her daughter patiently.

"You'd be saucy to the boss," she observed pitifully.

"Oh, well, this is only Wednesday, day, I've been till Saturday," Sheila said lastly.

"There's hard times coming to this city that you don't know the meaning of," Joe observed, without looking up.

"But you'll get another job, Joe," Angela said blandly.

"Oh, sure I will!" he answered, glancing up with an effort. "But it may take a week," he added resentfully, "to have Sheila here act as if it was all a joke."

"Well, it is," Sheila assured him, good-naturedly.

She was relaxed and lazy, her senses dulled by the food, the warmth and leasure into a pleasant sort of torpor.

Joe looked at her like a star. There was a faint stain of color in her cheeks now, her eyes smouldered with smoky sapphire shadows, the mist of silky hair was disordered once more across her forehead.

"Sure, I'll get a job, all right," Joe grumbled, mollified. He was secretly proud of Sheila and even comforted, deep in his heart, by the spirit she showed. But he was the other side a dark bedroom with a double cot-in and a single bed in it served as merely a wide passage to the third and last room, where there were a couch, a rocking chair, ograph, tapestry cushions, Sunday-school prizes, and other evidence testifying to its character as the parlor of the suite.

"We're going to be bad enough

mothers voice said dreamily.

"I'm going down to see her, now."

"Going to tell her, Joe?"

"Pond," Joe said, brooding, "asked me would I take a steward's job on a fruit boat. A swell chance!

"Pretty a month to be rehired."

"But all your expenses, Joe!"

"I turned it down. Im going to get forty a week, or nothing," he said stubbornly.

"Eight pound a month would be big money, at home," Mrs. Carscadden mused.

"Mrs. Carscadden, me dear's said a quiet voice at the door. A belgh-bour had unceremoniously opened it. "Mrs. Burke"—she announced apologetically.

"Oh, Ceil help the poor soul—and did you see supper?" the other woman exclaimed, instantly rising. Immediately she was gone, and Joe had disappeared, too, leaping downstairs on his long legs, to see Ida Cecilia.

Sheila and Angela finished their tea peacefully, cleared the dishes, and then sat on lazily, chatting, laughing.

"Oh, wait until I show you my new purse, Angela!"

Sheila went to get it. She returned to the kitchen and put it into her sister's hands, and Angela turned the dark smooth beauty of the leather back and forth admiringly.

"Guess what I paid for it. Ten cents."

"You didn't!"

"I did. At the rummage sale at St. Luke's. I went in there at noon."

"Ten cents!"

"It has initials on it—they're inside. That's why it was cheap. But what do I care about that? It's let it cost a lot, once."

Angela opened the flap, looked at the linen lining.

"O. C. K." she read aloud, and then a number. "—and Eighty-eighth street.

THE SON OF TARZAN—No. 83

When speed was required of him Korak depended on no other muscles than his own. So after Tantor had again landed him across the river, the ape-man bade his bulky companion and took to the trees in a rapid race toward the place where, from the Swede's hint, he believed the white girl might be. Duak was falling when he came to the old fallmore palisade. Loosening the rope at his waist he tossed the noose over one of the sharpened posts.

A moment later his eyes were above the level of the obstacle taking in all within their range beyond. Close by there was no one in sight and Korak dropped lightly to the ground within the enclosure. Then he commenced his stealthy search of the village. Not even the wild Arab curs heard his passage, so silently he went. Suddenly he stopped short — scarcely believing his ears, as clear on the evening air came the strains of an old English song.

Bondholders Must Take Less Interest and Drop $2,000,000 Face Value

Private Capital Ready to Complete The Project

PROVINCE BUYS

Hydro to Take Title When 90 Per Cent of Bonds Deposited

Toronto, July 25—After prolonged negotiations, the Ontario government and representatives bondholders of the Abitibi Canyon power development have agreed upon a basis upon which the government is prepared to take over the Ontario Power Service Corporation Limited, and complete the power project under provincial ownership, it was announced Niby Hon. George S. Henry Sunday night.

Under the terms agreed upon, the province will give $18,000,000 of Hydro Commission Government-guaranteed bonds, at a sharply lower rate of interest, for the $20,000,000 of outstanding Ontario Power Service Corporation 5½ per cent. bonds.

Upon the condition that 90 per cent. of the Ontario Power Service Corporation bonds are deposited for exchange under the terms thus agreed upon, the government will take title to the property and proceed to complete the great development.

The Hydro bonds which will be exchanged for the O.P.S. bonds, will be dated October 1, 1932, the first interest date will be six months later, meaning that there will be interest to pay for eight months from now. The bonds will bear interest at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum for the first five years and 5 per cent. thereafter for ten years.

The Hydro Commission will hold the right to redeem the bonds on any interest date at par—so that should a period of cheaper money set in, the commission may use such cheaper money to retire the bonds.

The Hydro Commission, under this exchange arrangement, will take title to the property, transfer the property to the province, and manages the enterprise on behalf of the province.

While it is not stated in the Prime Minister's announcement, it is understood that the carrying charges, including the additional interest on $18,000,000 at 3½ per cent.) and including the extra costs of getting back title and completing the work, will amount to a total of about $840,000, or an offset to $1,160,000 reported that a contract has been arranged with international Nickel which will yield some $230,000 a year, so that until a greater market for power developed in the region, the province's obligation will amount to about $610,000 a year or perhaps slightly more.

Hugo Saving to Province.

In arranging for this exchange the province, therefore, saves the difference between the $610,000 and the $1,160,000 or $1,500,000 which it would have been called upon to pay under its guarantee of Hydro's contract with the Canyon concern, under present conditions, but the bondholders been allowed to find the private capital to complete the development and demand specific performance of the Hydro and the province.

Embarrassing Possibility.

Throughout the negotiations, the government, it is learned, was faced with just that possibility; bondholders, it became known, had secured the consent of supply houses and contractors to waive their liens on the property in respect of money owed by the subcontractors—and the government became sharply aware, it is said, that with these liens waived pending completion of the plant, the bondholders would require to raise only about a million dollars to finish the job and deliver the power contracted for.

Several overtures were made by private business to put up the money, but in each case the government presented a stonewall reply, once, upon the ground that it had "some say" as to who should control power development in the north.

Fall Into River Fatal.

Galt, July 25—The Grand River claimed its first victim of the year when Beverley, the 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mills of Paddington, lost her life.

The fatality occurred under most tragic circumstances. Mr. Mills with two of his daughters and a neighbor's girl, had gone out for a walk. They had crossed over the Cock Q.K. bridge, on which there is a pedestrians' walk, and strolled to the Canning Island, where on their way home over the bridge Mr. Mills held his little hand of two of the children, when Marjorie Gladys Mills leaned over a boy dropping stones in the river and in a flash disappeared.

The father raised her and inquired for her, and then heard a splash. The body dropped ninety feet into the river.

Farmer Fatally Hurt

Windsor, July 25—Charles Doyle, aged 24, a Maidstone farmer, was instantly killed in a traffic accident on the Maidstone-Sandwich South townline early Sunday.

Doyle, in whose car were Omer and Jerry McCann, brothers, and John Grant, all of Maidstone, were driving home from a dance in Riverside. According to Provincial Traffic Officer Allie Jackson of Essex, Doyle's car was sideswiped by another car driven by Norma Lachak, of 1159 Drouillard Road, East Windsor. Doyle's neck was broken as the car turned over in the ditch. The McCanns were cut and bruised. Others in the accident escaped without injury. Dr. S. F. Millen, Coroner, of Woodslee, has ordered an inquest.

FEAR MONARCHY TO BE RESTORED

German Press Makes Bitter Attacks on Gov't.

Berlin, July 25—(UP)—Sections of the German press bitterly attacked the government Sunday for charging a plan to restore the monarchy, but the cabinet's only reply was to suppress another "left wing" newspaper.

Gen. Gard Von Sundstedt, commander of the Berlin area under Defence Minister Gen. Kurt Von Schleicher banned the democratic Berliner Volkszeitung, published by Rudolf Mosse, for five days because it published an article called "Masters and Lackeys", intimating that the military is curtailing the rights of private citizens similar to the situation existing before the world war.

Meanwhile, the newspaper Tageblatt at Munich, published an article by Prof. Gerlich, editor of the Catholic Deutsch Review, for Gerade Weg, charging that General Von Schleicher is preparing to erect the most powerful figure in the cabinet, is seeking to overthrow the Republican government and re-establish the monarchy.

Gerlich declared the government arrange a plebiscite under Article 43 of the Republican constitution to vote on unseating President Paul Von Hindenburg and impeaching the supreme court at Leipzig which is called upon to decide whether the plebiscite vote was legal if setting up a dictatorship in Germany.

Charges Hindenburg.

Gerlich writes charged the aged president violated the constitution by signing the decree which made Chancellor Franz von Papen as Federal Commissioner or Dictator of Prussia.

Gerlich also declared he has proposed to open peace talks with Kaiser Wilhelm, now in exile at Doorn, Holland. He has conferred both the supreme court and President Hindenburg in their recent activities.

A. M. MELLON MAY RESIGN

Believes Younger Man Should Have Post is Report

London, July 25—(AP)— The Daily Herald said today Andrew M. Mellon, United States ambassador to Great Britain, "is expected to resign" when he arrives in Washington on his present trip to the United States. It is believed he will tell President Hoover the coming negotiations on war debts should be in the hands of a younger man than he," the Herald added.

The London newspapers have been making speculating of a mystery of the Ambassador's trip home since he left there a week ago today, declaring he was going to the United States for a holiday taking advantage of a dull period in embassy work.

He, himself said the trip had no political significance Today, however, his leaving was coupled with the departure of the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, from Washington and other newspapers besides the Herald printed despatches from New York and Washington speculating on the coincidence.

SAYS STATES WOULD GAIN

Senator Borah Urges Debts Revision by U. S.

Washington, July 23—An international conference dealing with questions involving the world's economic recovery, including revision or cancellation of the war debts, was urged by Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the United States Foreign Relations Committee, in an address here Saturday night.

He proposed the conference as a follow-up to the Lausanne reparations agreement, which, he said, was more of a "harbinger of peace and the hope of humanity" than the Versailles peace treaty.

"The most important step taken since the war looking toward restoration of confidence in political and business affairs," was how he described the Lausanne agreement, brought about by the indomitable spirit of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain.

If the policies initiated at Lausanne were carried forward, he proceeded, "there will come a time when it will be distinctly to the interest of the people of the United States" to consider the question of war debts.

Revision of the debts, however, should not be predicated on the reparations agreement alone, he said. They were just debts, he added.

Senator Borah said he believed cancellation of the debts in connection with the Lausanne plan in progress including the settlement of other war problems, would have the effect of bringing economic benefits to people of all countries.

EXCHANGE TO BE SUSPENDED

Federal Commission Orders 60-day Cessation of Operations

New York, July 25—The suspension of trading on the Exchange for 60 days at one of the most active periods for grain transactions in the history of the market, is the transfer of the major part of the business to the Winnipeg Exchange, in the opinion of grain dealers in New York. Outside of Chicago, Winnipeg is the largest open market for grain operations on the continent, and the possible permanent closing of trading down of the big American grain exchange was freely talked of today.

In addition, the Kansas City, Minneapolis and New York grain markets are likely to acquire part of the business usually handled in the "pit" at Chicago despite the attraction of the big Canadian centre for speculators, in other words, the grain trade is expected to be divided in the event of official interference, with which it is out of sympathy.

Handled Only Winnipeg Business

The Winnipeg Produce Exchange, which formerly dealt in American wheat and other grains, for recent years has handled only business which has come to it from Winnipeg, according to Herbert L. Bodman, former president of the exchange.

HONORS MEMORY OF LATE CANON BRAIN

Toronto, July 25—In the church for which he labored more than a quarter of a century, the late Canon W. J. Brain, who died one year ago, was remembered in a memorial service at St. Aidan's and All Angels' Anglican Church yesterday morning.

When Canon Brain came to the St. Clair-Wychwood district, there were few homes in the community and little money for church building. Rev. C. E. Clarke, present rector, told the congregation. Services were held in homes, then in a barn, until sufficient funds were found to build the nave of the present church building. In the midst of the success of his work Canon Brain died one year ago.

"I think his most earnest desire was that this building might be a temple not only where men might preach eloquent sermons but that it should be a house of God, where you, and generations yet to come, would come in to have a vision of God and in the power of that vision pass out into life around you, nourished in heart and made

There was no change yesterday in the condition of Mr. Justice Hodgins, inquirers were told, but his condition was still considered grave. He, too, has been ill at his home for some time.

POSTAL BLOCKADE WIDENS RIFT IN ORIENT

British and Indian Economic Objects Clarifying

Lowering of Tariff Rates Revision of Customs Act Urged by Industrialists

Under Present Act British Exporter Left in Uncertainty

TARIFF ON MEATS

Indian Proposals Take Shape at Imperial Conference

(BY GEORGE HAMBLETON)
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Ont., July 26—British and Indian proposals for the Empire Conference are taking shape, so far as the proposals affect Canada, what British industrialists are particularly urging is:

(1) Lowering of tariff rates on British cottons, woollens, chemicals, machinery, leather, iron and steel, electrical supplies.

(2) Revision of the Canadian Customs Act in such a manner as to limit the power of customs officials to fix arbitrary customs valuations.

Arbitrary Valuation

Among British industrialists here the view is taken that the British preferential rates in the Canadian tariff schedules does not really represent the full height of the tariff wall. The depreciated currency duty, the arbitrary valuation and in some cases the sampling duty have to be added. Their complaint against the arbitrary valuation is that, under it, the British exporter is left in uncertainty what valuation will be placed on his goods for import purposes and that this uncertainty in itself discourages trade.

They claim that a relatively higher tariff would be better than uncertainty.

No Split Over Meats

On the other side of the balance sheet, it is evident that the tariff on fresh meats—urged by Australia and South Africa—is likely to cause some keen searching of heart among the British delegation. British headquarters have, however, again dismiss rumors of split in the British ranks—rumors echoed back from London.

India and Preference

India's position is more complicated than that of the Dominions. For financial reasons she has not fully accepted the principle of Empire preference. She has preferential rates on only a few items. And she has the added handicap of being in a state of constitutional transition. It is quite likely that under the proposed scheme of a federated India, income tax will be transferred from the central administration to that of the provinces. This would leave customs duties as almost the sole source of revenue for the federal government, and, it is asserted, make extensive increases in the preferential list increasingly difficult.

Irish Problems

Ottawa, July 26 — Free State Delegates to the Imperial Conference declared themselves unable today to interpret the latest developments in the Irish situation, which was the departure for London late last night of Hugo Flynn, Parliamentary Secretary to the Free State Minister of Finance. Whether Flynn resigned a reopening of negotiations in the vexed relations between the countries could not be hazarded. The delegates said they thought Mr. Flynn had not gone to London "for his health."

In Touch By Telephone

Sean T. O'Kelly, leader of the Free State Group here, is in almost daily contact by trans-Atlantic telephone with President De Valera and keeps in touch with developments on the other side of the ocean.

Today the Free Staters were again distributed among the various committees of the Conference.

ROY ELECTED MAYOR

Chelmsford, Ont., July 26—Louis Roy, a former councillor, was elected mayor of Chelmsford, by a majority of 31 over Charles Lord, in the by-election necessitated by the resignation of Mayor J. A. Desjardins and councillors Fellow Gervais, Pierre Larocque and Louis Roy.

BOSSY JUMPS INTO LAP OF TRUCK DRIVER

Lindsay, Ont., July 26.—Wilson Heaslip, driver of a gravel truck near Janetville, was quite surprised when a cow jumped right into the cab of his truck, and took her stand beside him. The cow, terrified after being chased by a dog, sought refuge blindly with the result that she almost landed on Mr. Heaslip's lap in jumping into the open cab. The jar when the cow landed broke off one of her own horns, did a little damage to the truck and injured Mr. Heaslip's shoulder. It is not anticipated, however, that all the excitement made him lose control of his truck for an instant.

THINK WORLD ON 'WAY BACK'

Toronto Brokers Point to Rise in Oils as Indicator

Toronto, July 26 (By The Canadian Press)—Definite upward price trends on the Toronto and other Canadian Stock Exchange since the Imperial Conference opened at Ottawa are seen as the start of the "road back." In the past two weeks a steady upward trend has led brokers to assume a more optimistic attitude.

Just two weeks ago, Imperial Oil sold at 8 1-8. It opened on the local exchange today at 10. International Nickel is 1 1-8 higher than it was two weeks ago. Hollinger Consolidated has gained 7 1-8 to 8 7-8 points in the declined period. C.P.R. has shown an even more striking gain, being at 4 1-4 points higher today.

Taking the local markets as a whole, the price index of 25 representative issues on Monday was 36.6 as compared with the June index of 37.3.

The Standard Stock and Mining Exchange is showing similar gains. The high point for the year was 60.4 on Jan. 14. Today the index is at 43.8. This compares with the low for the year of 41.7 on May 31.

MELLON NOT RESIGNING

Arriving at New York From England, Issues Denial

New York, July 26—Andrew W. Mellon, returning today on the liner Majestic, denied reports that he intended to resign as Ambassador to Great Britain.

"That's news to me—fabulousmmers news, there is no foundation for the story," he was not certain whether he would go directly to Pittsburgh or to Washington.

He declined to comment on reason for his trip home, saying only: "There was a bill over there for the time, and I took davantage of it."

He refused to discuss debts or reparations, or anything official.

WASHINGTON SILENT UPON BORAH'S PLAN

Senator Would Trade Debt for Disarmament Pact

MELLON AND PARLEY

Debt Revision by Time of Debt Payment in December

Washington, July 26—Predictions that the world conference already planned might meet some of United States Senator William E. Borah's ideas, emerged today from discussion of his plans for a roundtable conference of nations.

At the same time Borah expressed a hope that United States might take the initiative, having as yet received no formal invitation to join the meeting sponsored by the League of Nations.

No Official News

The government officially was silent, but in diverse quarters there were admissions that European nations will support a conference when the next debt payments become due on December 15.

No intimation as yet had come from the state department that the United States would be willing to talk about debts and tariffs at the proposed conference, but the author of the Lausanne meeting. When Sir Ricold Lindsay, British ambassador, talked over the new meeting plan with Borah, the latter told the United States would discuss many things—but not war debts and tariffs.

Debts vs. Arms

The Idaho senator would trade war debts for disarmament and reparational cancellation. Debts, also regardless of administration silence, was considered at the capital as at least an overture toward conferring with debt payers next December.

Washington likewise has heard the hints that Premier Herriot and Melon, ambassador to Great Britain, with plans for an economic conference. There is no doubt but that he will tell his chiefs what he thinks will happen in December, possibly mentioning the advisability of discussing things with Europe at that time.

IS GORGULOFF ONE OF CHEKA?

Paris, July 26—Paul Gorguloff, on trial for the assassination of President Paul Doumer, burst into sobs today as Ivan Lazareff, a Russian refugee, took the witness stand and called him a member of the Russian Cheka, or secret police.

Lazareff fell into the hands of the Cheka once, he testified, and Gorguloff was one of his captors. They tortured him, twisting his arms and beating him, burning his feet and bending back his fingers until they broke. He lifted his mutilated hands and the prosecution led him over to the jury box where he showed the swollen fingers to the jury.

Vehement Denials

Several times Gorguloff broke in to shout that he never had seen Lazareff in his life.

"You lie!" he exclaimed. "You are in the pay of the Cheka!"

His attorney hauled the man back into his chair and held him there. Gorguloff pitched his head in his arms and his shoulders rocked with sobs.

Engineers Working Overtime to Detriment of Firemen is Alleged

Cleveland, July 26. — David B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, today charged engineers in many cases were working overtime at the expense of firemen and called for a congressional investigation.

Robertson, who as president of the Railroad Labor Executives' Association, is spokesman for 21 railway labor organizations.

He also urged speedy action on a bill to shorten the railway working day to six hours and to limit the amount of work an individual employee is permitted to perform.

Robertson, engrossed in organizing a labor fight on the proposed merger of eastern railroad into four systems, explained that railroad labor is opposed to the merger because "it will throw thousands of working men on the streets to be fed by the public or given other means of employment."

Plane Burns After Crash Sequel to Air Collision

Flight Lieutenant H. W. Hewson Badly Injured in Crash— Flying Officer Gobeil Escapes Injury in Landing at Airport

While instructional formation flying was in progress at Trenton Air Station, Flight Lieutenant H. W. Hewson, Trenton, was critically injured and rushed to Belleville General Hospital in the camp ambulance, while Officer F. M. Gobeil, of Ottawa, made a safe parachute jump and escaped injury, when the planes which they were piloting crashed in mid-air above the air station about ten o'clock today. The cause of the collision has not been determined, but will be investigated by a board of enquiry which will convene in the near future. Both planes were badly damaged, the plane piloted by Flight Lieutenant H. W. Hewson breaking into flames and being destroyed after crashing. The pilot was flying Siskins 3 AA, which have lately been added to the complement at the Air Station. Dr. G. H. Stobie is the physician attending the injured man. Immediately after the accident all planes were brought to earth and put away in the hangars.

Serious Injuries

On being brought to the Belleville General Hospital Lieutenant Hewson was found to be suffering from a compound fracture of the right leg, a compound fracture of the right arm and elbow, a compound fracture of the left knee, and a severe scalp and facial injuries, including the nose and right eye, and endangering the sight of that eye. There is a good possibility that he will recover," said Dr. Stobie, though his condition is critical.

ARMS CUT IS GENERAL VIEW

Henderson Says He is Firmly Convinced by Parley

London, July 26—The cause of disarmament is bound to triumph, Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson and British Laborite leader who presided at the Geneva arms conference said when he returned to London.

Defending actions of the conference and declaring the big powers must take the lead in cutting down the world's war machines, Mr. Henderson said:

"The only question is whether disarmament will triumph now or whether the world must have another long period of waiting with all the misery and suffering that waiting must involve.

"But in the end, I am convinced the cause of disarmament is bound to triumph."

The crowd cheered the former Foreign Secretary, who was with Sir Herbert Samuel, the Home Secretary, returning from the Lausanne and in Switzerland. Sir John Simon, the Foreign Secretary, returned today by airplane from Geneva, but Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald cancelled his scheduled flight from Lausanne, where he has been resting for several days, to confer with the Cabinet on Thursday. It was said he felt the effects of a cold.

Among the Cabinet's defense of the arms conference held the centre of interest, in view of the bitter criticism of the "weak" resolution adopting the opposition of Soviet Russia and Germany, which laid the basis for future negotiations on disarmament.

"It was wrong to say the resolution adopted by the conference contained nothing of value," Mr. Henderson said, contending that both Sir John Simon and the French premier, Edouard Herriot interpreted the air clauses in more definite declaration that air bombardment should be abolished.

60 Lost as Cadet Boat Keels Over

Kiel, Germany, July 26 —The German naval training ship Niobe sank today in a hurricane off Fehmarn Belt Lighthouse. Forty were saved and other naval craft went to the rescue.

When she left port she carried a crew of 100 cadets and junior cadets.

Kiel, Germany July 26 — Struck by a heavy storm in the Baltic Sea today, the German naval training ship Niobe, a three-masted sailing vessel, went to the bottom.

Forty of the 100 cadets and junior cadets aboard her were saved. Sixty were missing and naval craft were searching the waters in which she sank.

It was about 2.30 p.m. when she keeled over in the storm and sank. Her commander Therese Russ, which was not far off picked up 40 of her survivors.

Among the rescued was Captain Ruhfus, the master of the Niobe.

A sudden gale struck the vessel only a few minutes after the great seaplane Do-X, flying from Travemuende to Kiel had passed over, and dipping low had signalled a greeting.

The storm broke on her side and sank in three or four minutes. The Do-X came down safely after a stormy flight.

REPEAL AMENDMENT OVERSHADOWS ALL?

New York, July 26—Dr Nicholas Murray Butler, Columbia leader returned to the United States today. He said of the campaign for the operating the presidency, "it will be quite futile for any candidate to indulge hope of dominating and element of the population to attempt to subordinate the repeal of the 18th amendment to the solution of the economic problems which press upon us all," he said in a statement.

LABRADOR NOT LIKELY SOLD

Price Mentioned of 110 Million is Unofficial Says Premier

MONTREAL, July 26.—The sum of $110,000,000 mentioned a few years ago as the price at which Labrador when the then Newfoundland Government was endeavoring to negotiate the sale of this territory to Canada, is entirely unofficial, according to Hon. P. C. Alderdice, premier of British Newfoundland dominion, when he was interviewed by The Gazette's staff reporter in Montreal on the way to the Imperial Conference in Ottawa last evening.

Mr. Alderdice left the impression that if the question of sale is once more re-opened at Ottawa, he is prepared to name a price much lower.

The plump, whitehaired Premier, who has before now headed the Newfoundland Government, was enthusiastic in his endorsation of all that has already been done at the Ottawa Conference from the achievement of Empire reciprocity to trade matters.

Reciprocity Needed

"We need reciprocity," he said, "it is the keynote of the conference.

He is a far different figure from Sir Richard Squires, with whose personality and political methods Montreal bankers became familiar last year when he tried in vain to float a loan in this city for the purpose of which he was then Premier.

FLOODS DRIVE OUT FARMERS

Homesteaders May Ask Cruiser Sento Their Relief

Buenos Aires, July 26—Homesteaders along the Coubuil River in Patagonia, most of them British subjects, are fleeing their homes because of floods caused by torrential rains which are destroying houses and irrigation systems.

It was reported today they might ask Britain to send a cruiser to the Argentine coast to aid the unforthcoming from Argentina. Railroad washouts have separated Colonel Valdez Region where levees are being washed away from the remained. Many persons have taken refuge in the hills. . .

Fat Young Duck Comes to Market, Peers Through Hole and Unties Sack

Kitchener, Ont., July 26—(By The Canadian Press)—The fat young duck came to market. Through a hole in the bag he peered out in seeming fascination. It was rather dull in that bag. With a few well directed pecks he slit over through the twine with which his bag was tied. Then he hied him hence. He dodged flying tackles nonchalantly and pecked at reserve supplies of fruit as dozens tried to catch him. But when he stopped to chat with a few rabbits which were imprisoned in a hut, he got into trouble. Two strong hands reached down and clasped him firmly. Then back into the bag he went. But enroute he audibly expressed his disapproval.

Farmers Want Single Men on Land But Claim Single Men Dodging Jobs

Single men about the city still fight shy of farm jobs, according to farmers in the district who are attempting to procure men for the work but are unable to obtain single men whom they prefer at the office of the government employment agency there are given preference with applications waiting to be filled. But even if these jobs have been vacant for some time there seems little likelihood of them being filled when the busy week starts. In the meantime many young men have left the city to go west and work in the harvest fields. Natural reluctance of farmers to hire married men is accounted for by the fact that they fear the man they hire will turn up with his wife and children, or expect more money than the fifteen dollars a month they offer to pay.

Bread Wider Between Japan and China, Postal Blockade Ties up North

800 Chinese Post Offices Closed For Past 24 Hours

CUSTOMS TIE-UP

Manchukuo Completely Isolated From Mail Service

Shanghai, July 26—A Chinese postal blockade against Manchukuo tied up postal service today and appeared to have widened the breach between Japan and China over the Northern Area.

The National Government postal authorities announced that, in accordance with their plan the blockade all postal communication with Manchukuo 800 Chinese government post offices throughout the territory have been closed for the last 24 hours.

Customs Blockade

As far as China is concerned Manchukuo is completely isolated from mail service.

In addition to the postal blockade Chinese customs authorities were considering declaring a customs blockade against Manchukuo, imposing special taxes on all merchandise entering or leaving there by way of China.

Japanese officials here were reticent about these developments but it was indicated Tokyo views them most seriously.

Meanwhile government officials in Manchukuo were rushing out countrymen to prepare for great resistance against the Japanese influence in Manchuria.

PLANE GOING ON SEA TOUR

Twenty Six Passengers For Voyage Across Atlantic

Minneapolis, July 26—Plans for a mid-August flight across the Atlantic from Minneapolis via Montreal, Greenland and Iceland, to Bergen Norway, have been announced by L. B. Clark, Minneapolis business man who said Bernt Balchen, has been engaged as chief pilot.

Twenty passengers, a crew of six, in addition to mail, supplies and fuel will be carried, Clark said, on a flying boat he is now being constructed and will be delivered here about August 1, he said.

Mr. Clark is secretary of a syndicate, Aerial World Tours, Inc., organized to finance the flight. He said the chief consideration will be safety and a test of the feasibility of establishing an air mail line operating on regular schedules over the northerly route. He said arrangements have been completed for underwriting the venture with an insurance company.

Clark is the holder of a trans-Atlantic flight will be covered by a policy.

"Our entire plane have been laid with a view towards safety in safe and sane flight," Mr. Clark said. "The route we propose to follow will stops at Montreal, Montreal, St. John's, Newfoundland, the island of Shetland, Prestwick, Scotland, Bergen and Oslo, Norway. The longest water jump will be 700 miles from Iceland to Bergen. This will be well within the safety limit of 1,200 miles."

If conditions permit, Mr. Clark said the flight will continue through Sweden, and Finland and Russia, Germany and England.

Tentatively, Ingar Sikrsrud, head of the plane building the boat, has been given a place in the passenger list.

Two Governments have authorized the issuance of special stamps for mail to be carried, he said. The government of Newfoundland has authorized the issuance of special stamps while the French insular possessions, south of Newfoundland of which the largest is St. Pierre is the largest will issue 3,000 special stamps, Mr. Clark said.

RUMOR MAN KILLED IS UNFOUNDED

Rumours circulated about the city that an unidentified transient had been struck by a passenger train at the Canadian crossing of the Canadian National Railway, at noon today, were unfounded. A broken air hose on No. 14, eastbound passenger train, arriving Belleville at eleven-forty, caused a few moments waiting on the tracks near that location. This led to a rumour being circulated that a man had been run over and killed, with subsequent denial by railway officials.

Many automobile accidents are caused by imperfect vision of drivers!
No doubt of it!
It is known that only half the population see as they should without help!
Yes, so that many thousands are driving cars who should not do so without an improvement in their vision.
Laws should be framed to cover this matter!
Yes, but without laws a thoughtful driver will not remain in doubt as to his vision.

YOUTHS ARE FOUND GUILTY

"I am convinced that these boys did not intend to rob anyone, but they did assault those people and were guilty of minding other people's business," said Magistrate Millsl after hearing the evidence in the local police court this morning when Andrew Gray, Jr., Robert Elvins and George Jenkinson all of Thurlow were found guilty of the charge as result and given a suspended sentence of six months each.

The three youths appeared in the police court being charged, that they did, with intent to rob, assault one William Van Slyke of Brighton some three weeks ago. All three boys pleaded not guilty to the charge and Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan called for the Slyke as first witness for the Crown. The witness explained, that he had taken a local young lady for a car drive and had driven up a side road north of Belleville. Later, while he was sitting in the car with the young lady there came a car and approached the car and after pulling him out, had demanded either money or his lady friend. As he had no cash, he swore, that the accused three boys, who he had previously identified, had search-ed him and his car taking his cigarettes and the keys of the car. He admitted, however, that Gray had returned the keys to the young lady accompanying him. He also admitted, that Gray had seemed to know the young lady personally. The young lady was next called and she corroborated the statements of the previous witness but added, that she had not been afraid at any time during the entire transaction.

Heard Wombat Shout

Gray was the first witness called by J. D. O'Flynn, counsel for the defence. He testified that in company with Elvins and Jenkinson he had gone for a walk on a nearby concession road after going swimming on the night in question. Gray testified, that upon approaching the car they had heard a feminine voice shout "Help" on several occasions. He also testified, that he had spoken with the lady and her companion in the car and later when they were aware of the fact that the boys were nearby the driver of the car had got out. It was at this time, that Jenkinson had taken the keys of the car, Jenkinson, in his testimony, said that he thought the girl was also smoking and that he took the keys of the car so that the driver (Van Slyke) could not start the car and run away. All three boys denied that they had demanded either money or anything else from the young man and his companion. They corroborated all statements made by Gray and Jenkinson and said that he was sure he had smelt liquor on the breath of Van Slyke.

Provincial Constable Kelly, who investigated the case and had prepared the charges against the boys, was next called to the witness stand. The constable, like Crown Attorney had admitted at the time of the trial that he had visited the car and its occupants. He also stated, that he had told him that when they approached the car, they had done so for fun. Elvins and Jenkinson refused to make a statement.

Case Summed Up

After hearing the evidence His Worship Magistrate Mills took opportunity to sum up the case. Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, pointed out that accosting motor car parties was becoming altogether too prevalent in and about Belleville. While Mr. O'Flynn pointed out to His Worship, that the boys had merely gone to the car after hearing shouts from the young lady as though she was in need of assistance. His Worship pointed out, that the boys had not used good judgment if these were their thoughts as they did not attempt to see the car after seeing that the young lady was not in need of help. His Worship was of the opinion, that the boys had not intended to rob Van Slyke but they had assaulted him when they interfered with him by taking him out of his car. A suspended sentence of six months was handed out in each case, while the accused boys were called upon to pay the costs of the court proceedings, amounting to $17.50 each.

B. C. Donnan, local Crown Attorney appeared for the Crown while J. D. O'Flynn appeared for the three accused boys.

SIDEWALK NOT FOR BICYCLES

Riding of bicycles on sidewalks by a number of youths has once more been drawn to the attention of the police. While most policemen are reluctant to arrest the boys who are in the habit of using the residential streets for their roadway, owing to the fact that fines which will be levied against them will come from the pockets of the hard-working parents, nevertheless they are determined to stop the practice before some pedestrian is hurt.

TAX MONEY IS POURING IN

Too Early For Definite Statement But Outlook Good

Tax collections are proceeding at the city hall despite the business depression, with results that do not compare too unfavorably with those of other years.

"The amount so far collected has been very heavy," declared Mr. H. B. Stock, treasurer, when questioned, but added that complete returns still remained to be made before any definite statement could be given.

As far as can be learned there are no doleful complaints being made by citizens who have been finding to the city hall to pay their necessary tax, but many of them admit that it has been regular and consistent saving for months to make up the required amount.

Inside the offices of the city great activity is apparent as the money is being taken in and receipts given. To others many precious minutes must be given to patiently explaining little intricate questions which bother the householders. Then there are those who walk in, present their bills, and then have the exact amount required to pay over. Some of the customers at the wicket of the city collector are bound to make a solemn mix of the system of handing over their tax payments for another year.

NOTED MUSICIAN WILL VISIT CITY

The visit of Robert Harkness, the well-known Australian pianist and musician, who is scheduled to give a recital in the Cospel Alliance Tabernacle on Thursday, July 28th, is arousing great interest. His program dates up many unusual musical features of unique interest that a crowded house is expected. The following description of his work comes from the Sunday School Times.

A contributor to that magazine has written this description of his brilliant work as an accompanist and pianist.

"A hymn is announced, and the number has scarcely left the song-leader's lips, when the slim, black-garbed figure at the grand piano springs into action. Springs is the word suitable to the occasion. Every fibre of the accompanist's being seems suddenly to be galvanized into energetic and expressive action. From then on, forth from the very strings of the magnificent instrument a volume of sound such as one can scarcely believe possible to be produced by one pair of musical hands. And what music it is.

"Every verse is played differently, with a variation in tempo and weight of harmonies is never exaggerated never overdone, but always original and interpretative of the singers' mood and of the carrying sense of the message.

"While the soloist pursues the even course of his song accompanied by octave above will ring out from the piano in sonorous melody, interrupted from time to time with delicious cadences and thrills like a thrush's song—never out of harmony never clashing with the melody of the soloist—running absolutely counter to it. We gasped with the very audacity of it."

LUCKY BIRDS

By Kathrn Bemis Wilson

The only ten dollar bill that George Swope had on anything about rested heavily, one might say boldly, in his waistcoat pocket —causing him to slump dejectedly on a Central Park bench, his weary brown eyes staring straight ahead, seeing nothing. That is, nothing but linear distance. His fixed gaze ignored the fresh green of shrubs, grass and yellow of tulips; the sassy daffodils, proud hyacinths, modest violets of the morning sunshine on grand old trees.

Even when a pretty girl took a seat nearby him, the sullen George was unmoved. Even when she glanced curiously at the expensive, badly wrinkled suit he wore, and —a motionless suit seemingly unrelated to any male inhabitant.

What she saw startled her. Fine black hair brushed carelessly back from a high forehead, long dark lashes a girl might envy, and a profile such as a sculptor might needed a share. Nothing less than and he spoiled everything when though this morning he badly need a shave. Nothing less than a Fifth Avenue tailor had built his suit and none other than a talented barber had trimmed that sadless head. Strictly black caviar, pumpernickel, artichokes, and strawberry torte were so society to him! But now, looked positively hungry.

A little brown suede purse suddenly hit George Swope's foot. "Oh—I'm so sorry!" the girl on the bench exclaimed.

George Swope glanced with annoyance at the pretty petite young woman sitting beside him. Instinctively he, too, picked up the purse and handed it to her.

"Awkward of me, wasn't it?" Laughing blue eyes held his direct gaze.

"You could never be that," he returned gallantly. But no smile lit his lean face.

"Please don't think me rude—or impudent," she said impulsively, "but is there something wrong? Can so beautiful a morning—and you could be happy? But what am I saying. I hope you don't think me—"

"You're most kind—and I thank you," he responded grimly. "I have let out of an advertising job six months ago and have been unable to locate anything else. Slimer in or out of my line. Now it seems—scarcely worth while."

"If you will pardon my saying so—that's ridiculous! See that pink fat robin over there? He's working fast to make a summer home. Oaks, dogs, enemy birds and the elements will all try to oust him before the fledglings are ready for flight em."

George Swope smiled ironically. "You forgot—a bird can pick up food from the trees, five worms. A man—"

An unlicensed chauffeur had stopped a big car on the drive. The girl jumped up. "I must go now—but it's going to rain and tomorrow at eleven, we'll go on the roof garden and dine. But I'll be a way to help."

In spite of himself, the girl interested him. He found himself walking across the grassy with her, offering her his card. "Thanks, Miss Meeting a person like you—Miss—"

"Mary Osburn," she supplied, with the dimple in her cheek deepening. "Usually I'm not so—so simple to meet a man I hope you'll realize that I only—that is I was—"

"Yes, of course. A heart of gold. Tomorrow then, at eleven. I'll be there."

As he assisted her into the car, Queer! Thirty minutes before he had wandered into the park determined to end it all and now a smile of a girl had altered his plans. After all, a fellow unknown void was nothing to leap into uncertain immortality.

The following morning found George Swope sitting on a park bench in the Fifth Avenue apartment air. Now he even respected himself in his long-pressed suit, and well shaved and meticulously shaven face. He looked at his glance confidently at every passerby.

At eleven fifteen, he smiled ironically at his own credulity and tardiness was woman's prerogative. At eleven-thirty, he looked apprehensively, at eleven-forty-five, he was angry. At twelve o'clock, any park policeman would have killed him with a glance.

Fool that he had been, recognizing a desirable girl to keep an appointment with a man unemployed! Hadn't he realized for some time his luck was at low ebb? Something was bone-dry in this cold world? He laughed hollowly. Why! A graduate of two universities, a man who had been considered virtuous eligible by many fond aspiring mammas would—in a matter of hours—be considering begging a breadline.

"Now—I couldn't, that's all! Finally and irrevocably he couldn't. He would drive—somewhere—down. To oblivion!

Mechanically, he got to his feet, walked with swift determined stride along the same green path where yesterday, but —all was changed.

A few minutes later, he was in the tower of a skyscraper. He drew in his breath sharply as he gazed spellbound at the vast panorama spread out before him—tall buildings like needles in the sky—the human ants crawling about the city streets—the sparkle of Hudson River—broad reaches of Atlantic Ocean—the Jersey side and more human ants! He wondered savagely how many of them were fighting to keep even with the world, wondered how many would soon give up in despair.

Cool breezes trickled through his fine black hair and his hazel eyes cleared as he peered anxiously toward Central Park—a veritable forest of green—somewhere that robin was fighting to keep his place in the scheme of things. A robin—fighting!

Sudden panic seized George Swope. He whirled about to the hall. Hastily he rushed to the elevator. He must find her—see her once more.

"At any rate, I'm not as late as you are," she greeted as he came breathlessly up to the park bench. "Shall we start—and—and robin—I've found you again!" he ejaculated.

"Yes", she continued rapidly, "and how's good news; Uncle Alex needs an advertising expert in his company at once, and we're to go right down to see him—"

He gently took her arm. "Please sit down a moment," he begged. "I've something—I've saw yesterday—"

"Yes" she exclaimed, then face flushed with eagerness. "Do tell! There are two of them now!"

"Two is a nice number," he responded earnestly as his hand touched hers.

Old Mr. Toad's He-art Almost Stops

Longiegs was standing motionless on one foot

Then Mr. Toad jumped just as he struck. He didn't waste any more time down in the turnd and sliided off along the shore to try his luck elsewhere. As for Old Mr. Toad, he filled that music bag of his and went on his way. And the note of yearning had given way to a note of pure joy, for there, just putting her head out of water before him, was Mrs. Toad.

MR. ORDINARY DRIVER

Ninety-eight per cent of the drivers figuring in accidents in Ontario in the month of June are described as normal, that is, not intoxicated and not extremely fatigued. In the month according to the month's report there were twelve drunken drivers and eight who were driving while extremely weary.

The ordinary driver therefore must recognize that he is the one who has to look to himself. The sober driver and the average type is the man who had ninety-eight per cent of the crashes. Sobriety without caution and care is no safeguard against accident.

In June 1931 not one woman driver figured in a fatal accident but in June 1932, two women drivers died.

Only four per cent of the accidents were stated to have been in the case of drivers with less than a year's experience. Here again is nothing to think over. It was not the inexperienced driver who piled up the deaths and losses.

There was not a United States driver figured in a fatality last month. All drivers so figuring were residents of this province.

While the total of accidents is down greatly yet the total of drivers figuring therein seems very large, 1062.

There is a hint for tourists in the report—Do not attempt too much on your itinerary, that is, do not go beyond the physical endurance of the driver, and do not attempt so much that the car will have to be greatly accelerated to accomplish the objective of distance.

Five thousand four hundred and thirty-five drivers have figured in accidents this year to date.

HITCH-HIKER

When you feel like being very witty and sarcastic be careful, it may be the moment of your fall. The wrong or the right man may take your head off. A hitch-hiker at Hamilton felt the glow of retort as he told a driver off who had refused the appeal of his thumb-wobbling. This driver, a traffic cop on his hind, drove around the block and saw his eloquent friend just hopping into a car he had stopped with all four wheels on the pavement. There was a trek to the police court and the man was given a warning and sent out of the city.

A pair of morals ought to be extracted from this—

Don't be sarcastic when you are a beggar.

PROF. FESSENDEN

Prof. Fessenden, who died the other day was a man of Hamiltonian. Like all great inventors he was prolific, he had about three hundred patents to his credit these concerning the whole range of chemistry to mechanical engineering. Like great men his offering to mankind was not a single brilliant invention, but a whole host of them. And is greatness — it is not a mere flash in the pan and then darkness and extinction but whole-life service and a solid contribution.

As far ago as 1903 Fessenden succeeded in telephoning through the ether for a mile though broadcasting was not born until the year 1920.

AT BLARNEY CASTLE

James Blake went to Blarney Castle with an original idea of kissing the Blarney Stone. He would be as independent as he could be and would not ask help from anyone. He could hold on by his feet, but his broken body was picked up at the foot of the ancient castle tower. Here is a living tradition of the gift of "blarney" to those who kiss the stone and Blake spoiled a day for everyone there and a life for himself. To kiss the stone by having someone hold one by the feet is an achievement in itself and with the added appeal of the traditional gift of eloquence it ought to have been enough for Blake. But it was not. He wanted too much and lost.

AIR SOWING

Russia has introduced the airplane into agriculture for the sowing of fields in the hope of overcoming the obstacle of scanty rainfall. The grain falls unevenly but mammoth wastes can be sown, less than a minute being required to sow a hectare. It is hoped that two harvests of flax can be gathered if the plane is used in sowing.

The advantages of air sowing also include thin planting and a substitute for laborious sowing.

The dirigible is to be tried out because of its slower speed and its greater carrying power. In the spring of 1933 fleets of airplanes are to be used in the southern regions to start in the early spring and work their way northward.

Professor Tulsikof, vice president of the Soviet Agriculture Society believes the airplane will enforce reconstruction of the technique of agriculture.

A RABBIT MOVES IN
By Egar A. Guest

There's a little jack rabbit comes into our garden
With never a "May I?" or "Begging your pardon!"
Or "Please, sir, permit me. I'm hungry for roots."
And he nibbles the green leaves and tender young shoots,
And I vow that I'll send for a shotgun and end
Which I would, didn't Janet rise up to befriend him.

I've seen him go leaping my rose garden over;
I've seen him devouring my choicest of clover;
I've caught him—the rascal—at work on my phlox,
And I know he has eaten my best hollyhocks!
Already he's cost me nine dollars in money—
But Janet insists he's a cute little bunny.

Now, I wouldn't mind it so much if this rabbit
Had asked my permission my grounds to inhabit;
But he didn't! He moved in one bright starry night
As if to my shrubs he'd a God-given right.
And I swear that I'd six him so he couldn't fret me,
By nibbling my posies—if Janet would let me.

FOLKS HAVE NOT LEARNED to make use of the home newspaper to the extent they should, for their own advantage. Attics are full of discarded furniture which could be disposed of to advantage through a classified Adv. in the newspaper. Vacant rooms could be rented to desirable tenants, things needed could be obtained at attractive prices from folks who don't need them. Articles could be exchanged, etc. Merchants and folks in every line of business could use the newspaper more than they do, to their profit. Hang out a sign over the door, be it wooden, metal, or electric, will not bring customers, signs just tell folks where to find you after they have been told you have something to sell which they should buy. Economy in advertising is false economy which has been proved time after time, although we speak as interested parties. We know that the life-giving spring of business flows from intelligent advertising. Reflect that the newspaper goes into one six thousand homes every day, a welcome guest, in fact an eagerly anticipated one — more, indeed than a guest, a part of the household which no one would like to do without. Figure just one buyer to a home (there are more of course), and consider the effect of telling your business story to six thousand potential buyers every day — that's what the home newspaper has made possible for you — a welcome and free trade message in more than six thousand homes in this shopping district EVERY DAY. If that isn't a stupendous opportunity, a real investment available in value to every business man of Belleville, then figures lie and the truth is not in them.

Speeding the Race-Horse Electrically

Newest Zeitung writes: "Electricity has shown amazing speed lately. Diminutive, yet none the-less "shocking," electric batteries, concealed in the hand, or the saddle, or the belt of a jockey, have been used in Australian races to speed the horse.

In announcing this, the Frankfurt Neueste Zeitung writes:

"The electrical batteries are sometimes hidden in innocent tobacco or cigaret containers. The rim or edge of such a container will be equipped with a pair of contact devices.

"The advantage of these batteries in a tobacco box is that the jockey, in case he comes under suspicion, can throw out the battery without detection. In some instance there have been found a basis for the suspicion that the jockeys attached these batteries to their saddles in such wise that a light pressure of the thighs sufficed to effect contact. The result was to impart the required electrical shock to the horse.

"In some cases it was found that the jockeys hid the battery in the belt of a jacket or coat, the wires for the current running down a leg to the stirrup."

PROPER DIET IN TREATMENT OF THE GOUTY

Broths and Meat Soups A'e Especially to be Avoided

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

Persons subject to gout, to rheumatic pains, so-called, should be sure not to over-eat, and should eat regularly, take plenty of time for meals, and not eat such highly-flavored dishes. The use of alcohol in any form is bad. Meats should be avoided.

Particularly to be avoided in gout are broths or meat soups, livers, sweetbreads, kidneys and meats in general. Meat juices are likewise injurious for such patients. Incidentally, the common belief that white meat is less harmful than dark meat does not scientific validity. Fish, oysters, shrimp and sardines likewise should be avoided.

Inasmuch as the foods just mentioned contain much protein content and therefore to be avoided, the gouty individual must derive his protein chiefly from such foods as eggs and milk, cheese and etc. etc.

Regarding vegetables— spinach, mushrooms, cauliflowers, asparagus, as well as peas and beans, should be used sparingly. Fruits and cereals are good for such patients and may be eaten freely. Regarding fats, those in cream and butter are best.

WHEAT CROP QUITE HEAVY

Rain Needed to Bring on Spring and Hoed Crops

Toronto, July 26—A considerable acreage of hay still remains to be harvested in central, southern and western Ontario, according to the weekly crop report of the Provincial Department of Agriculture. Labor shortage and high wages have made operations very difficult and many farmers have been forced to let hay stand in order to cut wheat. The latter crop is reported as heavy in most districts with considerable damage done by lodging.

Eastern and Northern Ontario still remain dry with the result that hay is a poor crop, over half the crop and pastures are brown with a corresponding shrinkage in milk flow. Rain is badly needed in these districts to assure a good yield in spring and fall wheat.

In Southern Ontario recent rains have effected a considerable improvement in Lambton's spring crops and in Kent, Essex, Elgin corn, tomatoes and tobacco. In Norfolk also tobacco has lately made rapid progress. The fruit crop this year will not be as high as in 1931. Harvesting of peaches will be general about August 5.

Reports on fruits and vegetables vary from Central Ontario counties. Northumberland reports excellent prospects for apples and the normal yield of Montmorency cherries. Soha and Duke have damaged Ontario county apple orchards. Peels reports that Victoria and Durham County has made crops in general look promising.

Cheese prices in Eastern Ontario during the week varied from 9 cents to 9½c at Cornwall and Vankleek Hill. Drying up of pastures has effected the milk flow and the condition of cattle generally in Carleton, Dundas and Prontenac.

In Northern Ontario the potato crop in the Sudbury area is doing fairly well in Temiskaming in spite of the dry weather. Dairy factories and creameries are taking all the cream offered.

Action of M. Police Causing Congestion in Western Cities According to Mayor of Calgary

Transients Are Being Removed From Trains By Order

BENNETT WIRES

Large Influx is Threatened For B. C. if Action Continues

Calgary, Alta., July 26 (CP)—The Royal Canadian Mounted Police are removing unemployed transients from freight trains because it was requested by officials of the Canadian transportation companies, according to a telegram from Premier Bennett to Mayor Andy Davison of Calgary.

Mr. Davison had complained to the Premier that large numbers of unemployed were congregating in Calgary due "to the action of the R.C.M.P. in had been maintained by the unemployed that they were taken from eastbound trains to prevent large numbers of them participating in Ottawa during the sessions of the Imperial Economic Conference.

Mr. Bennett's telegram follows:

"There has been no effort to cramp transients on any western city. The railroads have asked police assistance to prevent trespassing on the trains. This was not available in small towns and in outlying railway points. You are in error in assuming that large numbers are proceeding to Saskatchewan for there is more ample help available in that province at the moment."

Bennett's reference to Saskatchewan was caused by Premier Anderson's statement that the men taken from trains were being sent to Saskatchewan harvest fields.

It is pointed out that while eastward trains were being watched for transients no action is being taken to prevent westward travel. This threatens a large influx of men into British Columbia.

SPECULATIONS OVER REYNOLDS' RICHES

Winston Salem, N.C., July 26—(CP)—Never has a North Carolinian wanted W. N. Reynolds to be extremely wealthy more than Richard Smith Reynolds, tobacco heir; and denial that an executor had been named in the will of Mrs. Winston Salem is wondering who will settle the bulk of the family estate.

The amount of his personal estate is unknown, although it was learned Thursday that whatever it was, it would be increased approximately $106,000 earned in 1931, it was reported, which sum will be named by the clerk of the Forsyth county superior court.

W. E. Church, the clerk, said last night that under state law the executor has a year in which to present the will to him for probate.

Reynolds, who founded the famous tobacco fortune, died suddenly of heart disease at his estate near Winston Salem on July 29, 1918, at the age of 58.

Reynolds had $21,000,000 waiting him in trust, the income from which his property when he attained the age of 28. He would have been 21 in November.

Under North Carolina law his widow has a dower right to one-third of the estate. Under terms of the will of Mrs. Reynolds, who founded the fortune, his wife will receive nothing from the trust estate she bears a posthumous child.

MAY BE 15 MEN IN TRAIN WRECKAGE

Bellefontaine, O., July 26— All available wrecking crews and equipment were at work last night searching the wreckage of 40 Big Four Railroad freight cars believed to contain the bodies of between 10 and 15 train riders.

The wreck occurred eight miles west of Bellefontaine. The cause has not been determined.

While there was no definite check on the number of riders aboard the train, crew members said that a group of between 10 and 20 men boarded the freight at a bridge about a half mile west of Bellefontaine.

The freight, made up of 100 cars of merchandise, was rounding a curve at a mile-a-minute clip when one of the cars left the rails. Forty cars from the middle of the train followed suit.

War Memorial To be Unveiled

Toronto, July 26.—The addresses of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and President Albert Lebrun of France, at the unveiling of the National Memorial at Vimy, will be broadcast throughout Canada at 11 a.m. E.D.S.T. on Monday, August 1st. The broadcast, picked up by the B.B.C. will be brought across the Atlantic over the Canadian transAtlantic Telephone Circuit through co-operation of the Canadian Marconi Company, Bell Telephone Company of Canada and the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific broadcast chains. Arrangements to deliver the program to radio stations from Halifax to Vancouver, by the Dominion telephone and telegraph circuits will be used in the Maritime Provinces beyond Halifax.

The unveiling which was to have taken place May 16th, was postponed on account of the assassination of Vimy by the British on July 1st, 1916, after it had been held by the 1924 (Wurtzburg) regiment, for nearly two years and converted into a nest of German fortifications, barbed wire and strong points connected by tunnels. It fell to the British after the most severe of the attacks struggles on September 29th, 1916.

SAYS WHISKERS TAKE AWAY SEX APPEAL

New York, July 26—Borah Minevitch, the harmonica King of Broadway, has gone to law about a man's whiskers. Minevitch has a long-time contract with the Loew's booking office and they don't relish the idea of his appearing on the stage with the fine brown beard he grew on his recent trip to Europe. In fact they notified him that if he didn't mow the grass, they'd mow down his salary—a severe contract. The booking office complains that when Minevitch is in the shave he has more sex appeal, and that this commodity disappears as soon as he grows a beard.

FORGIVEN"

Few advertisements in your newspaper start that way. Yet most of them are just as personal, and almost as promising.

Manufacturers and merchants must know your needs and wants, or go out of business. They must know, for instance, that about the first of next month you'll be very much interested in a new hat, new dress, new shoes, or a new lamp, or new towels or many other articles, useful or ornamental besides the week-end prices on food products. They must foresee your wishes—and have what you'll want when you want it.

And they do constantly striving to suit, at the lowest possible prices. Then telling you in advertising of the gifts they have brought from the far corners of the earth, to please Your Royal Highness.

Read the advertisements in this paper. They are addressed to you—personally. They bring you news of better things to have and easier ways to live. Intimate news, of immediate interest.

Rioting Breaks Out in St. Johns Windows Being Shattered and Shops Pillaged Before Quelled

Two Police Injured in Melee in Baton Charge
18 ARRESTED

Order Restored Early Today But no Peace as Yet

St. John's Nfld., July 26—Rioting broke out again early today in Newfoundland's capital City, disrupting mob shattered windows and pillaged shops before police scattered them shortly after midnight. Two policemen were injured in the melee that followed a bluecoat baton charge and 18 of the unemployed demonstrators were placed under arrest.

Police reserves rounded into small but mobile patrol detachments and were finally successful in restoring order.

DANCES CONDEMNED AS TOO UNDIGNIFIED

Ottawa, July 26.—One of the most charming members of the younger group in the Economic Conference party is the 17-year-old Princess Naomi, daughter of Seth Hajl Abdulla Hamoud, a member of the official delegation from India. Miss Hamoud speaks several languages fluently including English, wears the most fashionable western attire, and is physically beautiful. But she turns red "thumbs down" on the most popular diversion among the young people of the western world.

Saturday night Miss Hamoud attended her first dance. Today she was asked how she liked it.

"Too undignified," was the terse reply.

REDWINGS ARE DOWNINDUMPS

Having Hard Time to Extricate Selves From 2nd Division

(By the Associated Press)

With the Newark Bears threatening to make a runaway of the International League pennant race, the Rochester Red Wings, winners of the championship for four successive years, are more concerned about getting out of the second division.

Unlike the team, that set the pace from 1928 to 1931, the Red Wings have been unable to develop a consistent winning streak. As the result they are in fifth place, two and one-half games back of the Montreal Royals.

Yesterday's game with the Royals did not help matters any as the defending champions dropped a 4 to 3 decision. With Art Mansfield holding the Wings to six hits, the Royals won on the fourth straight game. The defeat was Rochester's second consecutive downfall and the fifth in the last 16 games.

With Rixey starting his second game in as many days, the Red Wings battled the Royals on even terms for five innings. In the sixth Ripple singled, scoring Eddie Moore with what proved the only Red Wing tally.

The Pigrays went to the aid of Paulino in the ninth inning and clinched a Baltimore rally to give the Jersey City Skeeters a 5 to 2 victory over the Orioles. Although Pigrays pitched strong game, Penna received credit for winning his 10th victory of the season, in the field the Skeeters attack with a homer and two singles, driving in three runs. Packard hit for a circuit for the Orioles in the ninth, starting a rally, that Pigrays ended with the bases full.

The Buffalo Bisons had an easy time licking Toronto, 7 to 2 in a night game at Silver Stadium, except the Leafs until the ninth when they bunched three of their nine hits.

ERNIE SCHAAF WINS DECISION

Neither He Nor Uzcudum Impressive in 15 Round Bout

New York July 26—Ernie Schaaf, who would like to fight his partner and chief second, Jack Sharkey, for the heavyweight title, today had taken short, faltering step in that direction.

By belting out a 15-round decision over the ageing Basque, Paulino Uzcudun in Madison Square Garden's big bowl last night, the Boston blonde survived the first round of the Garden's heralded elimination tournament.

But it was a subject of debate with the crowd of 8,000 whether Schaaf proved anything except, possibly, that he is not a worse fighter than Paulino. The audience voted, informally, to eliminate both of them.

There were no knockdowns, and the crowd had very little entertainment. Schaaf let Paulino take the agressive all the way and only in the final round did the winner open up and flail the Spaniard.

The Associated Press chart accorded Schaaf eight rounds, Paulino five and two even. Schaaf weighed 204 pounds, Paulino 208 3-4.

The audience had the most fun in the ninth round, when Paulino missed a round house swing so completely he fell and rolled to the edge of the ring.

FRUIT GIRLS RETAIN LEAD

Pat Finger's Homer is Blow That Defeated Cisco

Pat Finger's home run with Anna Galna on first base in the sixth inning spelled defeat for the Cisco girls' team, the Belleville Fruit Jacks kept their league position of second by beating the girls from their Corbyville rivals by the score of 6 to 4 Monday evening.

The game was one of the closest contests yet seen at the Armour as lawn this season. After the Cisco girls collected three of their four runs in the first innings, the game settled away to be a pitcher's battle between "Kaye" Lewis, who pitched Trenton laaste, on the hillrop for the Fruit team, while Bessie Doolittle hurled for Cisco until the seventh, when she retired, unluckily, in favor of Vera Bey, who finished.

"Babe" Lewis pitched steady ball throughout allowing but five scattered hits while the game between Only two circuit smashes were registered one by K. Genereau and the other by Pat Finger, this hit eventually proved the winning one. Now, that won the game. Pat Finger was also the big hitter of the evening, with three hits to her credit.

Tuesday night sees the Maple Leafs battle the National Maids, while an exhibition game between the famous Cobourg Allstars and the local Major Leafs has been arranged by Manager Lloyd.

CARRYING PLACE TEAM PULLS BIG SURPRISE

Carrying Place, July (Special) — Redeerville leading all clubs in the Amelisburg Softball race, allowed themselves to be taken into camp by the lowly Carrying Place team by a score of 12-6. With exception a few changes in the make-up of the teams, the brand of softball served up was decidedly different, and as far as Redeerville is concerned, the change was not entirely for the best, although Redeerville team scored two and four runs in the first. Carrying Place took a commanding lead in the second and third when they scored five runs, which added seven more in the fifth and sixth. This being the first scheduled league games with the exception of a practice game between Consecon and Carrying Place, only a close game was called out. The loss of the game could not affect Redeerville's standing in any way, which might account for the listless manner in which they played the greater part of the game, but still the decisive victory by Carrying Place was a big surprise to many. Walloping Jack Farley's offering for the locals seldom they astonished the spectators and possibly themselves, with the hard they pulled. He was credited for the only homer of the game when Bill Hagerman lofted the ball to the plate on a close decision. For Carrying Place, Farley was behind the bat with Westfall replacing Earn Green, who was absent, at second. The Redeerville attack was generally re-formed with Bills catching Jack, Wood pitching and the latter, in spite of the score run up against him, proved a hard nut tice to become a real pitching threat.

EXCURSIONISTS GIVEN DUCKING

London, Ont., July 26—When a small pier collapsed at Grand Bend, about 25 persons, Londoners, were thrown into Lake Huron, were brought to shore without serious injury. The pier was crowded with summer visitors who were waiting to get a ride on a motor launch making excursions on the lake from Grand Bend. The structure suddenly started to give away. Screams of frightened women and children pierced the air as the pier collapsed. All those on the pier were tossed into the water, which is about three to four feet deep.

C.P.R. PULLS BIG SURPRISE

Defeat League Leading Shamrocks by Score of 10 to 4

TRENTON, July 26.—(Special)—The C.P.R. threw a surprise into the league here last night, when they beat the strong Shamrock aggregation by a score of 10 to 4. The game was fast from the start both teams working hard to win. The C.P.R. has to fight for a place in the playoffs, while the Shamrocks have one cinched. By the way the millroaders played to-night they may get more than a place in the playoffs. Lewis, who was drafted from the Millionaires started off in the box for the Shamrocks and was able to go five innings, when he was replaced by Coughlin. During the five innings, he allowed five men and was pulled when Kennedy knocked one into the Bay in the fifth to score Beenhey and Bond. Coughlin, the star pitcher, of the Shamrocks team was not able to stop the hard hitting C.P.R. team when they had scored another three runs in their half of the sixth. If Coughlin cannot hold a team for longer innings than he will give up as he is the only real pitcher they have to depend on. Bowler was on the mound for the C.P.R. and pitched a nice game of ball, but had the entire support of his team at the rough moments. The millroders play like a champion championship team in the game last night and will take a good team to oust them. Bohan on Short for the Shamrocks was a star in the field but having a number of errors to his credit. Towle on third for the C.P.R. was a good deal better than his usual game but one error of his allowed the Shamrocks to score a run, which they had no license to do. Wesse in right field for the C.P.R. is another addition from the Millionaires and has proved a wonderful one. He is batting now on are attracting a good deal of interest, the pair umpires seem to come in for most of the razzing, which should not be as the one fellow he has a thankless job at the best. While Ward had to move a man from the bench last night he was perfectly within his right and should be supported otherwise not allowed to handle the games.

PASSES INTO RECEIVERSHIP

Lake Superior Corporation Formed 28 years Ago

TRENTON, N.J., July 26.—The Lake Superior Corporation of Camden, N.J., a holding company organized to operate canals, sell waterpower and construct and operate railroads, consented to a receivership yesterday.

The corporation was formed 28 years ago, with an authorizing capital stock of $40,000,000. Most of its assets are in Ontario, Virginia and Michigan.

The receivership was asked by the Algoma Consolidated Corporation, the Charlestontown, P.E.I. which owns 381,380 of the 400,000 outstanding shares of capital stock. The Algoma Consolidated Corporation itself is in the hands of the receivers.

The petitions said the Lake Superior Corporation was insolvent and had defaulted $131,850 interest due June 1 on first mortgage bonds.

Vice-Chancellor Malcolm Buchanan appointed J. Albert Homan of Trenton and E. Clarence Butler of Philadelphia receivers, and ordered the corporation to appear Aug. 16th why the receivership should not be made permanent.

TEACH CHILDREN TO SWIM

Every child should be taught to swim while in public service, for long the lower schools have provided education in music, art, manual training, domestic science, and agriculture, which are of great value to the future citizens; but the knowledge of how to keep afloat in water should not be placed in a secondary class to any of these. A PRACTICAL DIFFICULTY

A Woodstock jury added a rider to their verdict at an inquest, that all vehicles on Ontario highways be compelled to come to a full stop at railway crossings. The idea is reasonable and good, but if such a law were passed, it would take an army of officers to enforce it.—Aylmer Express.

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Toe The Mark; Learn to Walk

Beauty has gone gallantly forward the last few years. She has organized her complexion, shined up her hair, got acquainted with vitamines, flung her money into cosmetic tills, learned so much about dress that the smooth-tongued salesman can't put anything over on us ugly ones. But——she hasn't learned to walk! She shuffles, scuffles, waddles, scurries or prances. Her idea is to get there. How she does it, doesn't matter.

American woman aren't walkers. Any kind of transportation is preferred to ankling. Five blocks look like an endless journey to a daughter of Uncle Sam. The Englishwoman considers five miles nothing more than a bit of a jaunt. There is a difference in the mental attitude. American girls don't put the proper valuation on fresh air, exercise and leisure Englishwomen do. And Americans are always in a hurry. Which doesn't get them anything but wheezes and nerves.

When a girl appreciates the joy of a brisk walk—legs, arms, trunk all moving rhythmically—and she will let no day pass without one. She will gain refreshments of the spirit. Circulation will improve. Complexion will fall in line and color naturally.

It was intended that human folk should use their muscles. If in the health and firmness of the muscle-tory system that creates the smart figure, the style will line, first, normal bosom, lifted chest cavity. Nobody acquires these blessings by sitting on them. Learn how to walk. Hustle. Be active.

Does a doubling member of the beauty class pipe up with "I don't know. Do you put down your toes first, or your heel? Do you wriggle your hips; or don't you? And what do you do with your arms when you're not waving 'em at somebody? And what's the use of walking when the family bus is cuddled up at the curve waiting for you!"

Which explains pretty clearly why the little dearhearts can't get started up on the subject of hoofing for beauty's sake.

Put down toes first, and see what happens. You tilt; no foothold. Put down the heel and you plump; there's a strain on the back of the neck, hips go forward, tummy pops out. Nothing worse. What you must do is to put down toes and heel at the same moment, with the weight of the body almost directly under the ankle bone.

The secret of walking beautifully is body balance. With that, grace begins along like a lamb. You don't have to pay any attention to it.

Here is a way to acquire balance. Find a long carpet seam and pretend that it is a tight rope. Place the foot pointing straight ahead, follow it with the next one. If muscles are strong, if they respond as they should, there will be almost no uncertainty of movement. Five minutes of this stunt, night and morning.

Neither knees nor ankles should touch when walking, but they should just barely escape touching. Waddlers are spread-legged. Shufflers bend at the knees. Legs should be kept straight, hips back, chest high. In every step there should be spring and spirit. How often hayfoot! strawfoot! marchi

WHEN THE GODS ARE TOO LAVISH

(By Beatrice Fairfax)

An Autobiology on problems of Love and Marriage.

In many a kitchen this morning multitudes of women, a little weary of the domestic round of dish-washing, modifying baby food, steering bottles, and straining potatoes, may happen to glance at the newspaper between chores, and pause a moment to thank Heaven they've had enough to do to keep them out of mischief——and murder.

The picture likely to evoke these wholesome reflections is that of a very beautiful woman charged with the murder of her lover. Here is the type of face that Sargent loved to paint—beautiful, furnished, compelling all eyes like a racing yacht on a winning breeze.

The unconquerable spirit that challenges you from beneath those level brows would take "No" as an answer from life love or that welter of things we call romance. Money, position, beauty helped her to match what she wanted; the one unknown quantity was the distance.

She beat on the tom-toms of life despairingly, and somehow the maffa happened. Things she wanted always materialized.

Then fate presented the bill. After an evening of cocktails, and wrangling with the boy friend of the moment, the beautiful young woman felt that everything was not as she wanted it. She had been opposed; crossed. A shot was fired and the boy was dead at her feet when the police arrived the startled neighbors crowded in and found her shrieking: "Dearest, come back to me!"

But the young man had crossed the Rubicon over which there is no returning.

And now she spoiled, barbed child of fortune can't understand it all—the prison cell, the police, the endless questioning. Why should these horrors have happened to her?

They happened because she had had too much because she was the spoiled darling of fortune, who had never learned the rudimentary lesson of waiting and reaping.

Millions of women in their kitchens glancing at that beautifully arrogant face, between chores and stepping to listen to see if the baby is crying, may thank Heaven for responsibilities that have kept them from beating the tom-toms of life, crying aloud for the moon and—eventually being charged with murder.

Many lovers of flowers can be seen daily admiring the many different flowers and foliages to be seen on the premises of Mrs. W. M. Leach at the corner of Victoria Ave. and John Street, where some of the seasons most beautiful flowers are now in bloom.

One of the features of the present floral display to be seen there is the present blooms of dahlias At least 16 different varieties of this species of floral bloom can be seen there at present. Some of the dahlias in bloom in the flower garden are Mrs. Ver Warner, of a mauve color, Alexander Waldie, a plum color, Jersey Beacon, Jersey Mammoth, Daddy Butler, of a maroon shade, Madam Worthern, Judge Martin, Dr. Kirkland, Jersey Beacon, Dr. Tevis, Jackson and many other species of the dahlia plant are being grown. some as high as eight feet.

The blooms this year are somewhat taller than in previous seasons and carry many beautiful blends of colors and tints. The majority of the blossoms are not fully out in bloom yet but backed by the many various kinds of fallia pra present a picture which is real-ly hard to describe without a personal visit.

Mrs. Leach is quite proud of her many beautiful dahlias. Mr. D. W. Adams, the genial gardner whose efforts in the garden are today being realized, is equally as proud of his handiwork.

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Follett)

When fashion's blushes of vivid hue are placed upon a complexion that has fallen into a state of depression—crinkles round the eyes, tissues flabby, cutaneous surface grey or sallow—don't pay attention to defects, impart an appearance of fatigue. And that's why the older gals must be cautious with the make-up. Don't use a heavy face powder a shade darker than the complexion. That's the middle-aged darling tries to make herself look juvenile, she only makes herself look older.

Ruinous to the little Paris model is the slumped-in chest cavity. Bodies are built these days for figures that are something more than lines and curves. By deep breathing, by standing with chest back and—tummy muscles tight, the chest work will come out of their slump, baloon outward and upward as good chest work should. Arm swinging is supressed, and if there's a flat iron in each hand, success is almost sure to come.

Coiffures they say, must reveal the shape of the head, yet some revealing aren't by creating. The old tete that is flat at the back is improved by a thicker thatch where the flatness is. So watch Henri of Louis or Arabelle when the shearing goes on. Long heads are improved by high hair dress in the back, and short ones by locks that extend upon the neck.

Prominent wrist bones line up among beauty woes. Chuck 'em out of sight by fattening the surrounding tissues. Cocoanut oil will prove to be a friendly aid. Wash thoroughly and wrists with warm soap suds and a brush. Rinse in warm water, because oil works better on a warm surface than when the epidermis is chilly. Friction in the oil with

TIMELY ADVICE FROM MARGE —by C.A. Voight

Never gamble with "B.O."

YOU may think you're safe—but make sure! Remember even in cool weather pores give off a part of odour-causing waste daily. A little extra exercise — a stuffy, overheated room — and this odour becomes noticeable to others. Play safe — always! Wash and bathe with Lifebuoy. Its creamy, searching, abundant lather purifies pores — gives both-to-bath freshness and freedom from "B.O."

Clears dull complexions

Lifebuoy's penetrating lather washes away surface dirt and pore-embedded impurities, too. Dull skin quickly responds to its purity, yet through cleansing — glows with new radiant health. Adopt Lifebuoy today.

C.P.R. HIGHEST FOR LONG TIME

Market Continues Advance But Slight Reaction Sets in

TORONTO, July 26.—Toronto Stock Exchange Market continued in advance today, though in the second hour there was a slight reaction from the highs down from their tops made shortly after the opening.

C.P.R. and International Nickel led the market forward at the opening. Nickel was slightly higher and firm at 8 3-4 and C.P.R. got as high as 16 5-8, the best in a long time. The advance here followed active purchasing of these stocks in London. Later other individual issues followed the leaders up and the gains came into the picture, picking up the advance where it had been left last night.

Trading products, Walker issues, some of the power shares, the public utilements were fractions higher. Page-Hersey tubes, Smelter and Canada Cement gained a point and more.

Steadiness read to show a small loss at midday and Bell Telephone dropped more than a point. Issues of Canada and Ford were each down slightly.

Bell Telephone sold at 79 on July 12, and 80 today. Page Hersey gained to 46 1-2 from 45 yesterday, and Smelters was 1/4 higher today at 31 1-4. Ford, which was the rage with the rest of the oil issues, has climbed steadily from 8¼ on July 12 to 10¼ today.

TENDENCY TO REACT SEEN

List Has Irregular Appearance in Early Trading

TORONTO, July 26.—(By the Canadian Press)—A somewhat reactionary tendency developed around midday on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market today, after the list had irregular appearance when taken.

Metsmith sold off 50 to $20.75 and Dome dipped a few cents to $13.25. Hollinger, Lake Shore and Wright-Hargreaves were holding. Among cheaper golds Granada advanced a point to 9 cents and Bear-Anacon a point to 46 but Ventures and Sylvanite in a little ground under profit-taking.

Siscoe was slightly higher at 1.37. Sudbury Basin reacted 8 to 53. Acme Gas and Pen Pete lost fractions in the oil section.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, July 26—There were 315 cattle, 60 calves and lambs, 1,065 hogs and 135 calves for sale on the Canadian Pacific Railway markets today including 80 cattle and 300 hogs held over from previous days' market. Cattle were not moving.

Calves were dragging slow-ly at about yesterday's quotations for around 40 head sold at $3.50-4.00 for medium kinds and $4.50-5.00 for medium kinds and real choice calves. Lambs were firm and a few grassers were sold at $2.50.

Good lambs were mostly $6, with culls out at $4. Mixed lots sold at $5 to $5.50.

Hogs were a shade firmer. Those of good quality sold at $3 and mixed lots sold for $4.50 to $4.75. Light and fat feeders sold for $4.25-4.75 and sows from $2.50-3.50 with the bulk around $3. and trim young sow's up to $4.

Toronto, July 26—Cattle 660; left overs totalled 1600 head. Trade was dull about the morning and buyers holding about steady with Monday. A few choice butcher cattle sold up to 5.50 with common down ward to 2.50. Weighty steers were not moving. Butcher cows were from 2.00-3.00 and canners down-ward to 50 cents cwt. Veal calves were strong at 7.50-8.00 for choice. Calves 240. Calves were steady at 5.00-5.50 for choice with common grassers downward to 2.00.

Hogs 460; hogs were unsettled.

Salesmen held for 4.50 f.ab. for hogs on the 5.50 weight of 200 to 250 lbs. Sheep 410; no lambs were sold up to 11 a.m. Ride were 4 to 6 cents and weathers with 7.00 asked. Sheep were steady at 2.50 for good light ewes and wethers.

SPECULATORS IN CONTROL

All This in Face of Considerable Flurry of Profit Taking

New York, July 26.—Speculators for the time retained control of the stock market today, in face of a considerable flurry of profit taking during the morning.

The market was able to do little better than recover from the effects of the morning selling, however, as traders turned cautious in advance of the U. S. Steel directors' meeting after the close. Furthermore, there was a feeling in some quarters that the list was entitled to a corrective reaction after so vigorous an advance as yesterday.

Such issues as U. S. Steel Preferred, American Can, American Telephone, Santa Fe, and Standard Oil of N. J. recovered. Electric and Consolidated Oil were active features, rising fractionally. Richfield shares, which have been selling for a few cents, have built doubled the value on the strength of Consolidated's latest offer. With the exception of Reynolds B, which advanced about a point, the actively traded issues as McKesport, United Fruit, Case and Sinclair Johnson were pushed up about 1 to 2 points.

Professional activity was largely concentrated in the oils. Traders have been trying to get a public following in them on the strength of second quarter earnings, indicating that this is the only group or industry now showing decisive improvement over 1931. Declining gasoline consumption, however, has tended to make for some caution on the part of investors.

ADVERTISING

to Save . . . through Spending

Not many of us, these days, are troubled with so much money that we cannot spend it. But we ARE interested in spending the money we have, to get the most out of it.

One way—and not a new way, either—is to make a budget. Put down, week by week, the money that comes in. Put down beside it, week by week, the money that goes out. So much for food, so much for clothing, so much for rent. So much for giving, and for luxuries.

It won't always be easy, of course, to stay within the budget. That's where advertising helps you. Advertisements in this newspaper tell you how much rugs, butter, breakfast foods, dishes, homes, automobiles will cost, BEFORE you go shopping! They point out ways to save money. They show you how to cut a little here, a little there. And each day, they tell about new inventions, new products, new ways of doing things, that help make this life of our very much worth living!

Unknown Origin of Fire Which Sweeps Norwich Township

Norwich, Ont., July 26—Fire of unknown origin which broke out early today completely destroyed the large double barn belonging to Henry Buckbero of North Norwich Township, soon and a half miles south of this town.

Mrs. Buckbero was awakened by the glare of the flames, William Sherk, local telephone operator, who saw the fire and through his efforts many neighbors were roused from sleep so that in a few minutes 30 were at the scene of the conflagration. Nothing was saved but a few implements.

The barn was built in two sections each 30 by60 feet. Thirty loads of hay, 150 chickens, a binder and seed drill were burned. The loss is estimated at $3,000, of which $1,000 is covered by insurance.

WARBLERS AT SOO FESTIVAL

Lamp-Post Troubadours Go Into Action at Sault Ste. Marie

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 25—The lamp post troubadours are getting into action. These groups of singers, reminiscent of the early day, when the boys used to gather under the old arc lights or gas lights to indulge in a little close harmony, are already making their appearance for the Wolf Week convention.

Harry Gayson's French Canadian choir will add a further touch to Wolf Week's musical festivities and they, while contributing to the adoration of "Sweet Adline," will specialize on the old folk song "Alouette" they had already been heard on the street. True, it was only for a moment and the radio idea was to get their picture taken, but it gives a foretaste of good things to come.

The serv:e clubs, the Canadian Legion and other organizations have announced entries and the latest word is that Bert Tremblay of West Branch, Michigan, is bringing two "Sweet Adline" quartettes from Detroit. R. Home Smith, of Toronto is the official judge.

Lost on Arctic Ice Fields While Filming 'The Viking'

Caught in Blinding Blizzard Miles Away from Ship on Treacherous Pan Ice

BY ROY P. GATES

Co-Producer of "The Viking" Advance Feature

As you sit in your favorite theatre witnessing the unfolding of that saga of the Newfoundland seal hunters, "The Viking," you may gain some idea of the dangers and hardships with which its producers were confronted, but most of the thrilling experiences that were encountered are known to but few except those courageous men who daily risked their lives in order that a true picture of sealing on the treacherous ice fields off the Labrador coast might be brought to the motion picture screens of the civilized world.

When the news of the tragic wreck of the "Viking" first flashed across the front pages of the newspapers of the world, not many people outside of motion picture circles were aware that, for many months, Varick Frissell, accompanied by a company of players, cameramen and sound technicians, had been filming on the first all outdoor, all-talking picture, having for its basis the dramatic settings of the vast ice-fields where seal hunting annually takes its irresponsible toll of lives among the thousands of hardy Newfoundland fishermen who cheerfully, even eagerly, face almost unbelievable dangers.

Few people, indeed, know that every each March or April of sturdy vessels sail from St. John's, Newfoundland, and battle their way through immense fields of shifting "pan ice" to an area off the Labrador coast, where the seals pause for a time in their migration north, to give birth to their young. All of which is strangely enough, are born either on the first day of March or within one or two days of that date.

Miles of sailing by the vessels search for the seal herds and when they are located the men venture forth on foot on the pan ice, small floes of free ice, the largest rarely more than twenty-five feet wide, and, jumping precariously from the cake of ice to another, journey miles away from their ships. It is said that not one of these fishermen can swim, a fact which is also true of the baby seals until they are six weeks old, and yet they frequently step on deep-Ice floes which sink under them when they must be rescued with ropes flung by their fellow adventurers.

What is described as one of the most thrilling adventures experienced during the filming of "The Viking" occurred when the members of the cast, cameramen and sound engineers were forced to ever the side onto the shifting ice, and left behind to "shoot" a raging blizzard, while the ship sailed on in search of a seal herd. The storm was charming the seas and a heavy swell made the footing most doubtful.

Their scenes having been shot under these difficult and dangerous conditions, the little group of men anxiously awaited the return of the Viking, which was to pick them up before nightfall. But darkness descended and found them in a most dangerous situation. They could endure the possible wreck of the Viking which would mean that they were inevitably lost. They endured the piercing pan ice, singing gay songs and telling stories in a brave endeavour to conceal their fear from each other.

Meantime the blizzard increased in its intensity and the night grew even darker, if such a thing were possible. It was hours later, hours which seemed to be days in length, before someone sighted the lights of their ship approaching slowly. And then, just as they were joyously congratulating each other, the Viking stopped dead, caught in an ice jam.

Signal flares from the ship indicated that she could get no further that night. They faced the alternative of spending a terrible night on the ice or making their way to the ship over the treacherous ice in the stormy darkness. They chose the latter and, with the aid of one incredible flashlight, they began a perilous journey which none of them will ever forget. Although the ship was only two miles distant many hours passed before they finally reached the Viking, exhausted and nearly frozen.

One has only to see the vast ice fields heaving in the storm, as they are shown in the picture, to comprehend the terrifying danger of those hours of darkness. And it is of tragic interest that many of these men defeated death that night only to give up their lives on that other fatal night when the Viking was destroyed off Horse Island, Newfoundland.

"The Viking" opens at the Capitol Theatre on Wednesday (Glasware Gift Night) for two days showing only at usual prices.

HEROIC DOG WINS BOUQUET

Kills Rattler and Saves The Life of Gene Brennan

Dayton, O., July 25.—Myra V. Stolzenvoss, descendant of a long line of prize-winning Dobermann Pinschers is the toast of the town today—a heroine who battled a rattlesnake to save the life of little Gene Brennan, her playmate.

Gene is the three-year-old son of her owner, Louis Brennan. He rushed his show dog to the hospital where she is receiving the best medical attention, where she is showered with little bits calculated to cheer the heart of a dog.

Some townsfolk have sent her flowers. The dog and little Gene were romping together yesterday around a rock pile. A wild rose caught the rocks, attracted the child's attention. He clambered onto the pile and reached for it.

Myra V. barked frantically, grabbed the rear of Gene's rompers and pulled him back.

Gene started again for the red rose.

The dog leaped against him and knocked him down.

Again, the boy started for the rose bush and again the dog's teeth caught the rompers and pulled him away.

The boy, provoked, struck the dog. It yelped and retreated. Gene reached for the rose.

With a wild bark, Myra V. hurled her body between the boy's hand and the red rose. Her teeth sank a little too hard of a rattlesnake about the stem of the rosebush just below the flower.

The serpent's fangs sank in the dog's body. For long minutes the pair battled in a death struggle which ended with the snake lifeless and the victor lying exhausted beside it.

Gene's mother had heard the boy's scream, had seen the end of the fight. She rushed the dog to a hospital.

Doctors said today that Myra V. will live.

BUFFALO TO THE NORTH

In Spite of Australian Heat, Buffalo Wears Winter Coat

Montreal July 25—Not to be outdone in the general outpouring of imperial goodwill at Ottawa, Distant Adelaide, Australia, 10,000 miles away from this country, a Canadian Buffalo, gift of the Canadian Government, has just given birth to calf.

Information of the new arrival has just reached the office of the Canadian National Steamships. The dispatch also contained this interesting biological information that the mother is as yet a long way from being acclimatized to the southern hemisphere, judging from what happens to her coat. So far she has persisted in garbing herself in a winter coat in the Australian summer, which she promptly sheds at the beginning of the Australian winter. This is due to the fact that the Australian seasons occur at opposite ends rile and relender to those of Canada. It may take years, it is thought before the buffalo living in the Antipodes adapts her change of attire to the altered conditions.

Two years ago a buffalo bull and two cows were sent to Australia as a gift of the Canadian Government, and were conveyed to Port Adelaide in the C.N.S. Construction. They were brought to Montreal after shipment from the Buffalo National Park, Wainwright, Alta. Their arrival in the Antipodes they have been quartered in the Adelaide Zoological Gardens.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating breakfast and ma said to pop, Did you read P. Willis Hinks's article in last nite's Globe. It was quite inspiring, it was on the subject of public benefactors and it went on to say that the greatest public benefactors are not the people whose names fill the papers with big print on every big day in the year, but those see their duty and do it quietly with out any fuss and follow out their conscients. In fact P. Willis Hinks said the greatest benefactors of all are the ones that are never heard of at all, like the ones to pollution rapped in their own modesty, ma said.

And after which she took off her diamond ring and put it on the side of the sink so she'd remember to wash her hands. Giving me a look and I took the hint and only forgets her ring like she generally does I can hide it and she'll think she's lost it, and then I can find it and put it back again without getting a bawling out for it, and I'll never know who the public benefactor was.

And I kept on washing her and she forgot her ring all nite and went in her own room and I quick snuck in the bathroom and hid the black diamond ring in my pocket, and I herd ma coming back and just had time to get back to the ball out of site, and I herd ma looking around in the bathroom looking to herself, saying, Now where did I put that ring, that's really strange, I could of sworn I layed that ring rite here on the sink, but it must of fell in a idle rime so as to be sure not to forget it again, I'll put it in my pocketbook, and say my ring on the basin, just before I put my hands in. So that proves it, but on the other hand, maybe it isn't decare as Benny has been around I'd have some clew, but this is absolutely mistifying, and she went in her room to look and I quick snuck in the bathroom and got the ring on the basin and jumped back in the hall again and pritty soon ma came out. Well I guess somebody is saying, Well I declare I must be getting batty my old age is coming on well anyway the relief is all mine, she said.

Me sneeking down the back stairs I made a modest benefactor, feeling lucky.

Sub-Committee Will Probe Unfair Trading Practices Affecting Empire Commerce

Russian Dumping Will be Considered Among Other Matters

CANADA INTERESTED

State's Activity in Market Will Also be Sifted

Ottawa, July 26.—The Imperial Economic Conference came down to cases on Monday with Russian dumping.

In the main conference committee—that on promotion of Commonwealth trade—the issue was raised and a sub-committee consisting of representatives of Canada and Great Britain appointed to consider and report.

Their reference covers the wider ground of "the bearing of unfair trading practices upon the operation of preferential trading arrangements within the Commonwealth."

State Grades of Trade.

It embraces such items as:

(1) Import prohibitions or restrictions by quota.

(2) Import restrictions such as Chile recently placed on nitrates.

(3) Private arrangements between state trading bodies to control the markets.

(4) State control of foreign trade, as in Russia and Persia.

Under the latter head Russian wheat dumping on the British market is particularly in mind. Figures presented to the conference show that in 1930-31, Russia almost reached the position she held before the war as a wheat exporter. In the five years ending May 31, 1932, imports of Russian wheat into Britain were only 1,191,443 hundredweight as against 7,729,803 hundredweight in the corresponding five months of 1931. But the problem before the conference is not so much the fact of the present as what may be expected when the huge Russian state farms get fully under way and Russia resumes her heavy exports.

The conference committee on economic co-operation appointed Sir Atul Chatterjee, head of the Indian Empire delegation, as its chairman. This committee decided to consider the question of co-ordination of research, and accepted a delegation to have on it one representative from each country will consider suggested changes in the composition of the Empire Marketing Board, the Imperial economic committee and uniformity of research. Standardization in weights and measures will also come within its scope.

Two Separate Negotiations.

And while conference proceeds with committee and sub-committee, two separate sets of negotiations are under way. Great Britain is negotiating with individual Dominions, clearing the way towards trade agreements.

Dominions interested in primary products are meeting together for informal conversations. "Satisfactory progress" is reported in Dominion discussions on dairy products. But among British headquarters there are indications of choppier seas ahead. Rumors of division are distinct. Russian dumping is not the only one dog in the manger.

IRISH EYES

By

KATHLEEN NORRIS

"It's a swell—it's a grand—its some address," Sheila commented. "I'll bet," Angela said dreamily, "that she's a society girl." It looks as if it went with—with clothes—" "I'll bet you," Sheila took it up, "she has a garage, and she had a darker blue suit than Rainsleys and a blue felt hat and Persian lamb about four in a line, you know—and white gloves and pet dogs and a new patent-leathers."

"I'll bet she had a sable fur." "I'll bet she did."

Sheila, what do you suppose it feels like?"

"To be rich?"

"Well. To have everything."

Sheila sighed.

"I've often looked at those big apartments."

"Complex, you mean," Angela supplied.

"Duplex, yes. And at those big brownstone houses, the old-fashioned kind. I've often wondered how it felt to just walk in."

"Sheila, have you ever been in a house, a regular city house, with an upstairs and a downstairs?"

Sheila pondered.

"Uptown Miss has an upstairs, but I've never seen anything but the kitchen," she suggested, after a minute.

"Oh, sure it has! I remember his wife came downstairs once with a little boy. And Josie's place has upstairs, please, at Rockaway—because she said she was going to rent her upstairs rooms. But I've never seen it."

"Angela, here's what I want to know"—Sheila began suddenly and stopped, looking hard at her curiously; there was an odd expression on Sheila's face.

"There it was thinking," Sheila said, and hesitated again. "I was thinking," she pursued "that all there must be something—something in some girls that makes them different from the others—that lifts them out—sort of it."

"Out of what?" Angela asked intently.

"Well, everything. Poverty, hard work—this", Sheila answered, with a gesture that included the kitchen, and the poor apartment, and the house that contained them. "Lots of the women who are rich today were poor once; were office girls' once," she speculated. "What I want to know is, what got them out of it."

"Pays," Angela answered instantly.

"Oh, prayer! I might have known it!" and prayer! Sheila exclaimed, disappointed. Tears stood in her laughing eyes. "But I mean something else than prayer," she explained.

"There is nothing else but prayer," Angela stated solemnly.

"You can tell me that all the rich women whose pictures are in the society sections on Sundays got there by prayer?"

"Oh, no, Sheila, of course not. But what have they got, after all? How much does the honor and glory of God—"

"Oh, for heaven's sake!" Sheila interrupted. And suddenly covering her face with her hands, she was crying.

Angela knew them tears. The stormy, brilliant older sister gave way to them almost as readily as to laughter,—if less often. But they always wrung Angela's heart, nevertheless.

She moved her chair next to Sheila's chair, put her hand persuasively on Sheila's knee, murmured the old, old comfort. Sheila's arm, pressed across her face. Sheila was going to get out of all this—they all were—packs of people did. The Monaghans and the Drakes and the Wolfes—why hadn't they all been the poor, obscure sons of Irish immigrants a few years ago? And, Sheila had something none of them had, and everyone knew it. Sister Cleodine had said that Sheila was the most brilliant girl who ever went to St. Damien's hadn't she? and hadn't Sheila won, every essay newspaper prize for getting words out of the letters in Daily Sunset?

Presently Sheila stopped crying as abruptly as she had begun and, straightening up, dried her eyes firmly, sniffed, gulped, and smiled at her sister.

"I'm girl," she said, touching the blue purse and speaking in voice made rich and thick from tears, "this girl probably spends three months in the country every year. If she needs a man, all she has to do is say him to come to dinner. Chicken, ice cream, clean tablecloth —she has 'em every day. If I meet a man I like, what break do I get? I don't even know his last name!"

"You mean Peter?" Angela asked, timidly.

"Peter—what?" Sheila said, laughing her tears again, looking defiantly at her sister, with a reddened nose and wet eyes. "I met him on last night of vacation, at a barbecue. I had to leave next morning. There are seven million people in this city; there are five hundred thousand men working. A swell chance I have of ever finding him again!"

Angela's expression was one of indignation. But she spoke quiet-speculate.

"God could do it!"

"Well, then, why doesn't He?" the other girl demanded. "I walk up a different street every day in noon time, at every hour I can in the subway. I've never seen him."

"Maybe you do too much," Angela suggested unexpectedly. "Maybe you ought to just—trust."

And then had open the door of the kitchen and put his head in?"

"It might—I—suppose that way."

"How would it happen?"

"Why, I don't know. I wouldn't see coming, Sheila." Angela was very serious. Sheila stared at her, flushed impulsively.

"Well, will you pray about it, Angela, if I sleep?"

"I am praying about it!" Angela said, her cheeks red.

"What now?"

"Night, now. And I'm remembering," said Angela. "And, Sheila, this kitchen door opening—that's prayer coming true. God could begin."

There was a pause. "It's one minute to nine," Sheila said, rising, yawning and smiling and stretching. "Good night, clock strikes. I'm ground here."

The kitchen door did not open; there was no telephone to ring; the radio was still. Yet, before the clock struck, the beginning of the miracle was upon them, and the serenity of Sheila Cascadden life had changed forever. Long afterward, she was to look upon this quiet evening with Angela, look back upon the rebellious, copper-headed girl she had been, and pity and crying in the chair opposite Angela, and ask herself, if she could call back that too-potent prayer from her innocent little sister, whether she would do so or no.

CHAPTER THREE

The second ticket day, Angela was handling the blue morocco purse.

"There was a blue coat for twelve," Sheila said, her pencil again, made a movement toward it.

"Sheila!" Angela said. "Look!"

In her fingers were green bills; she spread them on the table. Two twenties and a ten.

"Where—what—?" Sheila stammered, stupefied.

"They were in the purse—inside the little inside pocket, folded tight."

"They weren't!"

"But they were."

"Heavenly day!" Sheila said, sitting down again.

"Your coat, Angela," exclaimed with an excited laugh.

"Oh, and everything—Oh, Angela, what luck! Angela, fifty dollars for ten cents!"

They were still rejoicing and marvelling, still spreading and inspecting and handling the money, five minutes later, when their mother came back.

Mrs. Cascadden looked tired, as indeed she well might; she was pale, her hair and even disordered, her face wet with sweat. But her eyes shone with the mystic light of the priestess who has been officiating at the oldest of earth's mysteries.

"Well, the Sun-rise got their boy!" she observed, sitting down heavily, and wiping her forehead. "How maybe they'll make a little fuss over their girls. Light the kettle there, Sheila—I've been weak for a cup of tea this hour gone."

The girls spread their treasure before her amazed and her look tightened.

"It's well you have their street number there, that you can take it back to the man not lave anny of the_runnings said girl'll forget to return'rn it," she observed instantly.

Angela gave Sheila a fearful look. A mutinous lightness formed about the older girls mouth, exactly as it had about her mother's. She was discreetly silent, folding the money to the size of a stamp again, returning it to the inconspicuous little pocket in the purse.

Sheila was only praying that Angela would keep her mouth shut but of course Angela had to come to the adored older sister's defense.

"Mama, it's hers!"

Mrs. Cascadden's brow clouded.

"You'll take it back, of course, Sheila," she said.

"Listen, Mamma—"

Pondero usly, Mrs. Cascadden returned from the street with the new boiling kettle, poured the hot water upon the tea, left the leaves in the empty pot.

"Save your breath, Sheila," she directed. "We'll have no steain' here, thanks be to the glory of God!"

She stirred her tea, took a hearty swing at it, and pushed the hair from her wet forehead with a great clumsy hand that was like a caricature of Sheila's fine, square, young one.

"If there's anything cud make widowhood light to ye, 'tis bein' a girl in this! she muttered.

Immediately she perceived that there was an atmosphere in the air, and reverted to the moment's problem again.

"What's that street number there, Angela?"

Angela reluctantly consulted the purse read out the number.

"Is that anywheres near where you work, Sheila?"

"No, mama," Sheila answered, respectfully, but with, bitterness in her tone. "It's way up on the East Side."

"But you cud get up there tomorrow, dear?"

Sheila was silent for a full minute, during which she looked down at her own fingers, twisting the purse.

"Listen, Mamma, I bought this!" she burst out presently.

"Now, that's no way to talk, Sheila," her mother murmured, unruffled.

"But Mamma, I bought it. If a girl is such a fool that she gives away a purse with money in it, does she give away the money as well as the purse? Doesn't she, Ma?"

"Doesn't she?" Angela echoed eagerly.

"That's the devil timpin' ye," Mrs. Cascadden said, indexibly, but gently, to a persistent child. "That's no way to talk."

"It's a perfectly sensible way to talk," Sheila muttered, under her breath.

"No, dear, it's her money. It's not yours."

"Mamma, how many people do you suppose would take it back?"

"This kind of sophistry got nowhere with Mrs. Cascadden. She had never read a book of philosophy or theology, but she was sure of her ground here.

"That has nothing to do with it lovey."

"Mama, listen. They're probably rich people—She drew from Tiffany's. She's forgotten it a hundred times."

Silence. Sheila opened shut, snapped, reopened the bag, before adding:

"If Joe says it's all right, can I keep it?" she asked. "I'll not waste it, honest I won't. There was a coat at the summer sale that would save money—I'd wear it two years, I'd wear it three years—"

The mother did not speak. She looked up from her tea, looked down again.

"No wonder we're poor!" Sheila said angrily, "if we can throw away like this!"

"Mother," Angela said earnestly, her hands clasped impulsively, her flower-like face pale with emotion. "Mother, God intend- Sheila to have it!"

"No, dear, He'd never intind any one should have stolen goods."

"Stolen!" Sheila said hotly, and was still.

Joe came in; they consulted Joe. And Joe said of course the fifty had to go back. Sheila sat with her arm of his chair, and wept but she knew there was no gainsaying Joe's decision. They were all "said" by Joe; even Nealy and Margaret and Gene, still came back sometimes to ask advice of wise, gentle, clever Joe.

"Because, look here, Sheila," Joe reasoned, "suppose it had been a diamond ring?"

"Well, it isn't, Joe."

"No, I know it isn't. But suppose it had been a diamond ring in that same little pocket, what then?"

"I'd think lucky her that had a diamond to lose!" Sheila persisted stubbornly. But she was beaten, and she knew it. "It makes me cry, thinking of my blue coat!" she said.

"Let me buy, your coat for you."

"No, Joe!" She kissed the couch hard young face. "You that have real your job, and want to marry Cecilia!" she mourned, rubbing her cheek against his.

"Don't been crying, too," he said, in his good-humored patient way. "It's my turn, Mrs."

"There was weeks I fed the lot of ye on syrup and oatmake," Mrs. Carcadden observed, unalarmed, "I guess the bad times won't come to that."

"Why, no, because we have each other!" Angela exclaimed, in her soft, ecstatic voice.

JULY - 26 - MR. AND MRS. ~ JOE'S NERVE FAILS HIM

THE SON OF TARZAN—No. 84

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

On the evening that Korak entered the Arab's village Meriem had gone to her rude bed in the women's quarters. It was in a corner of the Sheik's tent screened by two priceless Persian rugs forming a partition. Presently the old chief parted the rugs and beckoned to her. "Meriem," he called, "come to Lalulee, your little girl obeyed. By the flickering firelight she saw his half-brother, old and hideous, who gave her a toothless grin as she entered.

"You will be married," the Sheik said, "to Ali ben Kadin, my brother." That was all. He left the tent and the old Arab came toward her. Meriem shrank back horrified. All ben Kaden clapped his hands. At once two slaves came in and at his bidding, seized her and dragged her off to the old fellow's tent. Here Meriem pleaded and threatened but all to no avail. Twice she tore herself away from him. Then it was she heard Baynes singing the tune meant for her ears.

As the sounds of the scuffle ceased, Morison Baynes went white with horror. He struggled frantically with his bonds. Freeing one hand he was able to cut the rope from his ankles and made for the tent's opening. As he stepped out a huge black barred his progress. Eyes and a sudden bestial cry transformed the slight young Englishman into a savage beast and gave him strength. He leaped upon the giant ck with a force that sent the slave to the ground. was Korak, the Killer!

Here they fought, the black to draw his knife, the white to choke the other's cry for help. The negro succeeded in drawing his knife and Baynes felt the sharp steel pierce his shoulder. Feeling with one hand over the ground, searching for some missile, his fingers touched a stone and closed over it. With a terrific blow he stunned the black, and ran for Meriem's tent. But another reached it before him. It

PUNT SAILORS TO HAVE CUP TO RACE FOR

Flat Bottomed Sail Boat Again Coming Into Popularity

RACE HOLIDAY

Splendid Trophy to be Given by Chas. Hanna to Winner

The early rudiments in navigation are once more going to come into their own on the Belleville Bay of the Bay of Quinte. Dingy sailing during the bay day of the stock market boom, made a brief bid for popularity hereabouts but the past two seasons has seen this worthy nautical sport diminish to the vanishing point.

However most of the inland water sailors of this vicinity have in years gone by had dingies, sailing canoes, skiffs, sail boats, yawls or yachts later gained their grounding in sailing technique in the first instance in the flat bottomed, squared bow and aft, tar smeared, old punts. And in summers of long and thirty years ago there were many of these almost proved craft in and about Belleville harbour.

Last summer this boys' craft made an appearance once more on the water of the Bay of Quinte, and this year five new vessels of this type have slid down the ways in Belleville and several others are nearing completion.

Foster Fust Sailing

To foster punt sailing sport in Belleville, Mr. Charles E. Hanna has donated a handsome cup to be sailed for in a series of three regattas. The races will be held on a triangular course off Victoria Park starting and finishing there. The first of these is to be held on the afternoon of Civic holiday, Monday next and then, on the Wednesday afternoon of August 17th and 31st. The cup is to go to the skipper scoring the grand aggregate of points during the series, to be held for one year two successive years to make him or her the permanent possessor. A first, second and third trophy and second and third prizes will be made to the same system.

Form Committee

The sailing master of by-gone years, who still handle the tiller or wheel and give lusty sailing orders, King Rogers, heads a committee to look after things in general. He said this committee, at meeting Wednesday evening last in the office of Captain John Wales, corner of Bridge and Front streets at 8 o'clock and all interested in spinning up navigation for the boys of today are invited to be present.

It is high time with the St. Lawrence shipping waterway making material formation that Belleville should take preparatory steps toward producing unsalted water sailors.

To the youthful sailors and those looking after their welfare is wished every success possible to a happy termination of their efforts.

"FORGOTTEN COMMANDMENTS" A DRAMA OF EPIC PROPORTIONS

"Forgotten Commandments," the feature presentation at the Belle today and Wednesday, besides having a cast of well known screen favorites including Sari Maritza, Gene Raymond, Marguerite Churchill and Irving Pichel, has something new in the way of screen entertainment.

It is the first big story built on the new revolution in finance—it hits the hearts of the world today, turned in anxious wonder on the threat of a new morality now sweeping entire nations. Nearly half the world is in turmoil—leering a new social system so revolutionary that it is changing the world. Now it comes to the screen!

"Forgotten Commandments" is alive! It is happening today!

Modern ideals—throwing off custom and convention, brandishing as foolish superstition that which humanity holds sacred; making a mockery of human love, of human ambition. What is going on here and there! What a subject for a grand drama!

And, "Forgotten Commandments" strikes effectively—comparing with dramatic force life and the new ..... the old vivified with stupendous scenes from the greatest spectacle ever filmed, Cecil B. DeMille's great 1923 "Ten Commandments," accompanied by a mighty musical background and climaxing with the opening of the Red Sea.

The Bible sequences serve to illustrate, and the spectacular scenes by the main plot—this sensational picture has a timeliness that is unhard and effectively at the heart of today's world. The Belle star-studded film is the above mentioned Sari Maritza, beautiful new screen discovery; Gene Raymond, Marguerite Churchill, Irving Pichel, Tenniss Tenniss," featuring Bill Tilden, Bell Sound News" and organ selections, which have built an impressive two hours' entertain-

Currency Questions Assume Great Importance at Parley

Must Consider Remonetization of Silver Increase Buying

Ottawa, July 26—(CP)—Currency questions are assuming great importance at the Imperial Conference. That phase of discussion was reopened at the outset, when a committee was created to deal with them. Since that time, although the committee has not yet sat, numerous plans, which may be submitted to this body, are current. The creation of a great Empire bloc is being looked into the various monetary values, is suggested. The remonetization of silver with a view to increasing purchasing power, is another proposal which it is rumored may be submitted to the committee. But, at this very early stage in the conference deliberations, it is impossible to say whether or not these reports are likely to develop into facts.

The Dominion's representation of the currency committee is Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce, who has given much study to the silver question. The importance of silver in the development of world trade has increased in recent years, Mr. Stevens. Without doubt his views on the remonetization of silver will receive much consideration.

Another important problem in its relation to trade is the cause of unemployment. On the part of many Empire statesmen is indicated by the speeches of heads of governments.

Essential to Trade

For the Indian delegation Sir Atul Chatterjee stressed the importance of the question of stabilization of monetary standards of the Empire". Exchange stability was essential to trade, he said. The advantages of a preferential system might also be swept away by unstable exchange.

Potato Growers to Benefit by New British Duty Levied

LONDON, July 26—Foreign potatoes imported into Great Britain will be subject to a duty of 2s 6d a hundredweight under an order issued today by the Board of Trade. The order issued tonight under the Abnormal Importations Act.

The order will become effective at midnight Wednesday.

The import duty will be a duty of 2s 6d a hundredweight on new potatoes imported between Nov. 1 and June 30, and both rates will be included in the duty of 2s 6d, with a lower duty of 10 per cent. now in force.

The Government issued the order on recommendation of the Import Advisory Committee, which explained recent abnormal importations of potatoes were seriously affecting British growers. The committee felt the situation necessitated action, in advance of its report on other horticultural products, which it expects to complete shortly.

"It will be a fine thing for Eastern Canada," said S. K. Hiley of Samuel Hiley & Son, 43 Church street, Toronto, last night when appraised of the British Government's decision in connection with "foreign potatoes", and he commented: "For some few years now there has been an embargo against our potatoes entering the British market, Eastern Canadians and particularly the people of the Province of Ontario, have tried to have the restriction lifted. In the meantime Germans, Belgians and French potatoes have been moving into the United Kingdom market. England, particularly, has been paying attractive figures for those potatoes. I think it will be a fine thing for the Dominion."

TWO SISTERS KILLED WHEN CAR IS STRUCK

Previously Had Attended a Funeral of Near Relative

TWO INJURED

Drove on Track After Waiting For Other Train to Pass

RIDGETOWN, July 26— While returning from the funeral of their cousin, two women were killed and two more were seriously injured when their car was struck by a fast Michigan Central westbound passenger train at Merlin, early.

The accident occurred about two miles west of Merlin, Misses on the Scales sideroad.

The dead are Mrs. Jacob Galbraith and Mrs. A. Maw, and the injured are Mrs. Robert Humphrey and Miss Jenny Spence. All are sisters with the exception of Mrs. Maw, who is a first cousin.

The four attended the funeral of their cousin, Mrs. Stanton of St. Thomas in Ridgetown in the afternoon. Following the funeral they called on Mrs. E. W. Spence in Ridgetown, who insisted that they stay for supper, but they refused. Stopped at Track

Miss Spence, who was driving the car, stopped at the crossing to allow an eastbound freight train to pass, and then started forward to cross. The front wheels of the car were just on the tracks when the westbound passenger struck the rear door and left side of the car with an electric signal post, which split the car in two.

Mrs. Galbraith and Mrs. Maw were riding in the rear seat, and were caught in the wreckage in addition.

Coroner J. R. MacPherson of Duart stated Mrs. Maw had been carried about 130 feet along the tracks and had sustained a serious fracture of the skull, causing instant death. Mrs. Galbraith was thrown some 60 feet and received a bad fracture at the base of the skull, and the neck and both legs were fractured.

The full extent of the injuries to Miss J. Spence and Mrs. Humphrey who were in the hospital, is not known. They are both suffering principally from shock. Miss Spence suffered cuts on the head and Mrs. Humphrey a smashed left shoulder. The four were all thrown to the ditch and the rear of the car flung along the track for about 100 feet. The injured were attended by Dr. Walter E. Lake, of Ridgetown, and first removed to the residence of Dr. Jones on Talbot Road, a few miles from there to a Chatham hospital.

Dr. MacPherson, empanelled a jury after the remains of the victims had been removed to Cecil-es Undertaking Parlors, Ridgetown, and will hold an inquest.

GERMAN MAKES OCEAN FLIGHT

Completes Third Trip and is Now on Way to Montreal

Cartwright, Labrador, July 26—(CP)—Completing his third westward transatlantic crossing, German aviator, and his three companions, Wolfgang Von Gronau arrived at this port on Labrador-to-Lake-Melville section of the Labrador coast this afternoon.

Gronau, no stranger to this terrain on his long trips of flying in North American Continent, plans to take off Tuesday on a flight of 600 miles to Montreal, completing the third leg of his journey from Germany to Canada.

Gronau, with Gert von Roth, second pilot, Franz Hack, mechanic, and Fritz Beyerle, wireless operator, left Germany on Saturday last. They reached Iceland and then flew to Greenland, reaching Julianehaab, from which point they came on to Labrador.

Gronau's last flight from Greenland was a long one, 1,000 miles, when appraised of the British Government's decision in connection with "foreign potatoes", and he commented: "For some few years now there has been an embargo against our potatoes entering the British market, Eastern Canadians and particularly the people of the Province of Ontario, have tried to have the restriction lifted. In the meantime Germans, Belgians and French potatoes have been moving into the United Kingdom market. England, particularly, has been paying attractive figures for those potatoes. PETERBOROBOYDROWNS IN POND IN BRICKYARD

Peterboro, July 26.—Stanley Cain, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Cain of this city, was drowned late Monday afternoon in a pond in the Curtis Brothers' brick yards. The tragedy took place when the boy was playing on a raft. He was left alone for a few minutes by his two chums who went to get apples, and when they returned the little chap was no where to be seen. The two chums waited home with the drowned boy's clothes, and the coroner was notified later of the drowning that the alarm was given. Firemen dragged for several hours before they recovered the body.

PIN IS REMOVED FROM BABY'S THROAT

Owen Sound, July 26.—Carl Hepburn, 13-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Hepburn, Hope Island, is safe and healthy today after having had a wide open safety pin removed from his throat. The baby was sent to the local hospital by Dr. S. J. Stott of Wiarton, and an X-ray examination at the local hospital revealed that he had swallow-ed a pin. The pin was too big to go down the throat, and had become lodged there with the open point.

The rest of life fades away with the lengthening of the journey.—Clarence Darrow.

SOON TO FACE TWO ORDEALS

Mrs. Miller, Aviatrix to Answer Charge of Illegal Entry

Miami, Fla., July 26.—Mrs. Jessica M. Keith-Miller, Australian flyer, faces trouble when she lands here next week.

On Monday she will appear at a closed hearing before immigration officials. Friday she will go into the state courts as a defense witness for Lieut. Hugo Pirnn, former British army aviator, charged with murder in the shooting of Clarence, Haden Clark, writer.

He was shot by Keith-Miller's husband April 21st where he and Lancaster both were guests. Both she and Lancaster expressed belief that Clark shot himself but forged suicide notes and other circumstances led to Lancaster's indictment.

Lancaster also was named in an immigration warrant, charging illegal entry to the United States but service was withheld pending the outcome of the murder trial.

Mrs. Keith-Miller arrived by chartered plane from Nassau, May 27, 1931, illegally. She is under $1,000 bond pending her hearing.

No ruling of her status will be made until officials at Washington have studied the evidence. The aviatrix contends her presence here is legal.

Dublin, Irish Free State, July 26 (CP) Cabby—Almost prohibitive duties on imports from Britain were levied by the Irish Free State Monday night, and simultaneously the Irish Government's already aroused speculation as to whether negotiations on the British differences might be reopened.

The announcement was the signature by Sean T. O'Kelly, Hugo Flynn, parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Finance, of London. All the Government would say was that he was on important Government mission."

Of all the duties published today by the Irish Free State only those on pigs, meat and potatoes will affect Britain.

Publication of the list follows the passing on Friday of the Emergency Duties Bill, by which the executive council may levy duties at any amount on British goods.

Iron and steel products, cement and electrical appliances will be taxed 20 per cent. ad valorem. The importation of cheese is prohibited, while heavy duties are imposed on coal, pigs, meat, sausages and sugar products. In certain cases the produce of Northern Ireland is exempt from the duties.

The sum involved in these duties is estimated at £3,000,000 a year, but the value of the trade is expected to be greatly cut. Last year, State duties is much greater. In 1931 imports of cheese from the Free State to Great Britain were valued at $150,000,000 and exports at $180,000,000. Three-quarters of the total trade of the Free State.

POLE HELD ON FRAUD COUNT

Money Collected to Send Children to Camp

Toronto, July 26—John Vasvinsky, 19-year-old Polish athlete and instructor at a Polish club, was arrested Saturday night by Detective Wilson, charged with fraud and theft.

Vasvinsky was also known under the name of John Bunyan. He is alleged to have secured sums of money ranging up to $8 by fraud from people who thought he was going to send their children to a Y.M.C.A. summer camp. Last week, police said, there was a large assembly of women and children outside a building in the west end of the city, waiting for a truck to transport the children to the camp. When police made inquiries they found that Vasvinsky had collected from them to cover the cost of board and lodging for the children and to pay for a truck to carry the baggage.

Neither promoter nor truck arrived on the scene, and the police took out warrants for the arrest of Vasvinsky. He is also charged with theft of a radio set from Captain's 298 College Street.

Deux Rivieres, Ont., July 27.—(By The Canadian Press)—Four of a party of nine river drivers, employed at sweeping on the Ottawa River for the Upper Ottawa Improvement Company, perished today when their boat was sucked into the eddy of the True Rapids and capsized as they were endeavoring to run the turbulent part of the river. Another member of the party is not accounted for and it is feared that he met the same fate as his four fellow-workers. Three managed to cling to the upturned boat and reached the shore safely while another swam to safety.

The Known Drowned

Clarence Desormeau, 17, of Crest, Que., formerly of North Bay.
Earl McCullough, 26, married, Mattawa, Ont.
Joseph Renard, 20, Mackey's Station, Ont.
George Ducharme, 23, Sturgeon Falls.

Thomas McGivern, Mackey's Station, Ont.

Those Who Scrambled to Safety

Victor Diastelle, Mattawa.
Joseph Fleury, Mattawa.
Red Serrard, Mackey's Station (father of one of the drowned men.)
Paul Beaudoin, Mattawa, (swam to safety).

Smoked Into Backwash

The swamping of the boat was witnessed by Wallace Stewart, of Stonecliffe, who was patrolling the river. The boat was apparently shooting the rapids and making good progress when suddenly it was driven sideways into the backwash of the rapids and capsized almost instantly. He saw three cling to the upturned boat and Beaudoin stroke for the shore. Stewart had no means of offering assistance.

The tragedy occurred shortly after the gang had put out for the day's work. They moved into the rapids to break a log jam and had barely reach the boom when they were caught in the back tow of the swirling waters. A party of Mattawa men, headed by Philip Lamothe, left by motor boat for the bodies of the drowned men.

COL. McNIDER SOON TO LEAVE

Will Assist Hoover in Pending Political Campaign

Ottawa, July 27—Colonel Hanford MacNider, for nearly two years United States Minister to Canada, will resign to give up his post within a short time. He will be given leave of absence by the State Department to assist Washington's political campaign, it may plunge into the Hoover campaign. He will be chairman of the Republican Service League, an organization active politically among the ex-service soldiers.

After the close of the campaign MacNider will tender his resignation as United States Minister. He may be invited to return to Iowa, where he has large interests. He would like to sever his connection with the Legion as soon, but believes it would be questionable taste to do so immediately following the signing of the St. Lawrence Waterway Treaty, to accomplish which was the reason for his being sent to Ottawa. Before he was appointed he was National Commander of the American Legion, and is a political figure among ex-service soldiers who served in the Great War.

BEAVERBROOK PREDICTS ROW

Daily Express Features Cabled Editorials From Ottawa

London, July 27 — (By Thomas Marlowe, Canadian Press Staff Writer)—Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express today began broadcasting the story of how 20 gentlemen of the press were sent to the Ottawa conference office last by the publicity director to hear "secret" speeches to Canadian papers attacking Lord Beavrbrook for his attack on the "Old Lady of Threadneedle Street," the Bank of England at Ottawa."

Editorials Cabled

These cabled, added the publicity director "were sent privately by the Dominions office but sent from Ottawa and submitted to the press as a matter of public interest." The cable consisted of editorials from the Toronto Globe and the Ottawa Journal, and they are published in full today by the Daily Express. Lord Beaverbrook's paper concludes the story by recounting speculations as to who paid the cable tolls, and prophesies a "first class row" on this point.

Wide publicity has been given the Daily Express' attack by British newspapers. Much comment has been occasioned by Lord Beaverbrook's charge in the Sunday Express that Mr. Baldwin did not intend to accept "the Canadian offer," and that, on his return to England, he would "tell the people outright as he has never known before."

Disarmament Miracle Not Expected Says German

World Gold Demand Not Overproduction Is Cause of Slump

Completion of Process of Values or Raising of Price Level to Which Business Has Been Adjusted Are Two Avenues of Procedure to Meet Situation

Amherst, Mass., July 27.—A world demand for gold, and not overproduction, greater efficiency, extravagance, prohibition, or form of government, Professor C. F. Warren of Cornell University said today, is the cause of the present economic depression.

Lack of a general understanding of the cause of the depression, Professor Warren said in an address at Massachusetts State College, was the primary reason why its cure had not been effected.

The avenues of procedure to meet the situation were open, Professor Warren said. Completion of the process of deflation to the point of revaluation, or a raising of the price level to the level to which business is adjusted. The latter, he said, means giving the circulation privilege to certain bonds is mildly reflationary. The tax on bankcheques and increase in postage rates are deflationary measures.

Return to Gold Basis Cause

The return of nations of the world to the gold basis with a fixed relationship to the dollar, Professor Warren said, so enhanced its value that over-building and an unbalanced flow in stock values resulted.

"If we wish to cure the situation rather than let deflation take its course," Professor Warren said, "there are many ways of increasing the currency. If we are to adopt any one of these, it must be prepared, if necessary, to suspend gold payments for a time, as it is very probable that any means which would go far enough to restore property might also result in withdrawals before the situation is corrected."

RUSS DUMPING IS DISCUSSED BY DELEGATES

Dairy Producers Want Preference Maintained

(By George Hambleton)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

OTTAWA, July 27.—Conversations on Russian dumping have opened between British and Canadian delegations at the Empire Conference. They turn, it is understood chiefly on butter.

Canadian lumber generally now has a preference of ten per cent in the British Market. This, Canadian Lumbermen contend, is not sufficient to overcome the difference in exchange with Scandinavian countries, but the chief difficulty is the overhang of Russian dumping.

Secrecy on Dumping

Secrecy surrounds the conversations but rumor is busy. One has it that while admitting no one can blame the dumping, the British have given satisfactory assurances of their intention to act. Another takes the exactly contrary position that the British, owing to their credit commitments, have decided to take any action at all. The headquarters declared the latter version to be absolutely without foundation. The official confirmation of the first rumor available. So far as can be ascertained from authoritative sources, the British attitude is one of willingness to consider the question in all its bearings, that the discussions are in progress.

Dairy Products

Discussions between Dominions representatives on Dairy Products and meats have practically concluded.

The present preference on Empire butter is 15 shillings per hundred weight. The British Market works out at around ten per cent. The Australian preference is less as it is understood, wasn't this ten per cent, maintained as a minimum with an increase to fifteen per cent. on certain dairy products.

Conversations on meat are expected to conclude today. The proposal under discussion, it is understood, is that Great Britain should impose a tariff of one penny per pound on foreign meatsc except Argentine; one and a half cents per pound on Argentine meat, Empire meat free.

VENGEANCE OF STUDENT KILLS AUNT

Youth Confesses Without Apparent Regret Murder

Calm and apparently without regret, the youth told how he had charged with murder for the knifing early yesterday, of Mrs. Lillian Badger.

Father Wounded

Meanwhile, William R. Babcock, head of the Philippine delegation to the Olympic games and former business partner of Templeton's father, lay dangerously wounded in a San Jose hospital.

The desire for revenge, the confession related, hinged on the five-year illness of Templeton's father and George D. Templeton, Manila.

WHISPER PLOT BY RADICALS

FRAGMENT OF METAL FITS INTO WOUND

Medical Advisor Submits Evidence and Exhibit

NOVGARD'S DEATH

Fracture of Skull Blamed By Dr. Frankish For Death

Sudbury, Ont., July 27—A piece of metal which exactly fitted a fracture in the skull of Conrad Novgard, who died in the Sudbury police cells on June 3 was produced by Dr. Edgar R. Frankish, medical advisor to the Attorney General's department, at the second inquest into Novgard's death before Coroner G. R. Jones, and a jury here. The piece, it was said by the coroner, was removed from the inside of the door frame of the police van by Investigator Stringer, of the Ontario Provincial Police and himself.

No Doubt of Cause

"I have no doubt," Dr. Frankish said that Conrad Novgard's death was caused by a fractured skull, received by striking his head against this metal protection." The injury to the dead man's skull could not have been caused by a blow from the police billy, Dr. Frankish said, any other blunt instrument, he said.

Dr. Frankish performed the post mortem on Novgard's body on July 12, more than a month after the man's death, at the request of his brother Evald Novgard, Hamilton. Decomposition had already reached a stage that it was impossible to state the conditions of the organs of the body, he said.

The book will be written by hand, on fine calfskin vellum, and bound in full purple Levant Morocco leather. The pages will measure nearly 135 ins., measure about 22 by 16 inches, and contain 500 pages.

The book has only one other counterpart in existence, a copy now reposing in the Scottish War Memorial at Edinburgh.

Sinking Meant More Than Being Another Boat at Bottom of the Sea

Chicago, July 27—To Count Felix Von Luckner the sinking of the German training ship, Niobe meant more than just another vessel at the bottom of the ocean.

With her passed the first tangible result of his efforts in recruiting a post-war German navy.

"I never thought she'd sink," that was the grim terse tribute of the war-time commander to the Niobe which for two years he had trained young Germans in an effort to create a sea-power which went into eclipse at the end of the war.

Count Luckner, dubbed "Sea Devil" for his exploits during the conflict, read accounts of the disaster, talked of ships and men and recalled how the Niobe was the nucleus of a new German navy.

In 1930, he recalled, the Fatherland's sea forces were non-existent—its dreadnaughts and battle-cruisers at the bottom of Scapa Flow, where they had been scuttled two years before by their own commanders.

A dingy little Norwegian sailing vessel, its name forgotten, lay rusting on a mud-bank in Hamburg Harbor. This ship, Count Von Luckner purchased, named Niobe in memory of a boat on which he had sailed many years before, and thus' financial aid was enlisted by a series of lectures, equipped and manned as the first German warship after the war.

For two years he commanded the Niobe, tutoring young Germans in naval technique. In 1932 he allowed the government to buy back the ship. Five hundred men had seen service on her. The new German navy was begun—and the Count's work finished.

Germany Will Defy World Unless Granted Equality

Demands Equality and Release From Limitation of Post War Treaties Says Henchman of Ex-Kaiser and Von Papen Supporter

CALLS DISARMAMENT A MIRACLE

Sunday's Elections Unlikely to Result in Majority For Any Party in Reichstag or Coalition of Parties Say Observers

(By John A. Bouman)
(A. P. Staff Writer)

BERLIN, July 27.—The voice of General Kurt Von Schleicher, veteran of the Kaiser's army, spokesman of wild horses and power behind the throne of the Von Papen Government, was out in the open in the threatening election campaign today, with a note of defiance for the world.

Serves Notice

In an address last night he served virtual notice that unless Germany is granted equality and released from the limitations of the post-war treaties she will proceed to establish her own security by a reorganization of her armed forces.

Security for Germany, he said, could only be attained by the other powers scaling down their armaments to Germany's level, or by reorganizing—not increasing—Germany's own defences.

Regarding the alternative of reductions of armaments of other countries, General Schleicher said, "There aren't many who believe that a miracle will happen."

Other Course

"We shall take the other course," he added, "if security and equality are denied us in the future."

Persons closely in touch with political developments predicted today that Sunday's election would not result in a majority for the Nationalist alliance, the Right-ist supporters of Von Papen, including Hitler's Nazis, or the Coalition of Socialists and Centrists which run the Government under Dr. Heinrich Bruening.

Schools for Daily Study of Bible in Vacation in Swing

Large Classes Formed in Various Parts of City

The Daily Vacation Bible School movement has this year gained considerable momentum in the city of Belleville when compared with the extent of the work in other centres.

Under the inspiration of the Canadian Secretary, Rev. S. Buckingham, of Ottawa, there are at present here five or six schools established.

Eight years ago on the occasion of his sojourn here, summer Rev. Mr. Buckingham led a group of boys in the Bible study. Now, in addition to the usual routine of the industrial art or hammock making was taught. Also boys and girls at the Dundas St. Mission were guided by members of the W.C.T.U. then too. Now another central school is in operation at the latter named point with Fred H. Sherry as principal. Miss Helen Denike has rendered valuable assistance as pianist and is the direction of various aspects of the programs.

Other Schools.

Mrs. (Dr.) Moore of the local W.C.T.U., Rev. J. S. McMullen and others are likewise giving much splendid aid to the endeavour. Over forty are in attendance. The usual plan is followed of an opening devotional period lasting around twenty minutes. Familiar songs are sung and talks are given by various leaders and interested visitors. Contests are conducted in memorizing Scripture passages. Games for different ages are played, even to softball on adjacent land. The session of five days a week winds up early before dinner time each noon with a patriotic salute and closing exercises.

Another section of the city is covered by the Herchimer Avenue Anglican junior W.A. under the leadership of Miss Jones at 266 Dundas Street East. Miss Jennie Reeds is also there.

At Emmanuel S. S.

In the Sunday School rooms of Emmanuel Presbyterian Church an eager class of 32 boys and girls are conducted each week in the afternoons excepting Saturday and Sunday with Miss Ruby Pierson at the helm. She is assisted by the following workers: Mrs. R. Gay, Miss Hettie Mason, Miss Marsakas and Miss N. Meyers.

On the old Albert College grounds Miss Ada Zoller is principal of seventy two children in that locality. Her assistants are Miss Ethel Anderson, Miss Ina Baker and Miss Helen Baker.

Holloway Street Church has in charge in its cosy basement and spacious lawn an enrolment of forty-three in charge of Mrs. Sweetland, Willside Street, with Miss R. Mc-Mullen attending to many details and Mrs. F. M. Hubbs as pianist. School Value.

In most cases as elsewhere the services of workers and helpers are all voluntary and the children enter into the programs heartily. Some of course, get away on vacations but even those attending find the monitory of life around home surroundings much relieved by this type of environment supervised. Practically no expense is involved. This diversified scheme though contributions and gifts to the effectiveness of the undertaking. At times those connected in the conduct of affairs are spelled and relieved and some and other workers are enlisted.

A great opportunity is afforded the mothers to adjust their own recreation periodically to get a grip on youth better than a short day session permits of through lack of visiting to contact.

Other Instruction.

FREIGHT TRAINS WITH PASSENGER LISTS

The great trek to the west has begun. Officially there will be no harvested special of the year taking men to the west to help harvest the country's crop which has been reported in all sections, but every freight train which now pulls through the city has its quota of transient travellers who are making their way to the prairie provinces all over the east of the Dominion where they have been located since early spring when the trek was first cautioned. Each freight which for the past few days has been loaded with men hanging to grab irons, riding in the "side door" Pullmans or laying flat on the swaying roof of freight cars. Others higher up in the caste or scale of hobodom, scorning such lower conveyances as these, such as freight trains, sneeonce themselves comfortably on the car steps of flying passenger trains or hang solidly between tender and locomotive, behind the baggage. Years ago the demand for men was expressed to a greater degree than now, but with new and larger equipment to reap and thresh the crops, the giant machines now are capable of doing in one day work that would formerly require the work of many hundreds of men. "No Help Wanted" signs are out in many districts but the lure of the open prairies offers an excuse to travel.

MADE JOURNEY IN FREAK WAY

Every Mode of Transportation Used by Evicted Family

North Bay, Ont., July 27—Destitute, after being evicted from their home by a landlord, Mrs. Anna Vatmass, Ottawa, and her six children, the youngest three years of age, accomplished a trip to Ottawa in North Bay en route to the home of Mrs. Vanmass's father in Kenora, having utilized various modes of transportation to make the first lap of their journey.

Bridging from Ottawa Saturday night with the town of Kenora as their destination and with little clothing other than that on their backs and the small sum of $10 in cash, the party of eight travelled by taxi, a passing motorists car, horse and buggy, freight train and at times by foot to complete the journey to North Bay.

TENSION TENSE AS CHINA FAILS

Have Not Fulfilled Pledge to Secure Liberation of Japanese

Tokyo, July 27—The Chino-Japanese tension in Jehol Province, Manchuria, which recently appeared to be lessening grew tense again today when Chinese military authorities failed to fulfill their pledge to secure the liberation of Gombiro Ishimoto, Japanese army representative who was kidnaped on July 19.

A despatch to the Rengo News Agency from Chinchow said Japanese military officials announced they had identified the captors of Mr.Ishimoto and they were volunteer allies of Manchukuo Chief Chang Hsueh-Liang.

For this reason serious trouble was expected unless the captives were freed soon.

England Offered Definite Proposals by Four States On Butter, Cheese, Milk

Asks 10 Per Cent Preference Continued and Raised in Some Cases

DELEGATES AGREE

MAYBE QUOTA

Improvement in Cheese Industry Expected From Move

Canada Asks England For British Meat Trade

Meat Market is Largest in Any One Classification

Ottawa, July 27—Australia, New Zealand, Irish Free State and Canada are in accord in asking that Britain give their dairy products a preference in the markets of the United Kingdom. The sub-committee of the Imperial Economic Conference dealing with this subject met Monday and Tuesday and it is understood the delegates of these Dominions had no difficulty in seeing eye to eye in the matter. Britain, since it is exclusively an importer of dairy products, is not represented on the sub-committee. The representatives of the exporting Dominions were left to decide among themselves, and when they have formulated a definite proposal they will submit it to the British delegation, who will decide to what extent it can be met.

Dawson Speaks Later

At present Empire-produced butter, cheese, condensed milk and other dairy products are allowed free into the markets of the United Kingdom, and a tariff of approximately ten per cent. is levied against foreign dairy products. This has been very helpful, according to reports coming from the sub-committee, and Britain will be asked to continue it and if possible to increase it in some cases. The question of a quota will be discussed later.

No formal resolution was put to the committee, delegates stating that all were agreed on the principle that a preference had helped, even though it was small, but butter and cheese are very low at the present time, and there are no opportunities for betterment in the future.

Important in Canada

Dairying is one of the most important branches of agriculture in Canada, particularly Ontario and Quebec, and the progress of this committee will be regarded in that country as one of the most vital in the entire conference. Experts look forward not only to improvement in the cheese industry but a new development in the production of various forms of condensed milk.

Benefits Already Felt

Since the British tariff against foreign condensed milk came into effect large orders have been placed in this country by British firms and some plants have had to considerably increase their milk purchases to supply the demand. This is regarded by experts in the dairy industry as a very important development, as much more money is left in the country when the raw milk is made into either butter or cheese.

Canada's cheese pria a premium over all other imported cheese in the British market, but despite this the volume fell off steadily for years. There are great possibilities in getting back to something like the production of the early part of the century.

Back in 1904 this country shipped to the United Kingdom 221,000,000 lbs. of cheese in one year. Last year the total was 79,153,200 lbs. The lowest level was reached in 1930, when the total was only 73,-949,664. In 1930 Canada did purchase any butter to the Motherland and last year imported 8,656,900 lbs.

Cause of Falling Off

The cause of the tremendous falling off in dairy products is explained largely by the increased domestic consumption of milk. Canadians have become accustomed to drinking more milk and eating more ice cream, and although the actual milk production has increased, exports have fallen off.

Many farmers of Eastern Ontario and Quebec have found it more remunerative to ship cream to United States until the high tariff across the line checked that trade. There are now back making milk or butter. It has been estimated that had all the additional milk produced during the past eight or nine years been made into cheese, Canada's cheese output would now reach about 200,000,000 annually.

Swing Now Reversed

Last year the swing was from cheese to butter, but this year there has been a slight decrease, about one per cent. in the production of creamery butter, whereas the production of cheese has increased 16 per cent. From December 1 to July 25 this year 567,367 boxes of cheese were inspected, whereas last year in the same period the total was 473,815 boxes. A box weighs about 83 pounds. The reason for the swing is the price. Butter in Montreal is selling around 17½ and cheese 9¼ cents, whereas butter ought to be a little over twice as dear, to bring equal returns.

FARM UNION DEFENDS FARM AND THE HOME

Don't Want Anyone Shot But—Says Delegate at Saskatoon

PASS RESOLUTION

Declare Banks Forcing The Hands of Municipalities

Saskatoon, July 27—Farmers of Saskatchewan are more active again to defend their farms and homes against sales and evictions. A wave of indignation swept over the convention of the United Farmers of Canada, Saskatchewan section, here Tuesday as speakers told the delegates they could not stand by while seizure and evictions during the coming autumn.

By a unanimous vote the convention passed a resolution declaring: "Whereas the economic conditions of agriculture in Saskatchewan have reached a position where it is necessary for this organization, the United Farmers of Canada, Saskatchewan Section, to take a definite stand for the protection of the homes of the people;

"Therefore it is resolved, That every local body should organize itself a defense unit for the protection of our homes against seizures, evictions and forced sales, and cooperate with other organizations with this end in view."

Passage of the resolution climaxed a debate in which embattled farmers declared the banks were forcing the hands of municipalities and driving them to make forced collection of taxes. Throughout it was stressed the farmers had no desire to evade payment of taxes when they had the means to pay. They objected to being forced out of their homes because they had no money to pay through no fault of their own.

"We don't want anybody to get shot," declared Jerry Gough of Wilkie, "we want to keep within the law, but the law is always on the other side."

Detroit, July 26—Kid McCoy, once the welterweight champion of the world, once a millionaire sportsman with a French villa and an Italian estate, once a salesman of suspenders in Detroit today began his "start over again" after his release on parole from San Quentin Prison, where he served eight years out of a twenty year term for manslaughter.

The kid, whose real name is Norman Selby, is 42. He came here yesterday to take a job as physical director for a motor company and the companion on the journey from California was Mike, a caricature of a prize fighter.

Slightly bald and grey, but looking healthy and strong, the Kid said he is "going back to work, and I'm putting the past behind."

NORTH ROUTE WOULD OFFER GREAT SAVING

Von Gronau, Interpid German Flier Lands at Montreal

STARTED FRIDAY

Flying Ship Used Has Made Three Ocean Crossings

Montreal, July 27.—Captain Wolfgang von Gronau, veteran German flier, landed his Dornier-Wahl flying boat at Fairchild Aerodrome Base in Montreal Harbor at 7.06 p.m. E.S.T., completing a trans-Atlantic flight which began Friday morning at Ust, Island of Sylt, Germany and carried him through the Arctic Circle, Greenland and Labrador to the St. Lawrence River Valley.

Three Others in Plane

Accompanying Captain Von Gronau were Gert von Bothkopfen, Franz Hack, mechanic; and Fritz Albrecht, wireless operator. The flight took off from Cartwright, on the Labrador coast at 10.20 E.S.T., Tuesday morning, and flew straight up the St. Lawrence River from the Gaspe Basin, following the south shore of the river from the Gaspe Peninsula.

Representatives of the German Consulate, the City of Montreal and several flying clubs and flying companies greeted the four visitors as the pontoon flying boat taxied to the seaplane ramp across the harbor from the city.

No Novices

The tall German flier and his aged flying boat are no strangers to trans-Atlantic flights. The dull metal hull of the old Dornier-Wahl splashed into the salty Atlantic at the Azores Islands, Captain Frank P. Courtney, aboard in 1928 and bobbed up and down on the swell for four days before Courtney and Ellsworth Howard of Montreal, his passengers were rescued. The plane was salvaged and repaired. Captain Gerald Chappell, Norwegian explorer, had the Wahl nubbing nose with the plane when he flew to the North a short time later.

Von Gronau won possession of the ship and started a flying school at Ust on the Island of Sylt. In 1930 he brought two students with him as engineer and wireless operators and for the sales pitch to the northern route.

Von Gronau had him over the Orkneys to Iceland, across to Greenland, high over the ice cap and down to Labrador, across the Davis Straits. From Labrador he flew to Newfoundland, and stopped briefly at Halifax and then skirted the Atlantic seaboard to New York. The flying time was forty-seven hours.

Last year he flew over the route again in the northern route. His course was identical as far as Greenland but instead of going south from Labrador he pressed on westward and cut down through the Province Quebec to James Bay, passing across Northern Ontario to Winnipeg and Chicago, ending his flight at Chicago.

Ranking her pilot in transatlantic seniority, the Wahl has flown the Atlantic seven times and a half times, counting the first unsuccessful flight. On each occasion the return trip to Europe was made in the confines of a ship's hold. Franz Hack, the mechanic, and Fritz Albrecht, wireless operator, made both previous flights with von Gronau and the Wahl, but for Gert von Roth this was a great adventure.

Service to Coast

An airmail service direct from Europe to the Pacific Coast was briefly outlined by Captain von Gronau in an interview with the Canadian Press tonight.

"The steamships are too fast now so we can offer little competition between Europe and New York," he said, "but a service direct from Europe via Iceland, Greenland and across the continent to the Pacific Coast, with intermediate stops, should offer many advantages and a great saving of time. It is to study such a project that we have made this present flight. We will rest here until Thursday and then make our way leisurely to Montreal, Chicago, Milwaukee and probably north again to Winnipeg and across the Pacific Coast. The flight will take about a fortnight, and we will make a comparative study of flying conditions over that route."

GUELPH POLICE COURT

Guelph, July 27—Hector Duncan, Waterdown youth charged with violently resisting arrest and also obtaining of a motor car, was sentenced out to serve of $50 in police court Tuesday. Ransome T. Green of Hamilton, charged with obtaining money under false pretences in the sum of $450 was released on bail of $1,000.

FILES ORDERED SEIZED

Windsor, July 27—Seizure of files and documents of the clients of the late Clarence D. Ferrari was ordered Tuesday at the office of the Supreme Court registrar at Sandwich, and the sheriff was instructed to proceed. Executors of the Ferrari estate claim that the office was locked after the death of Mr. Ferrari and that the owners are holding everything because rent amounting to about $300 is unpaid.

ALLIGATORS TAKE PLACE OF CACTUSES

Regina, Sask., July 27 (CP) Folks who called cactuses last season in Saskatchewan's dry lands may adopt a new diminutive instead and a more optimistic one—at outlook in the central part of the wheat province, as testimony to the fine weather following in the wake of three years of drought, two alligators swim in a lily pond at the home of A. J. Haun. Neither has had reason to complain this season of dearth or rain or moisture.

BODY LOOKS LIKE GHOST

Cross-Eyed X-Rays Focus in Empty Space

Image

New York, July 27.—"Cross-eyed" X-rays make it possible to empty space a ghostlike, transparent image of the human body are shown here this week as new aid to medicine.

This shadow image is three-dimensional, as distinguished from the plain photographs can place calipers on it to measure the size of internal cavities.

The machine was developed by Dr. Jesse W. M. Dumond and Dr. Archer Hoyt of the California Institute of Technology, for use by the Henry Phipps Institute of the University of Pennsylvania.

Image in Space

The person whose likeness is produced stands behind a fluorescent screen and his image forms in space by two sets of X-ray photographs of the screen.

It stands facing him, the same as his likeness when he looks in a mirror. It is what scientists name "stereoscopically in empty image."

The illusion is produced by using the X-rays from two tubes that distance apart as human eyes, and so that the rays pass through the body of the person between them at the same instant. Each tub is turned on and off 60 times each second, producing two eye winking one after the other. Each tube makes a blinking shadow on the screen.

Out in front a device called an image finder picks up the light of these winking images. The selector of the finder is synchronized with the winks.

Measures Forms

The result is that the rays coming from the alternating images on the screen, focus into one image in front of the screen. At this focus the inner photographic forms appear forms.

Only a two-foot square section of the body is thus "materialized" at a time, but in the same size as the body of the person standing at the rays. It has the same realistic appearance and depth perception, giving the observer imagine that his hand could be put through the side.

The most promising medical use is for setting bones as they can be seen in three planes. Bones are fat and cartilage relation would represent a loss and therefore it was assumed these could be represented a private account.

Dr. Dumond says they were equally in the dark and agreed it must represent a private transaction, possibly gems from India re-shipped from London.

MYSTERY GOLD SHIPMENT CAUSES MUCH SURPRISE

London, July 27. — A "mystery" shipment of £540,000 in gold left Plymouth for New York today aboard the steamer Lafayette and the news of it caused much surprise on the London bullion market.

It was pointed out on the market that any transaction for sale of British gold at New York under the present exchange relation would represent a loss and therefore it was assumed Dr. F. Rundle represented a private account.

Others said they were equally in the dark and agreed it must represent a private transaction, possibly gems from India re-shipped from London.

GIRL JILTED HANGS SELF

Note Left, Explaining Cause of Rash Act

Oshawa, July 27—In a fit of despondency, believed to have been brought on by a quarrel with a boy friend, Lucy Ward, 19, last night hanged herself in her father's home at 345 Pine Avenue, Tuesday afternoon.

Her body, suspended by the cord of her dressing gown, was found ranging from the archway between the dining room and living room when her father, Charles Ward, an employe of General Motors, returned home from work Tuesday. Dr. R. W. Graham was called, but she had apparently been dead for over an hour.

A scarcey legible note in the girl's hand threw some light upon the tragedy.

"Dear Granny," it read. "I can't go on any longer, and I am going to join gemma. I did what God told me and he threw me over."

The girl's mother has been dead for several years, and "Granny" is believed to refer to a woman in Whitby who has long been an intimate friend of the family.

Coroner Dr. F. Rundle and Detective-Sergeant H. Flintoft investigated. Dr. Rundle intimated that he would hold an autopsy, but no inquest RELIGION AN ESCAPE?

Rev. Prof. Luccock of Yale Divinity School has urged that the church must meet the charge that religion is often an opiate and answer in a mood of humble self-examination the facts the large truth which lies behind that conception. Dr. Luccock claims that there is scarcely any other interpretation of religion today than that it is an escape, a running away from the harsh brutalities of reality into a refuge of phantasy which religion has built up. Some call it a handkerchief soaked with pious chloroform which drugs the world to insensitiveness to the real world about.

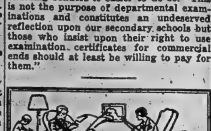
Prof. Luccock says this charge is often glibly made but should not therefore be merely denied. He says that only a person, blind, dumb and deaf could deny that religion has often been used as a means of finding illicit shelters of the soul, of enabling men to escape things they had no right to escape. Religion at its worst claims to have often been made a substitute for righteousness, rather than an incentive to ethical action.

Prof. Luccock admits that religion may be the most immoral thing in the world especially when it gives satisfaction without the exercise of sin.

Yet real religion can be put in the form of an escape, an escape not from reality, but from futility, from fear, from the dreadful sense of a disjointed order of lie which thwarts and mangles millions of lives. Sharing the faith of Jesus provides a way of escape from the blankness of meaningless world. It means an escape from the chaos and woe of a deranged world. Millions have worshipped at the shrine of the unknown, mysterious power, and these gods have demanded their human sacrifices. The present world chaos he says is due to our compensating dismissal of ethics to use the words of Professor Charles A. Beard.

FABLES AND TRUTH

Belleville will soon be able to write fables from nature. We have had a fish story which is a marvel in itself, we have had the tale of the sow with the golden ear, a five foot snake lately that was neck was punctured and he had to disgorge himself of the meal which had died since he ate it.



Now these facts (and they are facts in the heart of nature by humans who dare not lie, ought to lend encouragement to the romancer of fish stories who has been rather too often left very strange to relate while the natural kingdom of birds, beasts, and fish has been doing the odd things to excite human, humane interest have been like clams, not a one boasting of the number and size of his catch. Confounded by the truth itself in the stories of real animal and bird and fish life of which have appeared in the press! That is what it looks like, there is no doubt of that.

Now is the time for some one bold and doctored up the cat and the fiddle riddle and had no more basis than we have for his excursion into the skies with the moon. What about the young farmers with an opportunity to win fame! Time to get busy.

REPORT ON EDUCATION

Education in Ontario during last year continued to make progress despite the stringency and the pressing need of prudent economy says the Hon. George S. Henry, Minister of Education in the annual report of the Department. Costs of education he says were certain to come up for discussion. As to the cutting of expenditure by boards of education, the Minister says they have done wisely and until improvement is marked, "no step should be neglected that lessens the taxation of the people." He is confident that trustees generally will exercise these powers with discretion and since the control over taxation of school purposes is in their hands, economies, without injury to the schools, should result. "By keeping in close touch with the ratepayers, even to a degree not directly specified by the law, they will be able to carry the judgment of all those whom they represent in school matters. This is especially needful in respect to new undertakings, such as buildings or extension of existing buildings. Again he says sympathy is due trustees "who face a situation of which we have no previous experience in maintaining the educational standards of our young people." It is a commonplace consideration that the schools are different from and of more vital consequence to the community than any other form of social activity. The future of the country being dependent upon the growing generation is the object that has its keyed in view. The present stringency will pass. When it does, the record of the province in education should show no permanent ill effects."

Premier Henry shows the increased fees for, examinations are due to the desire for economy in public expenditures as the cost of examinations to the province is very heavy. He says that many candidates, he is informed employ the certificates gained in seeking positions in business life and that a claim to possess matriculation standing renders it easier to do so. "This is not the purpose of departmental examinations and constitutes an undeserved reflection upon our secondary schools but those who insist upon their right to use examination certificates for commercial ends should at least be willing to pay for them."

QUIET WORK
(Matthew Arnold)

One lesson, Nature, let me learn of thee,
One lesson which in every wind is blown,
One lesson of two duties kept at one
Though the loud world proclaim their enmity—

Of toil unsevered from tranquillity;
Of labor that in lasting fruit outgrows
Far nobler schemes, accomplished in repose,
Too great for haste, too high for rivalry.

Yes, while on earth, a thousand discords ring,
Man's fitful uproar mingling with his toil,
Still do thy sleepless ministers move on.

Their glorious tasks in silence perfecting;
Still working, blaming still our vain turmoil,
Laborers that shall not fail when man is gone.

HUMAN INTERESTS

Is the newspaper "only a business?" If you can answer that question affirmatively after reading these facts, either our writing or your reading needs an overhauling, remarks the 'Editor and Publisher.' (New York), telling the following human interest story.

"Louis Bringmann, 60 year old German cook, plowed by his years, joined New York's unemployed army. Penniless, he at last found shelter under a corrugated box on a Brooklyn theatre fire-escape, and marked his flimsy home with a sign that he be not disturbed. But the laws covering theatre exits are sternly enforced. A policeman reluctantly moved the old man off his perch, and, returning to the station house, gave the yarn to the reporters. It wasn't worth much, a stick or so in the morning's press, but it was read by a number of people. One offered a job for life as a gardener on a Jersey estate. Others sent money to newspapers. But Bringmann had vanished.

"The World-Telegram found an editorial in the tragedy of the old man's disappearance just as his troubles were over, never dreaming that newspaper editorials were his favorite reading matter. He was accustomed to clip the editorial page out and pocket it for leisure reading. The other morning, he picked out this particular page and was startled to read his own name and story. Skipping a line, he trudged to a police station where officers and newspapermen greeted him with whoops of joy. The Jersey job was checked by telephone and found to be still open. And at the Times office in Manhattan, there awaited $35 in donations resulting from the brief mention in the editorial page nut

WELLINGTON WINS LAST ONE

Defeat Junior Moose 4-2 in Last Scheduled Game

Playing in a rather drizzling rain the Wellington juniors won their final game in the league schedule, when they defeated Junior Moose by the score of 4 to 2 at the Fair grounds Tuesday evening.

Bill Hale, a little left hander for the visitors, hurled steady ball during the game despite the fact, that it was raining quite hard at times and the ball became somewhat slippery. Kelleher was chosen to hurl for the Moose boys this being his first start on the mound. Although Kelleher was always considered an outfielder in the past he pitched creditable ball and the loss was in no way his fault. Bob Green, Wellington's big hitter of the year, went hitless on Tuesday evening, when he rounded out to the pitcher, struck out and flew out to the centre fielder. Bill Wellington hitcher, the only Wellington batter to collect two hits as did Trapp, who caught for the Moosekids. The game was called at the end of six innings on account of rain.

The B.A.A.A.-Crystalac game was postponed on account of rain. On Saturday afternoon, the first game of the Junior league play-offs will be played at the Fair grounds between the league leading B.A.A.A kids and the second place Wellington juniors. The series will be the best two out of three games the second game being played in Wellington on Monday.

The line-ups:

Wellington—Sloin, Noble, Burley, Greer, Munn, Vanderveter, Watt, Fillingham.

Moose—Burtt, Grant, Robinson, Kelleher, Arnold, Trapp, Semain, Flunder and Munnings.

CANADA'S HOPE HIGH IN SPRINTS

'Peerless' Percy Williams is Back to His Top Form

By Elmer Dulmage, Canadian Staff Writer.

Los Angeles, July 27—Canada's Olympic hope, Percy Williams, looked today, after a somewhat rest less night, more like Percy Williams the "peerl-ss Percy" of 1928—is back in form all right and is expected to go into Saturday following Williams' training sprints yesterday, and late last night members of the team were still talking about it all.

Williams was warming up in a relay yesterday with Hamilton Russell of Toronto. They ran side by side for the first 50 metres of the 100 metre track. Then Williams for the first time since he started training for the present Olympiad, "turned on the heat." A terrific burst of speed by the Vancouver boy left the speedy Toronto girl and breezed the last yards ahead of her. Just how fast Williams ran that last 50 yards no one knows but according to observers it was in better than present world record time, and Percy said he was feeling the "dicky" leg which has troubled him since the British Empire games in 1930.

With Williams in proper condition, the Dominion's hopes for the 100 and 200 metre events are accordingly. Blondie Bert Pearson of Hamilton, coupled with the Vancouver lad, will be a pair of aces who may win plenty of pots.

There was also good news regarding Allen Meagher of Halifax, Jr., shot-putter, Chairman of the Canadian Olympic committee, declared he would not run for Canada because "we have better sprinters." Miss Meagher limped slightly during practice yesterday, but was not at her best. Mulvihill started shot putting and gains her form and displays speed that will not warrant her team, and may still be chosen to run in the relay.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

There seems to be plenty of controversy in regards to the play-offs in the Intermediate series of the Quinte Softball League at present. Each team manager naturally has a different view in the matter as they are looking towards the welfare of their own particular team. The matter of league play-offs should have been definitely settled before the teams ever took the field for the opening game of the current season. On the other hand the team managers have absolutely nothing to say in league affairs they are merely secondary screws as right the team representatives were supposed but satisfied with the organization of the league last year and elected, or suggested as the case may be, a neutral body of some local citizens who were to handle all league affairs in 1932. The teams today are taking either too much for granted as the present league executive are "all right there" and can handle the league affairs as they see fit.

To date the present executive have handled the situation very well and it left alone could, quite readily decide the matter of a best of three play-off series. In the first two teams or the first three games the team that is ahead at the end of the season will be declared the winner. But the league executive should appoint competent officials and then back these officials to the limit, if they think that their work is of such a nature as to warrant the league's moral support on the matter, or in the committee rooms. It is quite natural that a team will get "hot under the collar" after giving a game on close decisions but the league president should be able to tell whether the official is competent or not. The Bellevile girls' loop has been unfortunate so far this year as there has been little or no umpire batting on the field. This alone appears very highly of the umpiring to date in the loop. There are but five more scheduled games in the girls' league with two postponed games to be played later.

We understand that Knotty Lee is about to bring his All Canadian post-nuptial baseball team to Belleville again next Wednesday afternoon. The team he is piloting them against the famous Miami Beach girls' baseball team of Florida. If our memory serves us right this will be the first appearance of a girls' professional baseball team in Belleville since the appearance of the then outstanding Boston "Bloomers" who played in Belleville some years ago. We believe they played their game at the old "hospital lot" now occupied by St. Michael's School. This Florida team of girl ballers will articles.

be quite an attraction as baseball played by girls is somewhat of a novelty in Belleville. This team has played all through the United States and Canada and they claim had the unique distinction of striking out the one and only "Babe" Ruth while hurling for the Chattanooga, Tenn., club of the Southern League. Lee has made arrangements with the local Parks Board for the use of the baseball diamond on the afternoon of August 3rd.

There has been considerable controversy about town as to who Manager Grow should use at the pitching end of the game of Wolf Creturey, who will be an absentee from the team at least for a week. After carefully looking over the team's roster we know of no better player than Manager Grow himself. Although Skipper Grow has been out of the game a number of years we quite clearly remember his hurling days back in the last year at Peterboro and playing a brand of ball that would go a long way toward making many of the younger players today, in his balmy days Walt Grow could without fear or favor, the best baseball pitcher in the old O.B.A. and O.B.J. and after looking over the National's present roster we still think that would be the case. Bill Cretney's shoes during his absence, the league leaders will be a great asset to the team about now.

After battling the Peterboro senior boys in Belleville on Thursday afternoon the locals journey to Peterboro to meet the Pets at Jackson Park on Friday and Saturday. If the Growmen can "take" the Pets these two games they will be sitting pretty as far as the Quinte play-offs are concerned. After Wednesday's game the locals have a game in Peterboro, one in Kingston, a postponed game in Cobourg, also two games with Kingston in Belleville, one of which is a postponed fixture. Besides the Belleville games, Peterboro have a postponed game at Peterboro with Kingston, a game at home with Cobourg and also one at Cobourg. As the situation now stands more anything can happen in the loop before the curtain drops closing the 1932 season.

MUST PLAY 500 FOR REST OF LEAGUE RACE

Bears at This Clip Will Grab Off Loop Pennant

WALKER HURT

Outfielder Injures Shoulder While Chasing Long Fly Ball

(By The Associated Press)

The boys around the International league are by no means conceding the 1932 pennant to the Newark Bears, but the gentlemen from New Jersey are in a position that is hard to beat for this time of the year. Barring unforseen spurts by some of their rivals, the Bears ought to be able to win the flag by playing only .500 ball from now on.

Taking the past ten years' records as an average, it will take to register about 105 victories to get the championship. Newark won its 53th of the season yesterday against 34 defeats by downing the Reading Keys 3 to 2 in a tight ten inning pitching duel. That leaves them needing only 30 more triumphs in their remaining 65 games to reach the goal.

The Bears may need a few more than 105 victories, with Buffalo and Baltimore still going strong despite recent reverses, and Montreal and Rochester coming along, but for a team that has been piling up a .778 clip through the current month, that shouldn't be hard.

Sixth Straight.

Yesterday's victory was Newark's sixth straight and 21st out of 27 starts since July 1 but it still was a hard won affair. Both Hasbrouck and Lefty Willis pitched each other to a standstill for nine innings running, when Willis crowded the corners and Johnnie Neun came through with a timely single. It also was costly as Dixie Walker, Bear outfielder, injured his throwing tryout for a calcin and may be missing from action for awhile.

Buffalo, in second place, kept pace with the idle Orioles by trimming Jersey City 5 to 4 behind Jim Bivin's six-hit pitching. Bivin also saw Toronto put three runs across in the ninth and get the winning run on base only to lose all the counters when rain ended the game before the finish.

In the third game on the program, Rochester scored seven runs in the big inning to beat Montreal 7-5. The Red Wings made the most of Willis Hoff McAfee and Flaher with none out in the seventh inning. Baltimore and Jersey City had an open date.

BELIEVE BALL WILL BE READY

Carbuncle on Leg Has Been Treated And He is Training

(By Elmer Dulmage, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Los Angeles, July 27—Doctors refused today to count out Jimmy Ball, Toronto flying clerk who is on the comeback trail, intent on winning the title that slipped from his grasp in 1928.

After viewing and treating an ugly carbuncle on the calf of Ball's right leg, medical authorities were confident the Canadian star would be ready within a week to match strides with the world's best over the 400 metre route.

Beaten by a nip in the 400 metre final at Amsterdam games, "Our Jimmy" has worked manfully to regain his old form that has lured since 1930. He went into strict training this spring, pressing hard with opposition for the most part and finished second to Jack Wilson at the Canadian tryouts.

It has been Ball's belief he would be at his best till the Olympic games open at the end of the week, but the carbuncle has changed his view at his best when he had to be. The carbuncle, however, is expected is cured, is likely to quash Jimmy Ball's hopes.

The 400 metre trials start Thursday, August 4th, and attendants are confident Jimmy Ball will be ready to start, but they were not so sure he would be the fast fleeting figure that was reckoned almost unbeatable two years ago.

Ball had a light workout this morning with quarter Myers of the Canadian track team. Coach Nick Bawlf has his squad out early on the Los Angeles high school cinder track, a short distance from the Olympic.

Heavy Duties

Heavy duties on leading imports from Great Britain went into force yesterday and already there are indications of the effect on trade between the two countries.

The new duties follow the hollow duties imposed by Great Britain on the Irish Free State when Valera's government had declined to pay the land annuities.

CRISIS NEAR IN WEST CROPS

Farmers Lack Twine and Grain is Ripening Fast

Regina, July 27.—A crisis in the Prairie farming conditions was close at hand Tuesday.

For a week fast ripening grain has been drying out under a hot sun, and there is grave danger of Southern Saskatchewan's bumper wheat crop for the fourth year in a row.

Showers have fallen in many areas brought a brief check, and the weather moderated slightly today.

Farmers are facing a shortage for much crop in sandy districts of Southern Alberta and Saskatchewan rain will hold off danger until next week.

In some districts grain is ready to cut, but farmers lack binder twine. Rural municipal representatives on Tuesday pressed the provincial government to buy twine without delay. Such twine to farms on the relief basis in order to aid harvesting.

In some regions between 60 and 90 per cent. of the farmers are without twine.

Theft of Bananas Brings Transient Into Court on Charge

TRENTON, July 27.—(Special)—The tramp travelling the roads in these days becomes quite an every stage of the game. Mr. McEwen, owner of a general store near the C.P.R. yards is the person who perhaps meets most of these. The men as they come in off the freights usually call at his store for something to eat. While he is quite willing to help when he can, he thinks by asking for a job that it would be impossible for him to feed them all. The fine of the week was that he refused the store and demanded something to eat. Mr. McEwen had already served that morning and felt that sometimes one should help bear the burden and refused. The man, Herbert Wood, by name, became indignant and picked up a couple of dozen bananas. When told to put them down or the police would be called he ran from the store and was followed to the boarding cars near at hand, where he barricaded himself in. A trainman helped the police effect his capture by opening another door leading into the car and his arrested and sentenced in the police court here and was given a year's suspended sentence. The man had a previous record extending over a period of years.

$4,000 FARM FIRE

Windsor, July 27—Fire which started while threshing operations were in progress destroyed a large barn on the farm of Arsene Tremblay, concession 7, Rochester township. The threshing machine was removed safely from the building. Just recently a modern dairy stable equipment had been installed in the building. The loss is set at $6,000 with some insurance.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Imperfect Nutrition Im pairs Good Looks

Don't fancy that only fat gals are calorie counters. There's many a slender female with a American complex —in love with her slender reflection in the glass—who has more than a horror of taking on one extra pound that she practically lives on nothing a day. It's a mania. Founded on delusion. Because human folk are divided pretty much into two classes, those who are collectors of adipose tissues and those who are not. Heredity has something to do with it. So has the functioning of certain glands of the body.

What this type of deluded womanhood should know is that a long continued deficiency of food, or a diet that is not properly balanced to supply the various needs of the body, will eventually lead to a condition of malnutrition, which means impaired teeth, pallor of the complexion, hair that sinks into a state of depression, ridged or broken finger nails, and a mental state that is anything but happy. A high price to pay for that attenuated waist measurement and those excessively slender ankles!

Debility from undereeding comes on insidiously. Creeps upon one like unpleasant memories. First sign is lack of endurance. The girl plays out. The merry evening party makes a wreck of her, whereas fit the past she was as lively as the next one when good hops were exchanges. She awakens in the morning feeling rapped. Not up to par. No zest for what may be on the day's calender. Warnings. Take heed!

Appetite is a matter of habit. The girl who gets away with a good-sized dinner tonight will be ready and waiting for a substantial meal tomorrow. There's a reason for that. The stomach and other organs of digestion adjust themselves to conditions.

If the food intake is low there is little work for the digestive organs, as there is a general state of debility. As processes of nutrition slow up, less food can be digested with comfort. Digestive organs are divided pretty much into two classes, those who are collectors of consignment of groceries.

What the girl who would retain her reed-like figure doesn't realize is that the human system is constantly undergoing processes of dissolution and repair. Every day there should be sufficient stoking up with good grub to compensate for cell tissue wear. Things won't go on right unless that happens.

Food must carry enough heat in the form of fats and carbohydrates to protect the soft, fatty tissues of the body, also prevent what otherwise eventually will amount to exhaustion. Being slender may be heavenly, but being scrawny is anything but attractive.

Ill-nourished individuals are easy prey to germs and infections, especially the tubercle bacillus. All manner of beauty ills come trailing along. The hair, the skin, the teeth need nourishment the same as other cells and elements of the body. Limited chow, and they don't get it. There's a famine.

Deficient diet has a depressing effect. Many a skinny lamb is snappy and snarly because she is hungry. She becomes a victim of self-pity. She is petulant, nervous, discontented.

Yet, indeed, little sliver, you gotta eat. Eat plenty. You're not an orchid. You can't live on air.

TWO GIRLS KILLED IN PECULIAR ACCIDENTS

Buffalo, July 27—Two five-year-old girls died in a hospital last night, both victims of unusual accidents.

Gertrude Liatko was returning a milk bottle to a grocery. She tripped and fell, the bottle smashing underneath her and glass fragments driving deep into her body near the heart. Dorothy Lipowska, watching a sandlot baseball game, was struck in the head by a line drive. She suffered a fractured skull.

BATHER SLEEPS AS CAR PASSES OVER

Iroquois Falls, Ont., July 27 — Howard "Shorty" Walsh, goalie of the Eskimo hockey team last season, is in the local hospital suffering from minor injuries suffered at Harrison Lake when a car driven by Mickey Osborne passed over him under rather peculiar circumstances. After a dip in the lake Walsh rolled himself in a blanket and went to sleep directly in front of the wheels of Osborne's parked car. The owner approached the car from the rear and without noticing the recumbent form of his companion started the engine and moved it forward till the front wheels had passed over Walsh's body.

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Follett)

Because Martha's complexion perks up when fed a certain cream is no proof that Mary's face will do likewise. Skins have ideas phobias, even. Dry skins are greedy for oily preparations; they, like, my up. They rebel against heavy powders, plead for light ones. Astringents aren't suitable for young complexions, but are food, drink and lodgings to those that have started to toboggan because of too many birthdays. And recreation —rubbing with an ice cube —suits all cutises because it stirs blood streams skipping and dancing and that's fine and dandy.

That rush of curls to the back of the head that got such a good start in the gentle springtime is abating because hats are spreading. The curls were troublesome to keep in order, though goodness knows no task is too great if the fever for beauty is raging at high temperature. Any number of men have got shorn this season, and screen ladies are a powerful influence toward directing the trend of coiffure styles.

It sometimes happen that the protruding tummy isn't the result of lack of exercise or an accumulation of fat, but is due to a general downward slump of digestive organs—stomach and the intestines having gyrated out of normal positions. The remedy is a specially designed corset, and your figure's small pal to hold "innards" in place. It is a common occurrence for the X-ray to show up such condition.

Get out the heavy massage cream if parenthesis lines have suddenly rug in from nostrils to lip corners, Pat in the cream with finger tips or patter. Place the first finger at upper end of the climb at level of cord. Keep finger stationary, so jumping upward to smooth with quick rips. Don't roll the flesh. That breaks down the cells. Iron the cream down.

Keep the scalp healthy, and hair will go its way happily. Dip fingers in hot water, and rub scalp vigorously. Apply hot olive or mineral oil, go on with the rub-dubbing, lifting the flesh away from the skull, moving it in circles.

Correct Manners

ACCEPTING AN INVITATION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I received an invitation to a wedding and I am in doubt as to the correct procedure in answering it. My girl friend's brother is to be married and I received the invitation from her mother. Mother and father, whom I do not know.

If you will be so kind as to let me know what I should do, I would appreciate it.

Your column is one of the most interesting to me, and I look for it regularly in every day since I discovered it.

M.

Thank you, and welcome to my column. I'm happy to have you "discovered" it. Come any time you will.

The invitation to you was sent in exactly the form in which it should be sent from the mother and father of the girl, for they are the hosts of the occasion.

I take it for granted that it is the usual formal invitation, which you received to the invitation to the reception (for it is not necessary to answer a church wedding, the church ceremony only). So you should write formally; and on a full page of double-sheeted letter-paper. Like this:

Miss Mary Graham
accepts with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. Walter Andrews' kind invitation lady, the first of August at five o'clock

BIRTHDAY RINGS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you be kind enough to tell me what kind of semi-precious stones are used for an engagement ring? I have a ring with my birth stone. Will you please give me the list of stones for the months?

Reader

Today, when engagement rings and wedding bands are not circumscribed as to kind, any stone is correct for the engagement ring. Its only rule is that the engaged girl prefers it. Often now the girl chooses her birthstone or the stone of the month in which she became engaged, or the stone of the month in which she expects to be married. Sometimes she chooses the stone for its significance, according to the usual symbolism assigned to the various stones.

Although the assignment of the stones to the various months and their significance, varies with different lands, the usual one is:

January, garnet, constancy.
February, amethyst, sincerity.
March, aquamarine, bloodstone, everlasting youth.
April, diamond, innocence.
May, emerald, happiness.
June, pearl, purity.
July, ruby, contented mind.
August, sardonyx, happiness.
September, sapphire, wisdom.
October, opal, hope.
November, topaz, friendship.
December, lapis lazuli, fidelity; turquoise, prosperity.

For March, the stone often given is jasper. For April, sapphire. For May agate. For June emerald. For July, onyx. For August, carnelian. For September, chrysolite, aquamarine or beryl. For November, topaz. For December, ruby.

The warm dry chinook wind of the Rocky Mountains is nicknamed "snow eater."

All Flies Die

All Mosquitoes . . . . At a Touch of This Perfumed Mist . . . . Based on

Flowers of Japan

Madam, let us this season conduct an efficient war on these deadly pests. They enter your home germ-laden. They contaminate your food, they bite. Over 30 diseases are traced to them, and tens of thousands of children, every year, die from their infection.

There is a flower, grown in Japan, which these insects cannot tolerate. Modern research has discovered that its extract kills them at a touch.

That extract is the basis of Fly-Tox, developed at Mellon Institute of Industrial Research by Rex Research Fellowship. We have spent ten years and over $100,000 to perfect it.

This Fly-Tox, used in a new-type spray, instantly creates in a room a cloud of perfumed mist. It is harmless to people, stainless to anything. But it kills at once every fly or mosquito that it touches.

It is so all-pervading, when used rightly, that no insect can escape.

Use Fly-Tox for your home's protection. Start when the first fly or mosquito appears. Keep up this war on these deadly pests. The way is easy, economical, pleasant, sure. To rid a room completely costs from 1 to 2 cents.

This means too much to you and your family to use a lesser kind. Fly-Tox is economical, for a little goes far. Its strength is guaranteed, for every lot is tested in our laboratory. It is based on Rex Research Fellowship. We have spent ten years and over $100,000 to perfect it.

STOCK MARKET DOWN LITTLE

Light Selling Pressure on Features is Noted

TORONTO, Ont., July 26—Toronto Stock Exchange Market remained under light selling pressure throughout the forenoon session today, fractional losses predominating among holiday changes. A big part of the list remained unchanged, both of selling attention being directed to recent features.

Canadian Pacific and Canadian Car slipped a quarter each and similar recessions appeared in Cockshutt Plow and Dominion Stores. Page Hersey, off a point at 31, displayed the most significant weakness. Consolidated Smelters moved against the general trend for a half point advance but International Nickel slipped another fraction. Gold issues led by Lake Shore oil group B. A. Oil lost an eighth and International Petroleum was off a quarter.

DOWN SWING IN EVIDENCE

Selling Not Forced and Recessions Confined to Narrow Range

Toronto, July 27— The downward trend was again in evidence in forenoon trading on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Market today. Selling was not forced, however, and recessions at mid-day were confined to a relatively narrow range.

Higher priced golds were inactive with Dome off five at $13 and Teck Hughes down 6 at $4.25 Among cheaper golds Ventnor lost 4 to 56, Sylvanite 4 to 66 and San Antonio a couple to 17. Macassa and Bend Lake were unchanged.

International Nickel held most nights closing and Mond Nickel dropped 50 to $18.50, and Sherritt Gordon was down a cent to 57. Base metal section Osga regained 1 to 11 cents but Beta dropped another small fraction.

WALL STREET FIRMER AGAIN

After Lull, Fresh Vigor Shown in General List

New York, July 27.—After wobbling uncertainly during the morning, the stock market responded once more to bullish movements again emphatically for a time, on publication of the June quarter reports of U. S. Steel. A fairly favorable power production report, however, and the recall of workers at the RCA-Victor plant, provided speculators for the rise with fresh ammunition.

In the electric power group gains of 1 to 2 points appeared in American Water Works, Standard Gas, Pacific Lighting, Commonwealth and Southern Preferred and United Corp. Preferred. Radio Corp. Common gained fractionally, and the Preferred B, 2 points. Miscellaneous rails were higher, one point gains appearing in Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, Illinois Central and Atlantic Coast Line losses of about a point. American Telephone and Gas Company recovered. Standard of N. J. and U. S. Steel Common regained major fractions, but failed to rally with much enthusiasm U. S. Steel Preferred dropped 2 then recovered much of its loss. Trading was moderately active.

Pitched from Boat, Dives to Avoid Craft Making Circles

Michigan Man Has Very Exciting Day at The Narrows.

MANY DIVES

Every time Herman Lycaste, Pontiac, Michigan, hears the pop of an outboard motor he ducks from force of habit. And if you were to ask him, he would probably rate tennis pretty high as a good, safe, all-round sport.

Fishing from motor boats from now on will be sadly neglected.

Like the famous rule of "keep your eye on the ball," fishermen have another: "Never start an outboard motor when you're in the water." Mr. Lycaste, who is a guest at the summer camp of Mr. Salmo, on the lake shore near the Narrows, near Forester's Island, took the best advantage of the rule, and came up gasping, but game, just in time to see the craft roaring full tilt, make a sudden curve and head directly back for him. He headed for the bottom of the bay and hung on while the boat smacked over the spot. Then he came up, blowing like the water while wild whoops from above kept him down. He made for grass back and forth of the crazy craft, but the wood mosses were too deeper dive like a loon hunting for minnows, and the whirling propeller of the racing engine churned the water an inch above his back. He breathed in the half an inch of line ran out. The end came, however, when the boat, in its search for glory, straightened away for the open, and piled up on a reef and sat on the rocks. Herman arrived weary and winded, but in the overdue of the craft arrived to survey the sprung seams.

There was only one consolation. Mr. Lycaste could think of. "What, me worry?" when he thought that he so of trolling line out from the boat, with all those fish hooks on the end of it!"

STOLEN CAR RECOVERED BY GANANOQUE POLICE

GANANOQUE, Ont., July 27.—Acting on the advice of Constable Fitzgerald of Kingston, who had the car license L.L. No 133 owned by Doctor Connell of that city had been stolen, Chief Orville Reid set out to catch the thieves. The result that he was not half an hour he arrested two young men giving their names as Clifford Wilson, 19, and Neil Wright, 19, both of Toronto. He locked them up in the police station to await the arrival of the Kingston officers.

SMUGGLING CATTLE ON IRISH BORDERS

Belfast, Northern Ireland, July 27 (AP)—Attempts to smuggle cattle from Northern Ireland into the Northern Ireland began today as a result of the recently inaugurated tariffs.

There is a 20 per cent duty on the importation of cattle from the Free State into British territory.

About 50 head were seized by the Ulster Constabulary at Forkhill, South Armagh, cattle smuggling area. The drover abandoned the animals and escaped back over the border.

The London fire department has a new rear-ie ladder 104 feet tall, and using it the firemen at each end communicate by telephone.

WOMEN PITCHED FROM CAR, REST HELD

LONDON, Ont, July 27.—(By the Canadian Press)—Four members of a local Indian family are in Middlesex County Jail today facing charges of drunkenness as the outcome of a joyride along No. 2 Highway last night.

The quartette which includes Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Lasore, their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Horton, were arrested near Crumlin after the women in the party had been thrown from the car. According to police a partly filled jar of wine was found in the automobile.

HIGH LEVEL BRIDGE WORK IS BEGUN

Ottawa, July 27—Special pleaders for special interests are having a very unsatisfactory time of it in the wings of the Imperial Conference.

Many of them have packed their traps and are ready to leave in a hurry.

Long before the official delegations arrived dozens of groups of them, pressure conversationalists cut in their Beau Brummellian appearances, getting an inside view the gates in the cause of special industries or special interests.

Some came from far-away Australia, from Britain and more from Canada.

Despite their long journeys the reception, even them has not been cordial. Delegates are more difficult to see than Hollywood starlets. Ushers are pacing corridors in front of doors, getting an inkling for a close-up of what unemployment is like.

The attitude of the conference is that the Canadian Government gave every opportunity to every interested party to present its case, information bearing upon the conference. That time has passed and the delegates can get to work on the information they already possess.

AARON FOX GIVES UP TO POLICE

NEW YORK, July 27—Aaron Fox, brother of William Fox, former head of the Fox Film Company, surrendered at the District Attorney's office today, on an indictment charging him with abandonment of his two destitute children.

The prisoner was formerly treasurer and vice-president of the Fox Film Company.

ADVERTISING

to Save . . . through Spending

Not many of us, these days, are troubled with so much money that we cannot spend it. But we ARE interested in spending the money we have, to get the most for it.

One way—and not a new way, either—is to make a budget. Put down, week by week, the money that comes in. Put down beside it, week by week, the money that goes out. So much for food, so much for clothing, so much for rent. So much for giving, and for luxuries.

It won't always be easy, of course, to stay within the budget. That's where advertising helps you. Advertisements in this newspaper tell you how much rugs, butter, breakfast foods, dishes, home, automobiles will cost, BEFORE you go shopping! They point out ways to save money. They show you how to cut a little here, a little there. And each day, they tell about new inventions, new products, new ways of doing things, that help make this life of ours very much worth living.

IRISH EYES

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

It was stuffy and bright in the kitchen, but when Sheila finally had her slumbers bundled in the front room to open up Joe's bed-lounge, she thought the night cold. Her fingers of air were working their way in from the windows as the lights flashed and angled on the walls.

She herself slept in the middle passage, in the double bed with her mother. Mrs. Carracaden was name in hare, and when she was in bed Sheila could sometimes see the red eye of the kitchen fire. The gas jet was used only for the heavier jobs her mother kept a cool and cool fire going all winter long.

"A half hour of ablutions usually followed the signal for breaking up the evening group. Joe pumped the water into the sink, removed his upper clothing, and washed vigorously at the kitchen table, on an old cotton kimono, and sat on the edge of the other bed, brushing her fair, lifeless hair. There was no washbasin in the bedroom; the tub was customarily occupied by the wash-boiler and other paraphernalia within such a narrow basket and an old umbrella.

Sheila's mother overcame these impediments and took a bath. More often she waited until Joe was through, and then used a fresh bathful of water, and the soap, sink-barred towel that was scented with strong soap. Sometimes she would be tempted into bed, leaving all the details of her toilet until the morning, but Joe always left the house at half past six, and the women of the family had the suite to themselves.

Mrs. Carracaden was the last to retire, unless Joe or Sheila were out late at a party or theatre. She found numerous things to do in the kitchen, and pottered about them indefinitely. Joe's early coffee was mixed at the time and set on the back of the stove, although as his mother invariably joined him at breakfast it might have waited until morning. Fastening her hair, watching him eat, walked with him to the subway, stopped on the way home for marketing, and even then could prepare the eight o'clock breakfast she and Sheila and Angela so enjoyed.

On the morning after the events of the last few days and the discovered money, they all breakfasted together, and once again Sheila returned to the attack.

"Listen, Ma, suppose I go to the Eighty-eight Street place, say, Saturday afternoon, 'till he pay last month's rent in office, and I'll be free after one. And supposing that some better or somebody sent me in to see "G. C. K." whoever she is, and suppose they say to me. Then am I to hand it over to somebody who'll pocket it themself, or—"

"It'd be no sin to your soul if they did," Mrs. Carracaden answered readily.

"I'll tell you what!" Sheila suddenly exclaimed. "I'll get myself up—you, you will!"

Her eyes were dancing.

"I'll fix 'em! I'll bet I get my blue coat!" she added.

"Sheila, how?" Angela demanded, eagerly, but Sheila would only laugh, and made no answer.

That evening, immediately after dinner, when Joe and Angela and Mrs. Carracaden were lingering over the remains of the meal, Sheila suddenly appeared in the bedroom door. Or rather, someone appeared who must be Sheila, but who was not instantly identified even by her mother, brother and sister.

She had shrained her hair back from her always pale face, which was devoid of powder or lip red, and looked young and pathetic. She wore an old black dress of Angela's that was scanty and tight on her more generous figure.

"Ma mamma and papa is dead, and I worrys for a boy that hates me," she said, in the soft, pathetic accents of Cockney. "Mary found the little purse, and sure I thought it first I'd pay me debts—he's bills yit! It. But thin I remimbered that there'd be no blessin' whatever on that."

The appreciative laughter of Joe and Angela interrupted the pitiful story. Even Mrs. Carracaden laughed. But Sheila kept her face sobered into a sort of scandalized pride in this prodigy who was her child, her rebellious daughter.

CHAPTER 4

"You're not goin' there like that!" "I am, too!"

"They'll give you another fifty, you big liar," Joe grinned.

"No, but honestly do you see how they can help handing it all back to me?" Sheila asked complacently.

"Oh, Mrs. Carracaden, dear!" she added sitting down at the table, and fixing her mother with tragic young eyes. "It's a hard winter on the poor—and, inside, the man has been hase it 'tree weeks now, wit' his fut swilled up the size of a gourd, and he had luck is that another little one is comin'—"

"Sheila!" her mother interrupted sharply. Sheila began to laugh, laying her head down among the litered dishes of the table.

"You'll bring misfortune on us, carryin' on that way," Mrs. Carracaden continued. "You talk trouble with all that! Lord dove for you, and he'll aind you a taste!"

"Send me a taste!" Sheila echoed, raising her head, and staring at her mother with her surprised look. "My goodness, what is trouble? Here I've lost my job, and I'm worrying Mary's old coat will be out before she was even married, and it's up to my wits and the blue coat that'll worth at least sixty dollars, I could have for twelve—and everything—"

"Sheila, you're terrible!" Angela murmured, looking at her in fascinated admiration. "You look about fourteen; even your hands look little!"

Sheila was still defending herself. "Listen, Mamma, who do you think I am? Here you want me to take back this money, and you know you know we need it, with Joe and me out of jobs probably the whole rest of the winter, and here I'm going to return it. I told you I was, and now you won't even let me get at any fun out of it!"

"That kind of fun is a 'in' kind of fun," the mother protested. But the others' amusement was catching, and in a moment Mrs. Carracaden, Joe and that my brother is out of work, and that it's a hard winter, and that it's not right, and I'd buy myself a little coat—but that my brother is out of work, and it's none of God's saints at that, and her own good mother was a slewn of creature, back in the cold country, and never but a little pig or two, or maybe four—"

"I'll take you over my knee, and learn you a little more, sleep one night with me!" Mrs. Carracaden said with outraged dignity as Joe and Angela laughed at the familiar tale. But her mouth twitched.

And as fully further comment after a general inspection of Sheila's costume was a misleadingly admiring "You're a holy terror, and I wouldn't wonder did the police take you up!" Sheila was free to escape, with one more burst of laughter, into the winter street, to follow up the invitation to adventure.

She descended through the house quietly enough—the few returning workers who were coming in, tired and grimy, at half past six, were not interested in the girl who slipped by them so disdainfully and once in the street she argued no interest at all.

She took a downtown train, and came to the surface again only a few blocks east of her destination. The neighborhood was a little less uncongenial than mother-like her own home environment in the Bronx, but as she walked westward the street improved, with that abruptness characteristic of the largest city, and the brownstone house between which she finally stood was not only handsome in an old-fashioned way but decorously set in a line of similar houses, and close on the white winter park.

Well, it wasn't an apartment house, anyway, Sheila and Angela had hoped it might be. "O. C. K." might be living in a big apartment house, and the money remain with its finder, after all.

The house looked tremendous to Sheila: there were windows on both sides of the big door at the top of the brownstone steps, bay windows, and behind them rich, heavy curtains, looped back, filled the little space between the lace and shades and the wide sills. And through this little space light came in hospitality. These people were rich, all right.

Now for the butler. Her heart beating uncomfortably, Sheila rang the bell.

A kindly-faced, middle-aged Irish woman opened the door and stared incurredibly:

"Did ye want to see somebody, dear?"

Sheila was all but staggered. She recovered her brogue with a gasp.

"They lost a little purrse," she managed to stammer. "An' I've got it. I brought it back to you."

The woman gave her so scrutinizing a glance that Sheila's heart failed her, and she wished herself well out of the adventure. But there could be no retreating now; she repeated her story, accompanying it with a shy smile. She extended the pocket book, entirely forgetting her plan and her suspicions.

"Ye found it?" Mamie O'Connor asked, after another look.

"Wit' money in it."

Another pause. Then the woman said briefly,

"Step in."

She closed the door behind Sheila.

"Kapo it," she directed, as Sheila still entirely forgetting her preconceived plan, would have given her the bills. "And set here whilst I go see," she added.

Sheila sat down on a marble bench; the maid disappeared at the back of the big hall.

The beauty, the warmth, the comfort of it stunned her. She had never been in such a place before. She couldn't go on with this; it frightened her. Sheila obeyed a mad impulse toward flight, laying the purse on the bench, she was on her feet, she was at the big door.

The rattle of a key in the lock sent her back to her bench breathless. The door through which she had entered opened again, and squarely built, black-headed young man let himself in.

He glanced at her; spoke to the returning maid:

"Is Mother home, Mamie?"

"She is not, then, Mr. Frank," the servant informed easily. "They has been over to church. But the Judge and the baby are here."

The young man glanced again at Sheila and as he was close to the Russia is a great rushing river that has not yet found its bed.—Mrs. Norman Hapgood.

"Eat your greens in that chair, Verneica and I are all alone tonight, aren't we Pokey? They're all gone to church to rehearse for Gertrude's wedding—our foster-daughter, that is.

He was talking along easily to cover any possible awkwardness on the visitor's part and, unversed as she was in social usages, Sheila felt the kindliness of it.

"I'm, sir, Gerdie lost her mamma and her papa when she was no bigger than Verneica here," Judge McCann went on. "And now she's to marry my second brother, and his mother and I are well pleased with it."

"And Frank's going to be married, too!" Veronica announced, half-shy, half-bold.

"Yes," the father said, "Frank's to be married too, some time. That's my oldest son. He's marrying Judge Kennedy's daughter. Fine girl! Both the boys, yes. But we have others. We've Monica, and Mary and Dan, haven't we, Verneica? Sit down, child, sit down," he went on hospitably, sitting down himself with the little girl on his knee. "And it's a bitter night out, isn't it? This is an yeaby Veronica, she's no baby at all, she's grown a monster on me—"

He drew Veronica forward— with that obvious profit in a thin, gawky crowtike little girl that only a father can fancy. Immediately his interest his attention to the purse, opened his attention to the purse, Mamie tells me—"

"I didn't find it, exactly," Sheila explained. She felt ashamed of her masquerade, before his honest, conservative blue eyes.

"I brought it as the rummage sale at St. Loch," she explained. "And there was money hid in it."

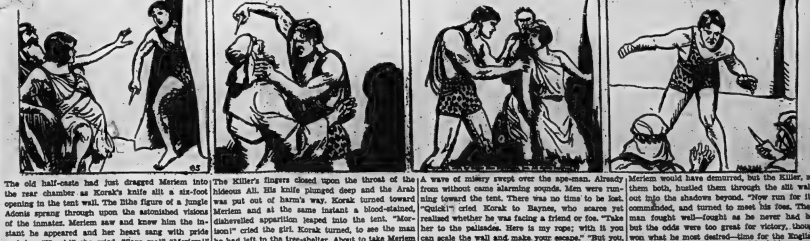
BRINGING UP FATHER



JULY 27 MR. AND MRS. — A LOYAL, WIPE AND AN ANCIENT ANECDOTE

THE SON OF TARZAN—No. 85

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

The old half-caste had just dragged Meriem into the rear chamber as Korak's knife slit a six-foot opening in the tent wall. The false figure of a jungle Adonis sprang through upon the astonished vicious form of the inmate. Meriem saw and knew him the instant he appeared and her heart sang with pride and joy. "Korak!" she cried. "Save me!" "Meriem!" Korak fairly shouted the word in his amazement at finding she was the captive.

The Killer's fingers closed upon the throat of the hideous Alli. His knife plunged deep and the Arab was put out of harm's way. Korak turned toward Meriem and at the same instant a blood-stained, disheveled apparition leaped into the tent. "Meriem!" cried the girl. Korak turned, to see the man he had left in the tree-shelter. About to take Meriem in his arms, Korak hesitated. What was this fellow to her, and she to him?

A wave of misery swept over the ape-man. Already Meriem would have demurred, but the Killer, seizing them both, hustled them through the slit wall and out into the shadows beyond. "Now run for it!" he commanded, and turned to meet his foes. The apeman realized whether he was facing a friend or foe. "Take man tonight, well-fought as he never had before; but the odds were too great for victory, though he won what he most desired—time for the Englishman to escape with Meriem. Then he was overwhelmed by numbers, bound, and carried to the Sheik's tent.

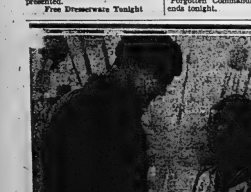
"LIFE GOES ON"

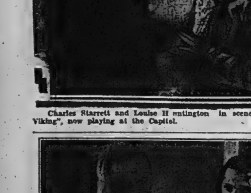
An Entertaining Mystery Drama Perfectly Produced and Acted

A strongly dramatic yet highly entertaining mystery drama in "Life Goes On" which is the feature attraction at the Belle Thursday and Friday. It is a story based on the stage success "Sorry You've Been Troubled," by Walter Hackett, and it has been brilliantly directed by Jack Raymond.



Hugh Wakefield heads an important cast as Ridgway, Emsworth (nicknamed "Dynamite" by his friends, and called "Dynie" for short), who returns to London for a little peace and quiet after running after criminals and away from Cannibals for three years, only to find himself precipitated into the midst of an apparent murder mystery in a fashionable London hotel.

Elsie Randolph is delightfully natural, and acts with a rare assurance as Phoebe Selsey, the telephone operator at the Grand Hotel—Dynie's part played by Marion Lorne on the stage.



Phoebe has just confided to her colleague that she never gets a chance to go out with the sort of man she admires—the man from the Great Outdoors who blazes trails for civilization—for when she hears Emsworth's voice telling an acquaintance about his adventures, and using almost the same words. After a talk with her hero, Phoebe's heart is all a-flutter as she books a super-table for him, and she is terribly disappointed when Emsworth proceeds to ring up various lady friends in order to find a guest for his first evening at home. She becomes hopeful again as Emsworth becomes more despondent, for all his feminine friends appear to have mustered during his absence, and not a single single lady can be got for love nor money. It does not occur to him that Phoebe would make a charming dinner companion, and he asks her to cancel the order for the table. However, at the end of the most exciting evening of both their lives—for a man is apparently murdered in the hotel; a married woman's reputation is at stake; an unscrupulous secretary tries to conceal a big financier's death until he has had time to make a corner for himself on the Stock Exchange; a blackmailing attempt is made on his accidentally acquired knowledge of the financier's death to account; and Emsworth straightens out the tangle and puts matters right—Phoebe has to confess that she has forgotten to cancel the booking. Emsworth then asks her to be his supper guest and it is obvious that there is another "request" date in the offing.

With the above on the program is another of the "Our Gang" comedies entitled "Free Eats" which will please both the older and the younger folks alike, for above, whole some entertainment, another "Screen Souvenir" series of memories and oddities of twenty years ago will be seen, also the weekly Paramount News and organ selections of a pleasing quality will be presented.

"THE VIKING" SAGA OF THE ARCTIC

There are a few stranger blendings of life and romance, fate and fiction, action and acting than those surrounding the motion picture, "THE VIKING", and the story of its making. His producer, young Varick Frissell, scion of a wealthy old family, graduate of Yale, a lion of strength and daring—he was six feet seven inches tall—had visited the wild Labrador country on several vacations, and loved it.

Frissell, a blue stocking from the States, realized the ambition of every young Northman. He shipped on a sealing ship and "went to the seal hunting. They take only the best ones on those sealers. They took Frissell. With rifle and pike pole, tied to a partner by a rope, so that when one slips off an ice floe into the sea the other might pull him out—Frissell, provided himself as good as say "greasy Jack" and brought in his share of skins. He saw men lost and maimed. He saw danger, excitement.

He saw in that seal hunt, the first of the years in Newfoundland in which a dozen ships and hundreds of men take part, an epic of the far frontiers, that like the buffalo hunts of the old West, is passing thing. For the seal herds, like the buffalo, are being exterminated.

Fast Fading Industry

The old sailing fleet once numbered 350 craft, with total crews of 12,000 "swilers" and a net received of over $1,000,000. Today less than a dozen steam vessels with about a thousand men bring $200,000 worth of skins and fat. The fury of the North Atlantic west are not used for garneting.

But the thrill of the hunt, the menace of the ice, the challenge to men's hardihood and daring remain. And it was this thrill, this menace, this challenge that so fired this imagination of young Frissell that he determined to make a motion picture of it all. And he meet do it quickly, before it passed into history. A motion picture enthusiast, a student of the drama in college, he resolved that his picture should show not only the seal hunt—he wanted to portray also the natural nobility of the hardy people, the sacrifice, fears and prayers of the wives and sweethearts left behind as well as the bravery of the men who went "to the ice."

He had heard a forcastle tale of two seafarers, rivals for the love of one sailor girl, who had been lost on the ice together. One had died to kill the other. This he would make the basis of his romance. He heard talk of "Junkers."

Every lady attending the Belle tonight will be presented with another beautiful piece of "Dreamware," which we assure will be very acceptable, also if in the lucky opportunity patrons will have of seeing "Forgotten Commandments" which ends tonight.

Mrs. Toad Does Her Duty

In the Northland a junker is a man owned by a Chief. Once a man becomes set as a junker no sealing vessel will sign him on. Captain Bartlett was to play the Captain in the picture, a part he had played all his life—Bob would have no junkers aboard. Bad enough to kill Wan to do a story with a junker hero, even though he was a triumph over the terrors of the ice, win glory in the great seal hunts and, finally, win Ida in the end of his heart. Capt. Bob didn't like the junker part.

Varick Frissell made his movie. He made it in full sound and dialogue. No one had done that before in the Arctic. One can sit in comfortable chairs in the theatre and hear the whole tremendous thrill and menace of that tragedy to the ice. It is the first authentic sound film made in the Arctic.

Frissell had made his dream come true. But he was not quite satisfied. He had seen a huge iceberg in the ice, too far off and too suddenly to photograph it. He wanted some like that in his picture. He decided to go back and get it. Maybe it was fate driving him on.

On March 7 the front pages of newspapers of the world in huge headlines blazoned the fate of Varick Frisell and the old Viking. She blew up and sank in the ice field off Newfoundland. Twenty-six men died, Frissell and his cameraman, Leonard Lamson. His friend Sargent, the third American of the party floated for three days on an ice floe rather than desert two injured Newfoundlanders. One died on the second day. The other lost both legs. Sargent hates to talk about it.

Sir Wilfred Grenfell noted Labrador explorer-surgeon who vouches for the authenticity of the film and discusses the fate of the Viking in a talking production which has been added to the picture, does not believe in fakers. But among the sealers themselves it is whispered that there must have been a junker aboard the Viking. Otherwise why Strange men, those sailors. Superstitious. Maybe in it's the awesome country in which they live. Maybe its the hazard of their lives. But theatre audiences who see "THE VIKING" Varick Frisell's last film, may form their own conclusions. It all reeks it is is!—very strange and real.

"The Viking" is now playing at the Capitol Theatre (Glassware Gift tonight).

Of duties none is wholly free.
'Twas always thus and ever will be.

"I'm so glad to see you, my dear," said Old Mr. Toad to Mrs. Toad as she appeared in front of him, having just come up from out of the mud at the bottom of the Smiling Pool. "I have been singing for you for a week or more, beginning to be afraid that something dreadful had happened to you. My heart almost stopped beating a few minutes ago when Longlegs, the Heron, so nearly caught you. That was a narrow escape, my dear."

"If you were watching, why didn't you give me warning?" demanded Mrs. Toad.

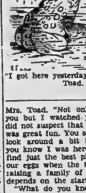
"I didn't see you until you jumped," Old Mr. Toad hastened to explain. "I never was more surprised in all my life, for I didn't know you were in the Smiling Pool yet."

"I got here yesterday," replied Mrs. Toad.

Old Mr. Toad looked surprised. "You got here yesterday! Je-rusalem! Why, how did you get here? If you got here yesterday you never came near me until now! Didn't you hear me calling you?"

"Certainly I heard you," replied Mrs. Toad indignantly. "I've lived here through a good many springs, and let, and I never yet have seen you show the first sign of a sense of duty toward your children such as a mother should show. Now there's Mrs. Redwing, a real mother for you. From the time the first egg is laid until the time the children are as big as she is and have learned how to care for themselves she never forgets her duty to them. And I try to do my duty as a father. If our children grow up and successfully go out into the world they should, and we have done everything possible to help them. If your children grow up it is wholly a matter of luck."

Mrs. Toad was fairly choking with indignation. "No such thing!" she declared. "It is largely the start they are given. It is in seeing to it that her children are given a proper start, that a mother's duty lies. Given a proper start the children will get on all right. I know my duty and don't need to learn! My children will have the proper start and they'll be able to take care of themselves while your's are still trying to be fed. There is such a thing as giving children too much care and spoiling them."



"Ah there is such a thing as not giving them care enough!" declared Mr. Redwing who had arrived just in time to hear the last remark.

Mrs. Toad turned her back on the Redwings. "Come on," said she to Old Mr. Toad. "I'll show you how fine eggs will be placed this year. There is a lovely bed of weeds, which will furnish the very best of food for the babies and at the same time give them a perfect hiding place."

She led Mr. Toad to the bed of water weeds, and there a few days later she carefully twined among them long strings of fine eggs in a jelly-like substance. This finished, she led the way to another part of the Smiling Pool where, said she, "my duty is done. The children can help but get a good start there, and that is all we need to think about. I don't believe in worrying over children."

WESTERN MOVE TO COMMERCE

Goodwill Results From Great Waterways Treaty

Washington, July 26.—Henry J. Allen, special counsel in the St. Lawrence Waterway negotiations and Republican campaign publicity director, said after a conference at the White House today he had told President Hoover there was a better feeling toward the treaty now than existed two years ago.

Allen told newspapermen he had informed the President that he felt the "first mad moments of objection" were over.

The Illinois Manufacturers' Association and other similar associations are now studying it with the idea of understanding the treaty before condemning it," he added.

There were indications that Allen might confer with Governor Roosevelt of New York, the Democratic nominee, upon St. Lawrence Waterway matters.

Allen himself would neither confirm nor deny such reports.

Asked his view upon the benefits of the St. Lawrence Treaty to the United States, Allen replied:

"One of the most important things it will accomplish will be to move the head of deep water navigation so far as American surplus products are concerned, from Montreal to Chicago."

CLEAR STATEMENT BY BALDWIN

"Reasonable Chance to Compete on Even Terms" Is Urged by Baldwin

Trade Balance in Favor of Dominions Reaches Total of Over Hundred Million Pounds Yearly

British Statement Points Out

ASKS FOR CERTAINTY OF MARKETS

Export Trade Vital to Well-Being of British Empire Delegates at Conference Told When British Empire Trade Viewpoint is Stressed

(By Geo. Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 28.—Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin today told Britain's tariff story, in a supplemental statement submitted to the Empire Conference. The leaders of the British delegation reviews in detail the tariff advantages which empire goods now enjoy in the British market.

Of future British policy, Mr. Baldwin gives only general indication. "The representatives of the United Kingdom," he declares, "have entered this Conference with the intention of making their full contribution to a still further extension of empire trade. They have put frankly and fully to the Dominions the articles on which they desire to secure further advantages in Dominion markets, and they will welcome from the Dominions an equally full statement of the corresponding advantages they seek in the market of Great Britain.

Britain Unprejudiced

"The United Kingdom delegation will approach the examination of these statements as they are presented with an unprejudiced mind and indeed with an earnest desire to give effect to the wishes of the Dominions and they are confident that in their turn their own views will be given equally favorable consideration.

Although the Australian statement is the most voluminous, Mr. Baldwin's statement of today may in a sense be considered as replying to that in which Mr. Bruce spoke of Great Britain's early response" to what Australia had already done.

Following are points from Mr. Baldwin's statements:

The proportion which still enjoys its Dominion which still enjoys free entry into Great Britain in some cases exceeds 90 per cent.

Since Britain changed her fiscal policy only 20 months, the full export from foreign countries only free entry.

Ottawa, July 28—Southern Rhodesia has offered Great Britain increased tariff preferences and will make similar advances to other Empire countries willing to negotiate.

"The colony is prepared," says a statement prepared by H. W. Morfast, leader of the Rhodesian delegation at the Imperial Economic Conference, "to grant increased preferences on certain classes of British goods with a view to providing further protection against foreign competition, and, after discussion and consultation with representatives of the United Kingdom, a schedule has been compiled of the revised tariff which makes provision for these increases. Similar consideration will be extended to other British countries which will reciprocate."

Rhodesia seeks increased markets for tobacco, fruit, meat products, dairy products and eggs, asbestos, chrome, copper and metals.

In the case of imports from the United Kingdom and the four overseas Dominions, there is today practically no free entry, that is to say a duty is levied in the case of goods admitted all goods imported into these Dominions.

Over considerably the greater part of the preferences granted by the overseas accorded by the United Kingdom is in the form of a total remission of the duty payable by foreign goods.

The visible trade balance in favor of the Dominions is nearly 100 million pounds sterling.

During the year 1930, imports into the Dominions from foreign countries amounted to nearly 250 millions sterling.

Graduated Rates

The British delegation urges that preferential rates of duty charged should be so graduated as to give to the products of the United Kingdom "a reasonable chance of competing on even terms with the rate of duty against United Kingdom products should be fixed for protective purposes no higher than is necessary to give a reasonable efficient industry in the Dominion a fair chance.

It is necessary also to remember the importance of certainty as affecting trade, the statement proceeds. In order to enable a manufacturer or importer to carry on business it is essential that he shall be able to assess with reasonable assurance the cost of the article delivered to the consumer.

Dominion Exports

The statement emphasizes the vital need to Great Britain of export trade, her two and three-quarter million unemployed "and the United Kingdom," adds the statement, after citing tables of figures, "has no desire for share in encouraging the trade and industry of the Dominions at the cost of a very large proportion of Dominion exports for many of which there would be no other outlet available in the world and which has consistently made it easy for these exports to enter her ports on the most favorable terms and with the least possible interference by governmental action, and it is her intention to continue to do so. She has been eager to give to the Dominions an extensive preference in every case in which she can accept it without undue and substantial favorable visible balance of trade."

The body will be accompanied to the station by a guard of honor, an officer and a company of the remains to Noyan, Que. The casket was a member of the Anglican Church.

The funeral of the late Flying Lieutenant H. W. Hewson took place at three o'clock on Thursday afternoon, the Bellefaem funeral parlors, Trenton whence the body was transferred to the air station military ambulance, and thence to the Anglican church. Behind walked the enlisted men and officers of the Trenton Air Station. The route lay along Murphy street to Dundas street. The cortege proceeded east on Dundas to the Provincial Highway No. 2 to the church.

Reaching the gates of the campus the cortege swung at once into a very large proportion of Dominion airports for many of which there would be no other outlet available in the world and which consistently made it easy for these exports to enter her ports on the most favorable terms and with the least possible interference by governmental action, and it is her intention to continue to do so. Hitler in Fiery Oration Decries Democracy Rule

Party Aims to Sweep All Other Parties Out of Country

Berlin, July 28—Democracy in Germany was given only a few more days of life today by Adolpf Hitler, fiery National Socialist leader.

Winding up an acroplane campaign for next Sunday's elections with a speech at the great Berlin stadium last night, Hitler hurled thunderous denials from the throats of 100,000 of his followers when he said:

"July 31 must remove the rule of democracy and of Marxism and its vassals from Germany and restore regime of discipline, national conscience, honor and power."

"We aim," he continued, "to sweep the 30 political parties out of the country. We Germans must be a united people. We are on the eve of great historical decisions. The thirteen years of decay and (the life of the republic) are nearing an end.

"We don't believe in the possibilities for international aid. We only in aid founded on our own strength."

The Tuesday night speech of General Von Schleicher continued to create a furor throughout the country today. The Bavarian Courier, powerful newspaper organ of the Southern Volkspartei expressed the curt opinion that the General's reference to disagreement in Germany's military power was hardly regarded as helpful to the Nazi dictator's efforts for conciliation with France.

Three deaths and a number of injuries were recorded in political clashes last night. Police shot and killed one man in a group of sixemployed as Nazis after a battle in which three policemen were stabbed.

One Nazi was shot to death and another mortally wounded in a political argument at Oberlaindi, near Cologne.

Three persons were seriously wounded in a gun battle between Nazis and Red Front Defense veterans at Holmsdorf, near Brunswick.

INTERLISTED ISSUES UP

Session However Was Irregular, Gains and Losses Being Even

Toronto, July 28—Interlisted issues showed buoyancy in a somewhat irregular forenoon session on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market today. General trade was mixed, with losses and gains about evenly divided at midday.

Noranda, gold unit, was up $0.75 on the six months earning statement showing net of $1,010,000 as against $1.08 for the full year 1931. International Nickel came ahead by another 50 cent gain at $6.25. Falconbridge recovered 7 cents to $1.07. Hollinger, up 31 at $11.50, also played the only change in a quiet group of higher golds. Lakeshore was cheaper golds Bidgood, Alexandra and Bell-Hall advanced a few cents, but Macassa, Central Manitoba, Granada and Howey lost a little ground.

Silvers were inactive, with Eldorado off a cent to 15 cents. Base group Olga regained another cent to 25.

Civilization is the conquest of nature and of life, to the end that their knowledge may be used for the increase of human happiness.—Harry Elmer Barnes.

"Shoot Me Like a Soldier," Cries Gorguloff, Facing the Guillotine

Paris, July 28—Dr. Paul Gorguloff, who shot and killed President Paul Doumer, believed "Father" of France nearly three months ago, faces death on the guillotine.

He was found guilty of murder by the jury yesterday and sentenced to die.

The jury's vote was 10 to 2 for conviction. Unanimity is not required under the French law. He was given three days to appeal.

Although earlier in the day he cried out "lay me on the guillotine" after the sentence was read he changed his mind and asked to be shot.

"Shoot me with a gun like a soldier," he said. "Do not guillotine me!"

He sat in the prisoners' box, nervous and pale, while the judges read the sentence. Foot guards stood around him and his attorney sat by his side. As the judge concluded, he shouted:

"I am dying like a Russian soldier for the country I love."

His only resistance was when the guards sought to bring him before the bar, as ordered by the court. He refused to leave the box until handcuffs were placed upon him and he was forced to go.

South African Party Wins Victory Over Separatists

Smuts Scores Victory Over Secessionists as Party Voices Him Loyalty

Modern Boy Called Timid Not Heroic

No Room For Such Group Within the South African Party

LEADER GAINS

Convincing Speech of Leader Given Great Reception

Pietermaritzburg, South Africa, July 28 (C. P. Cable) — General Jan Christian Smuts today won a great personal victory and strengthened his position as leader of the South African party when he, firmly disapproved of the activities of the Natal Nationalist group. So convincing was his speech that he was accorded a unanimous vote of loyalty by a large gathering of his party here.

The movement to form a Natal group within the South African party to work for secession from the Union of South Africa has received a serious setback as result of General Smuts' statement, for

"I speak with perfect frankness and very solemn assurance, for those who differ from me in Natal," he told his audience, "that I am rather than have such a group within the South African party let us agree to part company and split it.

This proposed group or party within a party could not be a party to by the South African party as a whole or by me as leader."

Although earlier in the day he cried out "lay me on the guillotine" after the sentence was read he changed his mind and asked to be shot.

"Shoot me with a gun like a soldier," he said. "Do not guillotine me!"

He sat in the prisoners' box, nervous and pale, while the judges read the sentence. Foot guards stood around him and his attorney sat by his side. As the judge concluded, he shouted:

"I am dying like a Russian soldier for the country I love."

His only resistance was when the guards sought to bring him before the bar, as ordered by the court. He refused to leave the box until handcuffs were placed upon him and he was forced to go.

WHOLE BLOCK THREATENED

Firemen Successfully Check Spread of Flames

Hamilton, Ont., July 28—Fire which threatened to consume the whole block of business premises on King Street, East between Sanford Avenue and Arthur Avenue, was successfully checked by a brisk attack by firemen early today. At midnight an alarm was turned in from the Tivoli Theatre, and when the fire brigade arrived, the whole structure, a large one-storey building, was a seething mass of flame. Almost forty hose lines could be laid, the roof fell in with a crash and sparks and flames spurted hundreds of feet into the air. The Strand Theatre, next door was menaced by the intense heat, and the roof took fire in several places.

Pompers Saved Building

For a time it seemed that the theatre and the stores and apartments adjoining must be destroyed but powerful streams of water hurled by rousing pumpers soon began to have their effect. Many automobiles stored in the garage by the flames with gasoline and oil and the conflagration was a most stubborn one. Before an hour had passed, however, the flames had been checked and the blazing area in which they originated.

Loss in the Farwell Garage is estimated at more than $50,000. The destruction of the building and its contents being complete. The Strand Theatre damage will run between $5,000 and $10,000 while Tamblyn's Drug Store adjoining suffered water and smoke damage to stock. Roberts' Restaurant also sustained a loss of several thousand dollars.

Canada and Russia Only Hope for New Discoveries of Gold

United States Geological Experts See no Gold Rushes Like '49 and '98 Likely in Future to Bring Rise in Commodity Prices

Washington, July 28—Experts of the United States Geological survey are convinced that only two countries—Canada and Russia—hold possibilities of new discoveries which would have any particular effect on the world's gold supply. They are doubtful of any gold rushes like those of '49 and '98 coming soon enough to help increase in commodity prices which many economists believe would help the economic situation.

G. F. Loughlin in charge of the survey's section on metalliferous deposits, recently received reports that place gold deposits had been found in Siberia which yielded $25 per cubic foot of gravel.

Having in mind the many contradictory reports that have come out of Russia he reserved judgment.

He believes, however, there is a possibility that the gold deposits in Siberia are unexplored portions of Canada's Hudson Bay section.

Modern Boy Called Timid Not Heroic

No Room For Such Group Within the South African Party

LEADER GAINS

Convincing Speech of Leader Given Great Reception

Pietermaritzburg, South Africa, July 28 (C. P. Cable) — General Jan Christian Smuts today won a great personal victory and strengthened his position as leader of the South African party when he, firmly disapproved of the activities of the Natal Nationalist group. So convincing was his speech that he was accorded a unanimous vote of loyalty by a large gathering of his party here.

The movement to form a Natal group within the South African party to work for secession from the Union of South Africa has received a serious setback as result of General Smuts' statement, for

"I speak with perfect frankness and very solemn assurance, for those who differ from me in Natal," he told his audience, "that I am rather than have such a group within the South African party let us agree to part company and split it.

This proposed group or party within a party could not be a party to by the South African party as a whole or by me as leader."

A slight accident occurred at the corner of West Bridge and James streets, about 3 p.m. on Wednesday when Ralph Semaine, riding his bicycle down west Bridge street hill hit a car driven by Fred Symons of this city. Mr. Symons had stopped his car on Bridge street awaiting a car to pass which was coming out of James street. Mr. Symons attempted to cross Bridge street and proceed, when the bicycle, ridden by young Semaine, who was coasting down the hill, crashed into the car, fortunately causing no injuries or very little damage to either machine. Semaine was cut about the arms but no broken bones or serious injuries were reported. Symons reported from the accident to the local police, later proceeded to Roblin's Mills, where he and his companions engaged in an afternoon's fishing in Roblin's Lake.

CELLULOID PIN TRAY ALBAZE

A small blaze from a celluloid pin tray which ignited in some unaccountable way, broke out on the bureau of the bedroom in a flat over the Diamond Hardware, on the third floor Street, occupied by Mrs. C. Calbury, brought fire alarm No. 2 to that location, at ten o'clock Wednesday evening. When firemen entered the room where the small fire had been burning they found nothing except a few ashes and a paper box smouldering on top of the dresser. With the room full of thick smoke, three children lay blissfully asleep in a bed in the room, unaware of the excitement which was occurring around them. Little damage, except to a runner on the bureau, was occasioned.

There is one thing worse than believing everything, and that is believing nothing.—Ralph Barton Perry.

SINGLE MEN AND WORK

Roslin, July 27.

Mr. Editor:

Kindly allow me a small space in your very valued paper. I noticed a piece in last night's issue from the farmers of this district could not get all the single men they required. Although I am not much experienced in that line I feel sure I can make myself very useful.

I do understand that the employment agency states that only experienced hands would be taken.

Would not an inexperienced, willing man be better than no help at all.

—Unemployed Single Man.

PROTEST SCUM AND OIL ACCUMULATION

Waterfront men and boat owners in the city seeking a remedy for the increasing accumulation of grease scum and oil on the surface of the waters in the harbor will shortly petition the city council to enforce a ban against the practice of dumping refuse and oil products into the drains and sewers in the city, it has been learned. Boat owners and others are in despair at the thick accumulation of oily waste which forms on the hull of boats anchored in the water. So thick is the deposit in some cases, that the black coating is almost impossible to remove without scraping with a sharp knife. The dumping of oil into drains, which lead to the waters of the bay and harbor, is said to be the main cause of the formation on the waters in the harbor.

ACCIDENTAL INJURY IN SUDBURY DEATH

Sudbury, July 28.—A coroner's jury at an inquest here this afternoon morning before Coroner Dr. G. R. Jones into the death of Conrad Novyard, found that he died in the police station cells on June 2, from a blood clot resulting from a fracture of the skull, accidentally sustained, as he was being taken from the police patrol wagon by striking his head against a bracket over the rear door. "No blame is attached to the police officers in the discharge of their duty," the verdict read.

Novyard was found dead in the police cells the morning after he was arrested for intoxication. At a previous Coroner's inquest a verdict of death from alcohol poisoning was given, but additional events resulted in another investigation.

SOUTH AFRICA CANADA FORM A TRADE PACT

Agreement to be Signed Between Countries in Fortnight

ANTICIPATED

Delegates at Conference Reach Satisfactory Terms

OTTAWA, July 28.—Negotiations between Canada and South Africa since the opening of the Imperial Economic Conference have been so successful that a trade agreement between them is expected in two weeks.

It was made clear Wednesday that this treaty will not conflict with that now being negotiated at the conference.

Following the successful parleys which resulted in trade agreements between Canada and Australia a year ago and between Canada and New Zealand this year, steps to create a similar one with South Africa were taken some time ago. With the arrival of the South African delegation headed by Hon. N. G. Havenga, conversations were instituted taking up where the correspondence had left off.

Experts from the Department of Trade and Commerce, which is under Hon. H. H. Stevens, are meeting with the advisers of the South African delegation and smoothing out difficulties. They are optimistic that an agreement can be arrived at which will greatly increase the trade between the two countries.

Canada has been seeking for some time to develop trade with South Africa, and this year is buying some 50,000 tons of sugar from that country. There is also hope of increasing the importations of pineapples, wool, oranges, Indian corn, and also all a type of hemp cordage.

The balance of trade between the two countries has been considerably in favor of Canada. In the last calendar year she sold South African goods to the value of $9,303,200 and bought from her to the value of $4,412,405.

In the fiscal year ending March 31, 1931, Canada sold South African wheat worth $2,196,300; rubber tires, $1,027,00; newsprint, $1,004,200; automobiles, $2,023,500; farm machinery, $830,400; electric goods, $480,600; flour, $273,00; binder twine $76,400; wood products, $300,000; apples, $48,100; rubber boots and shoes, $144,000; canned fish, $171,000; wrapping paper, $400,000. There was also an extensive list of miscellaneous goods in which it is hoped to increase the sales. Lumber is looked upon as one of the products in which there is considerable possibility.

At the present time South Africa enjoys the British preferential tariff on goods coming into Canada.

THREE MOTORS IN ACCIDENT

Drivers Escape Injury Though Cars Are Damaged

As he was attempting, it is said, to pass a car driven by Arthur J. Sharp of this city, who was proceeding eastward on highway number two, a car driven by Graham E. Stacey of Wooler careened off the Sharp car when he hit it and collided with an American car driven by William Baker of 3024 Virginia Park Ave., Detroit, Mich., overturning the Baker car in the ditch about 8 p.m. on Wednesday evening.

Mr. Stacey was travelling at a fair rate of speed, about three miles west of Belleville on the Trenton highway, when he came up behind the car driven by Mr. Sharp, who was slowing down to make a left hand turn into a nearby private driveway. Seeing that he could not avoid hitting the Sharp car in the rear Mr. Stacey attempted to pass the car and in so doing hit the left rear fender of the Baker car completing it to some extent. Mr. Baker, who was returning from the east and seeing the Stacey car come from behind the Sharp car turned toward the north side to avoid a head-on collision when he was hit by the car driven by Stacey and after going into the ditch turned over damaging the Baker car. No bodily injuries were reported to the four occupants of the Baker car nor was Stacey hurt. The three occupants of the Sharp car escaped without injury.

Motor Police Patrol Constable Byles was soon upon the scene of the accident and investigated its cause. It was later found that Mr. Baker car, bearing a Michigan license, had all four fenders crushed, both running boards broken, his right rear window was smashed, both front wheels bent, almost beyond repair, the axle badly bent, the radiator caved in and other damages which will amount to some $300.00 in all. The Stacey car had its left front wheel and fender broken and the axle bent. The Sharp car merely had the left rear fender crumpled.

Constable Byles took the stories of the three car drivers. Mr. William Baker is the son of Mr. Harry Baker, Catherine street of this city and is spending his vacation with his parents.

POLICE PROBE ROAD CRASH

Traffic Officer Wesley Frink Makes Inquiry

A motor accident on highway No. 33 between Frankford and Trenton is investigated and reported by Traffic Officer Frink on Wednesday evening. The accident took place on the night previous when a car driven by "Patsy" Gallager of Trenton collided with a car driven by Ernest Kellar, R.R. No. 2, Harold about three miles north of Frankford.

After investigating the accident Officer Frink came to the conclusion that two cars were supposedly in the middle of the road when the collision occurred. Gallager was driving a borrowed car which later was reported to be the property of K. H. Hill, Trenton, while in the Kellar car were six persons, Mr. Kellar, his wife and six other young man and three young ladies from Frankford. The exact cause of the accident has not as yet been ascertained by the police.

One of the young ladies in the Kellar car was quite badly shaken up while one wheel of the car was broken off. Both cars were quite badly damaged by the impact.

UPSET IS DUE TO WET ROAD

Toronto Motorist Escapes Though Car Overturns

W. D. Sanders, 218 Beach Ave., Toronto, had a narrow escape when his car completely over after skidding on the wet pavement about 4 p.m. Wednesday afternoon on highway No. 2.

Mr. Sanders was proceeding in a westward direction about two miles west of Belleville when he applied the brakes of his car. The car skidded to the left side of the road, went into the ditch and overturned completely over on its left four wheels were in the air. Mr. Sanders was not injured in the accident and informed Traffic Officer Byles, who investigated the case, that the cause was the rain on the wet, slippery pavement.

The left front fender of the car was badly damaged, the radiator was also the top damaged and two windows were broken. Mr. Sanders could not produce his driver's permit to the officer.

TOOTH SENDS YGUTH TO JAIL FOR TRICK

Bothered with an aching tooth, James Wilson, 19, Pittsburgh, decided on an entirely original but effective method of having the tooth lifted up without cost to him, although he is threatened with a term in jail, according to Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

He walked into county detective headquarters and claimed he was a bold, bad hold-up man and that he had robbed the office of the Western and Southern Life Insurance Company in Carnegie of $500 by holding up John Allen, the manager, and Jeanette Slater, a stenographer.

County Detective Frank Ritz placed Walsh under arrest and slammed him in jail. Once a prisoner, he complained of toothache and a dentist repaired his ailing molar. A short time later Walsh's brother visited the jail and was informed by the prisoner that he had confessed to the robbery in order to get himself in jail.

"I knew They'd fix up my teeth here," he said to his brother. "And they did. The hold-up story was the 'hunk.'"

FOLLOW MOTORIST "ACROSS THE LINE"

Port Colborne, Ont., July 28.—A tourist from Utica, N.Y., arrested on the highway near here by Traffic officer Vernon Weidenhammer on a reckless driving charge, persuaded the officer to release him on bail of $25 for which the tourist wrote his cheque.

When the case come on for trial here no motorist appeared. Magistrate J. C. Massey found that payment on the cheque had been stopped.

Officer Detenbeck admitted receipt of a telegram from across the line, requesting him to "go to h—".

Magistrate Massie has asked the Attorney General of Ontario to take the matter up with New York State Officials at Albany. In the meantime the officer is accepting no cheques from United States motorists.

CANDIDATE LIKELY TO BE SELECTED

A large gathering of Liberals is expected to attend owing to the fact that at the meeting a candidate will presumably be selected to contest the provincial riding of East Hastings.

HAIL STORM STRIKES WEST

Three Mile Strip is Beaten Down by Hail

Regina, July 28.—A heavy hail storm caused extensive damage to grain crops in the Reward district of Saskatchewan, Wednesday, reports received here yesterday. Hewman Lee Gooderham took it a short time ago as a Summer home.

In a more or less round upon the well occupied the house, weighted down by a rifle bullet of large calibre, the clergyman was warned to keep away from "the well." Troopers say the writer means the house, too.

GOVERNOR ELY IS WON OVER

Last of "Al" Smith Leaders Joins Roosevelt Group

Albany, July 28.—The last of the "Al" Smith leaders apparently was won over to the Roosevelt cause yesterday, as the Smith men in the Middle West were reported "all in line," and the opening of the United States Democratic Presidential nominee's own campaign was set for August 20, at Columbus, Ohio.

Governor Ely, of Massachusetts, who remained the only one of the Smith chieftains not on record in favor of the New York Governor, spent two and a half hours in conference at the executive mansion.

When the session was over it was evident from the confrees' replies to the press that a harmonious agreement had been reached whereby Ely will endorse Roosevelt in a statement Monday and will lead the fight for the Democratic ticket in Massachusetts.

WOMAN FAN BEATS DUET

Betting Scheme Nets Almost $2,000 in Two Days

WINDSOR, Ont., July 28.—A rather daring scheme of betting has in two days netted almost $2,000 for Miss Kathleen McCabe and Detroit, playing the "daily duet" at Devonshire Race track.

Miss McCabe picks three horses in the first race, and on each of them buys as many tickets as there are horses entered in the third race. Then if one of her horses wins the first race she pairs that with each of the horses in the third, and it's a sure winner.

Last week Miss McCabe got over $800 on an investment of $144 and so day she played and got nearly $1,200 in return. Yesterday she was one of three winners and today one of the four lucky ones.

The duet tickets cost $4 each, and each day Miss McCabe sells 12 tickets on each of her three choices in the first event, and carried over to the third.

Bullet Sings Over Clergyman's Head from Phantom Rifleman

Hornell, N.Y., July 28.—A bullet hole through a clergyman's hat added another chapter to the story of the mine-war's old and isolated hilltop home. Several other tenants have fled from the dwelling in terror of what State troopers call a "phantom rifleman."

Lieutenant Gerald Vaine of the State Police said the rifleman who has never been seen, apparently wanted to keep the house unoccupied for some reason highly important to himself. The Rev. Hermon Lee Gooderham took it a short time ago as a Summer home.

In a more or less round upon the well occupied the house, weighted down by a rifle bullet of large calibre, the clergyman was warned to keep away from "the well." Troopers say the writer means the house, too.

As he read the message which carried a threat of death, a bullet sang through the air and lifted his hat from his head. The rifle report was faint, he said, and Lieutenant Vaine surmised that the weapon had been fired from a considerable distance and sighted by an expert marksman.

Later Mr. Henderson learned that at least five other tenants had been frightened from the premises by the "phantom."

"Apparently," he said, "some one does not want anybody on the farm. Nevertheless I am going to stay here until I find out the secret. I have done no wrong and have no enemies. Right will triumph."

Troopers began questioning others who had lived in the house, while Mr. Henderson started collecting data on its history.

Births registered during the six months January-June of this year totalled 40,710, deaths 24,177 and marriages 12,671 as against 43,907 births, 23,421 deaths and 12,903 marriages during the corresponding period last year. This comparison shows a decline of 7 per cent. in births, an increase of 3 per cent. in deaths and a decrease of 8 per cent. in marriages.

TREND IN EDUCATION

The average daily attendance of public and separate school scholars rose during the year 1931, the number 87.11 to 89.05 per cent in 1931; the urban 1.86 per cent to 91.84, the all-school record being for the first time over ninety per cent, to be exact 90.31. In 1931 there were 9,500 more pupils receiving on an average elementary education than in the previous year.

Arithmetic occupies the centre of attention in the elementary schools today, more time being given to this subject especially in the rural schools than to any other subject. Oral arithmetic is emphasized, the method of attack rather than the solution being accounted first importance.

Chief Inspector V. K. Greer, declares the teaching of English is the most important work which the elementary school undertakes, every instruction in every subject should contribute its share towards the indirect or incidental teaching of English.

In an age of science, reading, writing and arithmetic still preserve their place, if by reading is meant English.

THE NORTHERN ROUTE

Von Gronau is making a beaten path across the north of the world from Europe to America. He first flew the Atlantic in 1930 with two student engineers from Germany to Canada. He made a second trip and again this year he makes a third one. The last one up the St. Lawrence he has declared the most feasible and practical for mail route.

This brings up the question of an intercontinental mail service across the Atlantic. The fact that the onthern route, though varied, has been used with success over a year in succession lends hope that some day mail will be carried across the north of the Atlantic in little more than thirty hours.

Other men have made spectacular flights all of which have great value in the history of aeronautics, but Gronau's flights seem to be working towards commercial flying across the ocean.

THESE ARE HIGH AIMS

A writer in the Congregational Monthly, of England, says that a holiday ought to be planned; that a lazy, ambitionless, unplanned holiday is the worst possible and can have no good result.

To go away on a vacation with the idea of being merely entertained or amused is about the most futile thing in the world. If you haven't anything to give, and are not ready to enter into things in the most active and real way, you may be sure that you can get out of the whole performance.

A few days or a few weeks away from one's regular work, rightly and wisely used, may mean recreation for body, mind and soul; may mean a broadening of sympathy a lightening of the heart, a stimulating of all good purposes and ideals, and may mean better and richer and happier living for days and weeks and months to come. Truly a holiday is a boon not to be lightly esteemed. We ought to plan to have a good one.

Most people have a plan of some sort for their holiday but we are afraid very few have any definite notion of broadening sympathy and stimulating good purposes. Izaak Walton may have claimed that such results flowed from fishing, but most fishermen are content to let you know how many fish they caught, and with what bait and methods. In holiday trips the traveler is apt to think a good deal of his comforts and discomforts, his beds and his meals. If the travelling is by motor he will have on his mind the condition of the highway and the conduct of other motorists. The English writer's idea is a good one, but it looks like a counsel of perfection. Rest and change are the common aims of a holiday. Of course if it can be spent in such a way as to help others so much the better.—London Advertiser.

MISSISSIPPI NIGHT
By Patrick D. Moreland

The gray owl dreams beneath the moon
Balanced on a starry limb;
Crickets chirr, and nightjars hiss
A tune to him.

A rabbit lifts a drooping ear,
Bending silver leaves of grass.
Carp sport in the pool and break
The mirrored glass.

Without a sound the owl is gone;
Rabbits dart beneath brush;
Crickets cease malingering;
Nightjars hush.

Sniffing through the sparkling grass
Like a huge and black buffoon
The old hound lifts a blunted nose
And greets the moon.

NORMAN SELBY, known as "Kid McCoy" in pugilistic circles ten years ago, and one of the cleverest fighters that ever pulled on a glove, has just been released from a California prison after spending seven years of a life sentence on a murder charge. Selby is fifty-nine, broke, but left prison with $150 which he earned on prison road work. He had a job in Detroit to go to in the automobile business, and flew to it, stepping from a plane in a dramatic entrance into Detroit which the newspaper cameramen used to the limit. Shows that the old Kid has not lost his sense of showmanship and his keen appreciation of publicity. He is on parole and must comply with certain conditions, including one that he must not operate a motor car on the public roads, nor can he get married. The latter he says, does not bother him at all, as he was married four times and got nothing but trouble out of it. Old Timers will remember Kid McCoy's spectacular ring record, particularly of his fight with Joe Choynicki who floored him sixteen times before the Kid got tired of kissing the canvas and rose up and K.O'd the great California fighter. The Kid's all squared off now to meet whatever life holds in store for him, broke and sixty and all, and is confident he will win the bout. First he is petitioning for a complete retoration of his citizenship privileges which are curtailed by parole rules. Good Boy, Kid, go to it, even at sixty you've got a big fight left in you.

BELLEVILLE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE sent resolutions to the British Empire Chambers of Commerce meeting in London, urging "Free Trade Within the Empire". It was discussed but shelved. The same question is the biggest problem before the Imperial Conference at Ottawa, in substance or in shadow. Powerful influences are working against it and its success is problematical. Free Trade within the empire is a policy which is in force in the United States as Arthur Brisbane, chief editorial writer for the Hearst newspapers, points out, says he: "We have now what the English are trying to get, free trade within our empire of forty-eight states. We can buy from each other up to the limit of our home demand, then DUMP OUR SURPLUS AMONG BRITON'S FOREIGN CUSTOMERS that can always be relied upo to buy at the lowest price." Then Brisbane branches off into spread-eagleism and gets off a good hearty Yankee boast as follows:

"As far as manufacturing is concerned, British competition in foreign markets would be a joke, if we put our minds on it.

"Ten workers in the United States produce as many automobile units as 100 workers in England, and our steel industry methods are as far ahead of the British as the locomotive is ahead of the stage coach."

HAPPINESS TO BE FOUND IN MANY WAYS

Human Beings Want to Have Right to be Happy

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Human beings want to be happy. Indeed, they have a right to be happy. It may astonish you to know that both the body and the mind seek happiness; that we tend in our development to fight disease and misery; that the whole tendency of nature is to overcome obstacles and conquer, to move forward toward health, strength, efficiency, and peace of mind.

LOUIS E. BISCH

Yet how can we find happiness, especially in days such as these, when life everywhere seems sad, and strain of life seems to be particularly heavy? Are there forces within us which can be called upon to help tide us over? Can we purpose fully and intelligently direct ourselves along paths of action and thinking which will spell greater happiness?

The answer in my two last questions are a decided "Yes!" No matter who you are, or what you may be undergoing in the form of frustration and even suffering, you can, indeed, make yourself happier than you are!

First of all, the health of the body must be built up to the highest possible point of perfection. Exercise, fresh air, rest and digestion, adequate elimination of waste and sound sleep are the essentials of equalites.

Note, for example, the difference in your own feeling of physical tone when you have had a restless night or are awakened unnecessarily with waking up in the morning by alarm clock, when you have slept as much, and the sun seems to shine so much more brightly! Indeed, a brisk walk until perspiration is induced, follow this by a refreshing tub, and everything goes better. Yes, for happiness, you must be healthy.

Add now for the mental side! What can you do to relieve the confusion, the doubt and worry of the mind?

Here I would caution the individual to be sure and fix a goal in life—an ambition, if you prefer—he can direct his energies, and which will continue to be his aim in ever-ceasing source of anticipation—for ambition breeds hope, and surely hope is one of the greatest anodynes for a troubled soul.

Next I would stress the necessity of turning one's emotions outwards, as in sympathetic interest, or by meeting people, indulging in sports and all kinds of social relationships. I suppose that to shut oneself in and remain aloof makes only for misery and a distorted view of the world.

Music, wonderful, like the movies, the theatre, books, newspapers and the comic strips—these, too, have tremendous power in making people happy.

The right kind of music for the mood of the moment is almost sure fire. When you are blue turn on the your radio to a lively band concerto, or get a dance orchestra and dance. Whistle, sing, or try to sing, no matter how it sounds.

To study a fine painting or piece of sculpture can also yield happiness. Books can be chosen for the occasion, the music. A racy novel transports you out of yourself, while another type of reading fires your imagination. The theatre, motion pictures and your daily paper can do the same thing for you.

And then, don't forget the lover-life. You love and be loved can offer ultimate happiness. Religion likewise can be a marvelous solace to a troubled spirit.

Well, get busy and try us and on with such suggestions! But to prove that happiness can be found, you have only to try and find out for yourself.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

In the early stages whooping cough cannot be distinguished from an ordinary cold. After a week or ten days, however, the typical "whoop" appears, and each time the child coughs it has difficulty catching its breath, the face gets red and even vomiting may follow.

PROFIT ON BOND SALE.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 28.—A profit of over $2,000 was made by the city of Sault Ste. Marie on its two bond transactions. The city exchanged Canadian National bonds for Dominion Government bonds bearing the same interest rate and made $7,831 on the deal which involved almost $500,000.

CHEESE CONSUMPTION

The Woodstock Sentinel-Review notes that the per capita consumption of cheese in Canada was down 3.34 pounds against 3.70 in 1930, which was the highest on record except in 1931. Cheese, one of the most nutritious of foods, is cheaper than in 1930. The Sentinel-Review thinks the low consumption is due to the habit of using cheese as an extra instead of a staple food. The Canadian people could help themselves and the dairy industry by making cheese as regular a part of their diet as meat, bread and butter. Canadian cheese is the best in the world and is at a premium in Great Britain.—London Advertiser.

EDUCATED CRIMINALS

Warden Laws of Sing Sing commenta upon the large proportion of criminals there who have received public school training, high school education. "Our splendid and costly educational program," he says, "has done nothing to mold the character of our people." His proposed remedy is vocational training. Less than five per cent. of the prisoners in Sing Sing have been so trained, and the colleges contribute a higher percentage of prisoners than trade schools. His idea is novel and may be based upon the belief that crime is due largely to lack of capacity to do any particular useful work, and that the untrained boy is tempted to live by his wits. The New York Sun sees an relation between morality and mechanical skill. It quotes Mr. Laws as saying that certain work done by prisoners at Sing Sing was better than similar work done by outsiders. The skill did not make these prisoners lawbreakers, but on the other hand it did not keep them from breaking the law.

A more commonly assigned reason for criminality among educated young people is lack of specific moral training. The difficulty of making this a part of the curriculum is due largely to sectarian differences. to eliminate it is to what it is right to teach. But indirectly every good teacher is a teacher of morals. He or she cannot praise or rebuke a pupil without raising a moral issue and enforcing a moral lesson. It is needless to say that there is some defect in the kind of teachings which neglects morals and does not touch conscience, but not wise.—London Advertiser.

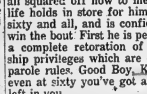
BACKWARD PUPILS

Boys who do not win prizes or distinctions at school are sometimes consoled by statements that some distinguished men had a similar experience. The consolation is one which needs to be judicially given, so as not to encourage laziness. It is true that some boys who were near the bottom of their classes in school have achieved success in early life, and that clever schoolboys have not fulfilled their early promise. In the Times Literary Supplement this explanation is given:

Great brain power in some cases develops very slowly. Clerk-Maxwell the famous mathematician, when he was at Edinburgh Academy at the age of sixteen or so was a case in point; and there are many other instances of late development among the front rank of thinkers. On the other hand, there are boys who develop very early great intellectual power but are not blessed with either ambition or the staying in tradition.

It must be borne in mind that education in large schools is necessarily standardized, and that there are certain boys and girls for whom it is not perfectly adapted. A problem arises in the case not only of backward pupils but of some who are above the average. Such difficulties are inevitable, especially in large classes. Instruction is not which boys are at the top and which are at the bottom, but whether all are receiving the kind of training adapted to their minds. and are taking full advantage of their opportunities.—London Advertiser.

REPUDIATED DEBTS



The old debts repudiated by the Southern States between 1842 and 1856 are to the fore again. Whenever there is a discussion of war debts and the amount Great Britain owes the United States some one trots out the Southern repudiation. It must now the remembered advanced in some quarters that the repudiated amounts, plus interest, would about equal the sum owed the States by British, Most of the repudiated debts were contracted by the States to build railways or finance state banks. In boom times loans were floated, and when depression came later the States found their lack of funds to meet the obligations.

These are the amounts on which the States welshed:

Mississippi	$ 7,000,000
Florida	2,900,000
Alabama	8,000,000
Louisiana	13,800,000
South Carolina ...	8,000,000
Georgia	2,500,000
Louisiana	22,000,000
Arkansas	1,200,000
	$77,850,000

Every spring the British Association of Foreign Bondholders meets and calls attention to the defaults. In that way the issue is kept alive. Of course, the United States Federal Government does not recognize the debts stealt.—Border Cities Star.

MAPLE LEAFS TAKE COBOURG

Can't Win in Own League But Able to Defeat Visitors

Although the local Maple Leaf girls' team have failed to register a win in the local girls' league they seem to experience little or no difficulty in defeating teams, which finally in defeating teams, which have beaten the league leaders almost all.

Last week the Maple Leafs journeyed to Cobourg, where they beat the famous Cobourg All Stars who had never tasted defeat on their home grounds previously and had lost but one game in two years.

Last evening to prove their victory was no fluke the Leafs soundly trounced the mighty All Stars by the score of 20 to 11 at the Armouries Team.

The visitors had all of their stars including such players as E. Turpin, Helen Slater, their pitcher and "Ever" Pollen the giant catcher in the game. Despite this fact the little Leafs clouted the ball at will and aided by the many errors committed by the All-Stars literally trampled them under their feet.

Lois Carter hurled for the Leafs and had she taken her time and tried to strike out all the visiting batters, would have undoubtedly hurled a shut out against the All Stars. Three passes accounted for all the runs scored by the Cobourg ladies during the six innings played.

Hilda McMichael and Pat Elder were the big hitters of the night when they each helped themselves to five juicy hits in five times at bat. Ethel Strand, who returned to the team's line-up last night, got three hits out of four times at bat. For the first time this year there were no home runs scored during the game, Hoskins and Evans were the best hitters for the visitors.

Line-ups:

Cobourg—Austin, Hoskins, Slater, Stinson, Turpin, Pellow, Davidson, Evans, Pegg, Ross and Smith.

Maple Leafs—Carter, Asselstine, Rushlow, Brand, R. McMichael, P. Hill, Wilder and Cousins.

Score by innings:

	R.
Cobourg	1 0 0 0 2 2 — 11
Maple Leafs	0 9 1 3 7 — 20

Umpires—Gordon and Meagher.

SKEETERS BACK IN THE DUMPS

Defeated in Double Header by Baltimore Orioles

(By the Associated Press)

When the Brooklyn Dodgers took over Jersey City and then brought in Charlie Moore as Manager, followers of the gown trodden Skeeters began to have hopes—hopes that the club would at least break into the first division. It seemed somewhat strange to the team since winning its first, last and only International league pennant in 1903.

For a while after the arrival of Moore, there were signs of new life in the club but they quickly vanished. The Skeeters were none too successful on their recent northern tour and have won only one game in seven starts against Newark and Baltimore since returning home.

Yesterday they dropped their 4th and sixty-first games of the season, losing to the Baltimore Orioles 7 to 8 and 7 to 3. The team has won 46 games to comprise fifth position in the league standing.

Four Artie's 4th home run of the year plus circuit drives by Sand and Hinkle proved too much of a handicap for the Eastern in the opener. The Orioles were cotton hit 11 to 7 but the Skeeters were unable to bunch their hits off Richmond and Hinkle. In the relief cap, Walt Tauscher kept Jersey City's six hits well scattered while his team mates fell on Mattingly and Krider for five runs in the first frame. Krider held the Orioles in check thereafter but the damage was done.

The Reading Keys halted Newark's six game winning streak in a night game, battering Hollaiser and Bellhorn for five runs in the eighth inning to win 7 to 2. The Keys made five of their 9 hits off the one Pirate hurler. Charley Hargreaves Newark catcher, contributed a damaging error but Hollaiser pitched effectively for Reading.

The two other games played yesterday's schedule were rained out.

Knocks and Boosts

Lady Luck still seems to hide her face from the Belleville Yellowbirds in their home games. With the exception of last week's Cobourg affair the team's 11 has rained previous to or during every game the Nationals have had at home this season. If the weather-man has a spite against Jack Bennett's team he certainly has a warm smile on the Nationals they will be very near ready to "clean up" the baseball club can carry on with the insignificant gate receipts. The baseball men have had to contend with so far this season. At whose door is the blame of the present financial condition of the Nats, is quite beyond us, but we do know that unless something happens soon the days of senior baseball is doomed in Belleville.

Wednesday's game, when the Prices were scheduled to play in Belleville, was called off as early as 4 o'clock, the reason being that had the Prices come to Belleville and the rain continued well the league executive would have to have "stipped down" for nearly a week. On the other hand with the situation stands now the league executive are "on the spot". Belleville have three postponed games, Peterboro two, Kingston two and Cobourg one. Just when the league records can stage three games in a week is a question at present. If they wait until the end of the season it is very likely that the Nationals will be called upon to play their three postponed games in one week.

The O.B.A.A. draw calls for the winner of the C.O.B.I. to be ready to meet the winner of the West Toronto senior league on August 17th. If the C.O.B.I. play-off games start their games on August 17th they will have but nine days to declare their winner of the play-off series goes three games at necessarily follows that they will be playing six games in 12 days. The six games naturally may be taken into consideration if the games play their postponed games and later follow with a three game play-off series. Taking all of this into consideration it is quite safe to say that the winner of the C.O.B.I. play-off series will be in a position to play six games in 12 days! A team that plays twilight fixtures might solve the problem, but Manager Gerow, that he would not have a playing certificate this year and that little experience of score was knocked into a cocked hat, Mister "Don't make too many suggestions."

It was somewhat with surprise we heard of the Kingston C.O.B.I. team executive turning down the opportunity of playing one of the postponed games on Civic Holiday. We understand that the Limestone boys are exhibition game scheduled for that day against Brockville, however. But on the other hand it was the Ponies' league designates who wanted the play-off series extended to the best three out of five games this year. If the Ponies have a number of postponed games at the end of the season they will naturally have to play them at that time therefore eliminating any necessity for the extension of the play-offs this year. Although the Ponies suggested the idea they have refused to try and co-operate with Belleville or Peterboro in the matter of postponed games. The logical answer to this is—the league will be as in previous years—the best two out of three games.

On Saturday afternoon when the Kingston Frontenacs come to town to do battle with the local B.A.A. kids the first game of the local junior league play-offs will be under way. Those two teams have battled neck and neck all season and the league play-offs will be nothing short of thrilling. All seven of minor league baseball in this community. The Prince Edward County kids will pin their hopes on the pitching of Bill Phillips or Bob Noble, while the local Association kids have Hal Wilkins, Ernie Smith and Chuck Smith to toss on the hilltop against the Wellington aggregation. The second game will be played at Wellington on the following afternoon.

In order that the junior league winners may have a trophy which to compete for the league executive have purchased a fine large silver cup which is today on display in Delaney's window on Campbell St. The local junior league has never had a trophy to present to the league winner as no donor of such trophy has ever stepped forward and presented the league with a cup. The league must be that it upon themselves to provide the winning team with a trophy which will, in the future, be emblematic of the league championship. The idea is to be commended again.

Knotty Lee seems to mean business about his proposed girls' professional baseball team from Miami, Fla., playing his All Canadian pros in Belleville next Wednesday afternoon. The two teams are scheduled to play in Peterboro the following day. The appearance of the local ball yard. This girls' baseball team are scheduled to play but seven games in Canada we understand.

Tonight sees the opening playoffs games in the Belleville Senior Men's Softball League when Belleville entertain Hesselen's and the Shoe also battle the Continental Life team.

NOT MAKING THE EXPENSES

Tuna Fish Only Bringing Four Cents a Pound in Boston

Hubbards, N.S., July 28 (CP) — Fishermen along this coast are not making expenses these days. The fish are plentiful but prices are unreasonably low. At the beginning of the season prices were high and fairly profitable markets in Boston and elsewhere, men who find those big fish in their traps prefer to release them. They get not only four cents a pound in Boston and it costs more than that to ship them.

There is a run of small skate which have now and then been travelling fresh at 50 cents the hundredweight, but it is not a paying. Some are sent to Lunenberg for cold storage, but most of them are salted with the hope that they may bring better prices later in the season—at least enough to pay for the labor and cost of wear and tear on the fishing gear.

A representative of a Saint John firm has been in the province a little recently when he said he might buy mackerel for shipment to Brazil and the West Indies.

SEABROOK APPEAL RESERVED BY COURT

Toronto, July 28. — The Ontario Court of Appeal reserved judgment yesterday on the appeal of William George Seabrooke, 22, from his conviction of the murder of Paul Lavigne after a trial by Mr. Justice Logie and a jury at Ottawa. Seabrooke is under sentence to be hanged at Ottawa September 15.

Finishing his argument in support of the appeal, counsel for the accused claimed that Mr. Justice Logie should not have stressed in his charge that the jurymen were not responsible for the imposition of the death penalty.

Piles Go Quick

No Salve—No Cutting

Thousands who have itching, bleeding or protruding piles have not yet learned that quick and lasting relief can best be accomplished with an internal medicine. Prefer to swallow your medicine—not rub it on.

To find circulation of blood in the lower bowel causes piles. The prescription—Hem-Rid—when taken, the blood walls weak—the parts atrophy and relax. Then the pile mass is released. Then it must be used to stimulate the circulation, drive out the blood, heal and restore the affected parts.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, after years of study, found a real internal Pile Remedy. He called his discovery HEM-ROID, and prescribed it for his patients with success in over 900 cases, and then decided every Pile sufferer, no matter how stubborn their case, should try his prescription with a money back guarantee.

HEM-ROID tablets have such a wonderful record of success in this city that J. S. McKeown and all good druggists invite you to try HEM-ROID and guarantee money refunded if it does not end your Pile misery.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a boy who does not pay any attention to me. He knows I like him because I told a friend, who told him. Now he says less attention. Was I wrong in showing my feelings too openly?

Judy

I'm afraid, my dear Judy, you'll have to give that young man a practical demonstration of the saying "Missing brighten the corner of their flight." Try disregarding the young man entirely, then perhaps he'll regret, that he has lost an admirer. They do, very often.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've gone with a boy for a long time. I love him, and guess he loves me. We decided to get married, and even got our marriage license. Two days before we were married he married a certain close relative of his interferred and talked him out of it. I still love him and want him to marry me. I haven't seen him for five weeks. How can I persuade him to marry me?

Elmira B.

You have had a very harrowing experience, my dear child, but are you sure you want to marry a man who can be so easily influenced by relatives? If it would make your mind any easier to talk things over with him, see him and do that.

You do not tell me your age. If you're very young, I shouldn't be in too great a hurry to sign up a life partnership. Enjoy your youth a while; it goes so quickly.

SEEMS TO LIKE THE FAMILY

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am eighteen and last summer I kept steady company with a boy whom I cared for deeply. After a while we seemed to quarrel quite a bit, so we broke up. He then started to date my sister. I never really did how much I cared for him until I lost him. You can imagine how I feel when he calls at the house for my sister. The other day we met on the street. He started to talk about the wonderful times we had together. He told me how sorry he was that we misunderstood each other. We are in love all over again and want to make up; "What will the family say?" is the problem that is bothering me.

CHICK

As you youngsters were only playing at being "mad" and the boy very probably took your sister out to make you jealous, I imagine family will be reconciled when you get back to your former friendship. And please stop quarrelling, or some time you may really get "mad" for keeps.

HAS THE MAKINGS OF A GREAT LOVER

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am real sixteen, but I feel that I'm really in love. Of course I know this sound silly, but I'm positive it is true love, as I have had several so-called "crushes" but none that affected me like this one. I have always known the boy, but only lately have I had this strange and tender feeling towards him.

The boy, I think, has the makings of a "great lover." He considers me only as a friend, nothing more. He seems to prefer older girls and new ones especially. He's very popular.

Should I forget him, which I believe is impossible, or act more affectionate? I never force myself upon him.

Sylvia.

As the young man is so popular and prefers older girls, don't you think it would be wiser under the circumstances not to appear to be just one more girl admirer? Those over-popular boys are apt to become spoiled, and the girl who interests them is the the one who is a little hard to know. This doesn't mean that you should "high hat" him. On the contrary, be friendly, a good pal, but don't be sentimental and show your feelings too plainly.

THEY DON'T SPEAK

Dear Miss Fairfax:

As you have solved so many girl's problems, I hope to receive a little advice from you. A little over a year ago my boy friend and I quarrelled. Since then I have seen him a few times on the street, and I never he wanted to speak to me, but I ignored him. Some months ago I moved out of this neighborhood and have not seen him for a long time. During this time I have realized that I love him and want him back. Please advise me how to get him.

CHARMANNE

Just come down off your high horse and speak to the boy the next time you see him; and it would not be awfully wicked if you happened to walk casually by some place where you'd be likely to meet him. As for this business of "stop speaking," it's silly and half the time youngsters who indulge in that form of sport are just making love in a big hurry. That kind of "hate", specialists tell us, is just a kind of peevish love.

FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCKS SWEEP TO NEW HIGHS

No Sign of Flogging on Wall Street on Thursday

(By Claude A. Jagger, Associated Press Financial Editor)

New York, July 28—The reborn bullish enthusiasm in the security markets showed no sign of flagging today. As stock prices swept forward again, pushed on by pronounced strength of the dollar as against foreign currencies, and further gains in wheat and cotton, the trading groups were quick to respond ahead, after a few waves of active profit taking had been absorbed in the morning. Calmly by early afternoon ranged from 1 to 3 points in many of the leaders. Shorts were squeezed in such issues as American Telephone and Radio Pacific.

Weakness reported buying from London, Paris and many cities in the interior. Trading was the most active since the first week in two hours.

A number of shares ranged fractions to a point in the early period taking, but closed practically short lived Advances of 2 to 8 points appeared in the leaders as Allied Chemical, American Telephone, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Norfolk and Western, Columbia Gas and Radiator. Issues up 2 or more included U. S. Steel preferred, Coca Cola, DuPont, Consolidated Gas and Woolworth. Among individuals, U. S. Steel common, Standard of N. J., Westinghouse, New York Central, General Electric, and General Motors. Motors were somewhat tardy in joining the move.

Chart readers pointed out that the rebound would shortly reach a testing area, as the movement of the halfway point between the peak of the preceding rally recorded early in March, and bear market low touched on July 8. Each succeeding phase of the major movement has been followed by a temporary reaction of roughly half of the ground lost.

3 RUN RALLY WINS GAME

C.P.R. Had to Come From Behind to Defeat Wooler 14-13

TRENTON, July 28.—(Special)— The C.P.R. came from behind in the last inning of their game with Wooler here last night to win by a score of 14 to 13. Wooler had the lead 13-11 when the last inning started. The contest and it looked bad for the railroaders. Fox was on the mound for the Leafs and in Wednesday's game was replaced by Sinnor in the sixth. The hard hitting C.P.R., once they got the ball into the air was unable to last as the boys found him for four runs in the sixth before he was replaced. Sinclair went in cold with three on and two out and got the side retired as he had not pitched a league game this year. Bowler was on the mound for the C.P.R. and was not up to his usual standard of pitching and gave over to Burit in the fourth. Young Burit has not worked in many games this year but if the C.P.R. gets in the playoffs as it looks like they will he will be due to be their mainstay. The boy has a good head and is cool in the tightest pinches. Wooler was two up on the C.P.R., when the railroaders came up for their last trip to the bat. Burtit the first up got down on a pretty and Bowler reached safely the next two up were out Burit scoring on a long drive to left field by Steenburgs. Kennedy the next bat. her hit a hard one down first base line to score both Begin and Bowler.

Line-ups:

C.P.R. Bernard 2nd. Steenburg 1st; Begin ss; Sweeney lf; Long 3b; Towle, 3rd; Johnson cf; Smith rf; Bowler, Ketchum c.

BANISHED FOR BREWING TEA

Woman Sent to Rhode Island Wilderness for Prescribing

Boston, Mass., July 28—Although the unlicensed practice of medicine is still unlawful in Massachusetts the penalties for so doing are not as severe as in 1627 when Anne Hawkins was banished to the Rhode Island wilderness for advertising sure cure herb tea for a neighbor's stomach ache. Mrs. Hawkins, daughter-in-law of Francis Marbury of Massachusetts Bay Colony, which were founded by Anne Hutchinson, Henry Ist Hall, State Archivist, was the unlucky lady who in the England housewife who never failed to go to the relief of the sick and unfortunate of the community.

Her herb prescription gained her local fame and the unfavorable attention of the authorities who "accused and convicted her of practicing medicine without permission and sentenced her to a life of exile in the woods.

In 1640 five sons, James, Job and Thomas, filed a petition with the General Court for her return. which was refused after much deliberation on the grounds that Anne Hawkins was a "dangerous person." Finally she was granted probationary leave and returned to her home colony in 1650. In about a month's time, however, Mother Mawkins brewed another cup of tea to ease a neighbor's suffering, and was again sent to the open spaces.

In 1655 it was decided she was too dangerous to be left to remain in the country and arrangements were made to have her deported to England. She was given two months to prepare for the voyage but died before the time was up as a result of years of privation in the wilderness and while wandering in the woods.

In her defense against the charges made against her, Mrs. Hawkins said: "I have been greatly molested only in cases of necessity where something had to be done to relieve suffering and there was no physician within miles of the neighborhood."

PADDLERS REACH KINGSTON ON TOUR

Kingston, July 28—Two long distance canoe travellers arrived in Kingston Wednesday and will leave at the end of the week for Georgian Bay, Ont.

The two paddles started out from Deux Rivieres, Ont., with a companion in a 15-foot canoe but experience equipped with paddles, sail and motor. The combination was the end of Lake Superior.

He travelled down the Ottawa River to Pembroke where his original companion left him, and Walter Nowrott of that town took up the journey. These two men had a thrilling experience in the Allumette Rapids; they were tossed out of their canoe, lost all their belongings and had to swim a thousand feet to shore. They saved the necessary canoe, made repairs and proceeded to prairie grain farms.

The Grain Exchange and pool managers, who have been watching the developments in Ottawa, have been assistance in circulating the rumors that a British preference would be of no assistance to them. Canada exports about one-third to two-thirds of Canada's exportable grain crop.

On the other hand, it is pointed out that a stable market in the United Kingdom for at least 175,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat would be distinctly worth having. It would be infinitely better than the condition which now exists and grain elevators bulging with wheat which cannot be sold, while Soviet wheat was being dumped for grain at prices far below the cost of production.

YOUNG WIFE Confides in Neighbour

Life was sad for Helen Balfour. Marriage, after three months, had begun to lose its gay romance.

One day, as she was hanging out her clothes on the line, she summoned up her courage and tearfully told her troubles to Mrs. Trimble, her kind-eyed next-door neighbour. Mrs. Trimble listened to her story patiently. She had two married daughters of her own and understood. She talked to Helen and encouraged her with helpful suggestions for making her housework easier, and, greatest of all, straightened out Helen's biggest trouble—the weekly wash.

Learns Laundry Secret

"Now washing's not such a terrible task," explained Mrs. Trimble gently. "First, use a good soap. I'd advise you to use the brand I always buy — Pearl White Naptha. You'll find it a good practical laundry soap, Helen, and a lot more economical than most. Then, soak your clothes and put them to soak overnight in cold water. You will find that, as the water temperature rises to the heat of the room, more dirt is loosened than would be if the water were cold. Ing. In the morning, rinse your clothes thoroughly in warm water and you'll never have any more trouble with your wash."

Free Cake of Soap!

Thousands of women have learned this valuable laundry secret. Let the Pearl habit yourself—Pearl means efficient work in less time and at less cost. That's something to remember these days. If you have not tried Pearl White Soap, order some today, or, better still, send your name and address to Fugley-Dingee & Co. Limited, Department 61 Toronto, and a FREE full-size bar will be mailed to you by return.

IRISH EYES

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

His big arm was about his little girl's thin form. He did not look at the money and the purse lying displayed; his eyes were all for Sheila herself. With infinite tenderness and pity for the pale, tear-ravaged face he studied the girl's shabby clothes, her pale cheeks and blazing blue eyes.

"And your paps is dead?" he said.

"Yes, sir."

"But do ye work?"

"I have been, Mr. Sheila said modestly. "But sure they fired me just yesterday."

"And this ye found the money, did ye?"

"Me little slather Angela, that's a cripple," Sheila began, "was lookin' at the purse and seen how it was there."

And she exposed them for his inspection: "G. C. K." on the dark blue flap.

"So I knew I coddent kape it," Sheila said, "Annyway, Mamma widdent! A ve was, she added, with truth.

"Your mamma widdent!" he was watching her closely.

Sheila shook her head, and smiled.

"And yet, it'd be your mamma's rent, I dunno?" he said, thoughtfully, "You'd bring back the rent itself, would ye?"

Sheila's eyes were all canoor.

"She told me, so," she replied.

"I wonder if we'd be as honest as that, Toot?" the man mused. He sighed heavily.

There was a silence. Sheila felt inconsiderably small and slender, by look, the fireside in a room full of books, the little girl, all shook her to the roots of her being. She was conscious of wanting to cry.

CHAPTER 5

"First I'll tell you me name," the man presently said, in a thoughtful, unhurried fashion. "I'm Paul McCann. Then I want ye to take that fifty and put it back in the purse—I'll make it up to Gertrude.

"But more than that," he added, and was still Sheila could not have spoken to save her soul.

"More than that," he commenced again, still regarding her thoughtfully, "I want to do something for ye—for your mother, then, now. It is very hard on a widow to pay it, so I well know. And then maybe one of our ge'rls would have a little coat—and a hat—and something a ge'rl could use——"

Sheila's one hope now was to escape. The man was holding her hands; she did not want it. Her shabby dress had so worked upon his generous sympathy that he would not be content now without some pledge of help; this beggar should have a hat, a coat, a promise of rent money.

"I am poor, and my mother is a widow, but I have a hat, and I don't speak with a brogue!" she thought of bursting out. But he would not think she was crazy——

She hesitated. It was too late. Mamie was in the room, obviously with plans against little Veronica's peace.

"Yes, run along wit' Mamie, love-ly," the father said. "She'll build a moment——" he interrupted himself, as Sheila was about to go with the others. "I want your name, me deary and to hear a bit more of ye."

Sheila sat down again, but before he could speak there was an interruption.

"Here they all are!" Veronica shrilled from the doorway. There was a great sound of bustle and confusion in the hallway, laughing voices.

"It's our Gertrude—she's getting married to my boy Peter next Tuesday," the man began, when Gertrude herself interrupted him.

She stood in the doorway a stunning slim girl in a black suit and carrying sable furs. Her laughing voice came into the library. Sheila who had gotten to her feet, stood beside her. A tall man, with black curly hair.

The floor rocked beneath her feet her mouth felt dry and her head swam. She knew this man—she knew this man. He had kissed her on a certain hot summer night beside the sea, under a hot, hot moon. No other man had ever kissed her——it was Peter!

"Uncle Paul!" said Gertrude. "If you could have seen Norah Gaynor get mixed up with Peter's legs coming down the aisle, you'd remain away next Tuesday! Honestly, I never was so embarrassed in my life——"

She stared at the red-headed girl, but there was nothing unfriendly in her stare.

"Gertie, is your aunt there?" the judge asked.

Sheila could move her eyes to him, but she could not look at the door.

"She was," Gertrude said. "But of course the minute she saw her, Von put up a squawk, and Aunt Millie went upstairs with her."

"I'll get her!" the judge said. Gertrude turned back into the hall way with him; Sheila and Peter were face to face for one whirling minute.

"Don't give me away!" she breathed.

"I won't," he said quickly, agitatedly, "But I have to see you. I have to see you. When can I see you? I've been trying to find you——"

There was no more time; Judge McCann's footsteps and with him was a tall, delicate-looking woman with an eager stare toward Sheila. Gertrude and Peter disappeared; the others went back into the library.

The room began to circle slower and slower about her; it settled down to chairs and tables, books and firelight again. Sheila sat limply on the edge of her chair. Opposite her were Mrs. McCann, also seated, and looking at her attentively and encouragingly, and Mr. Paul, standing on the hearth rug, addressing his wife, but glancing continually at Sheila as he spoke.

"This young lady boug-e; Gertrude's purse at the rummage sale yesterda', Mamma,"

"Paul St. Leon?" Mrs. McCann said, in a soft, pleasant voice.

"Yes, ma'am," Sheila managed to say.

"Do you live near St. Leo's, dear?"

"No, ma'am. I live out in the Bronx, a short down near St. Leo's."

She found some money in Gertie's purse," Judge McCann said, "Fifty dollars!" Mrs. McCann looked surprised. "Which Sheila with money," she added, shaking her head disapprovingly.

"One ge'rl comes all the way down from the Bronx to give back the money!" Judge McCann said, ge'rl love," Paul McCann said.

Mrs. McCann nodded her head again, looked at him mildly.

"Isn't that so, Papa?" she agreed, sympathetically.

"Ellie, is that fair?" he demanded, chuckling.

The woman was serious, sympathetic.

"Indeed it's not," she said, with a sigh. "Oh, dear, dear, dear!"

"Well, then, what's the suggestion," he said, belligerently. "You handle it, Are we going to let it go like that?"

Mrs. McCann looked with infinite kindness and with a half-smile at Sheila. The smile invited the girl into her confidence. "He's like that," it seemed to say, "but only his way of showing he is stirred." Aloud she said, "It seems to me the only thing to do, Papa, is to do all we can to make the other little girl happy too."

There was such goodness, such simple friendliness and sympathy in her calm, middle-aged face as she made this suggestion, that Sheila felt guilty and more unhappy than ever.

That young girl who was here a minute back in our ward, Gertrude Keane, and it was her purse you found," Mrs. McCann went on.

"She and our Peter are getting married on Tuesday, Judge McCann and I feel very happy about it."

Sheila was ashamed, dazed, frightened. She wanted only to escape.

"Tell me your name," the judge said, stopping short in a restless turn about the room.

"Sheila Carscaddon."

"Carscaddon?" he shouted. It was as if a gun had been fired in the room. "Where from, Sheila?"

"No, sir. We live in the Bronx."

"I'm sorry, I know ye," he muttered, transfixed. "Look at the red head on her, Minnie. She's One Carscaddon's ge'rl. Of course she is." He snapped his fingers wellpleased at once again. His excitement communicated itself to the two women, and Mrs. McCann said sympathetically, "Now, take it easy, Papa."

"Cool! Con Carscaddon." Paul McCann exclaimed suddenly, pointing a stout finger at Sheila. "That's who your papa was."

"My brother Neely's named for him, Cornelius."

"We were boys together in the old laundry days up in Albany," the man said, "I thank God for this, Mamma. I've prayed for this! Manny's the time I've prayer that I'd run into poor Con's children. That was the cheapest fifty dollars I ever spent, that Gert 'lost on us. You've lear'd me talk of the Carscaddens Mamma? This is Con's ge'rl.

"I've heard you talk many's the time, Paul," said his wife, almost as pleased as he, in her quieter way.

He wiped his forehead, blew his nose. His blue eyes were brimming.

"Twas God stnt this child our way," he said, clearing his throat.

"I hope it was, indeed," said his wife.

"Your father was my fr'nd, my dear," the man told Sheila simply. He sat down, patted her hand; he was breathing hard. "I'll be yours. You may lay to that," he said. "You'll niver have cause that you'd regret this night's work. Con Carscadden's ge'rl. And there's otehrs, is there?"

"There's Joe and Angela and me, at home. And Margret and Neely's married," Sheila explained, her eyes shining with tears.

"And she raised you all without him, did she?"

"My sister Angela was born after Papa died."

"My God, my God, my God," he muttered, "all of you, here in this city, needin' help, and I not knowin' it! Well, now the times are over, I'll stand to you. I'll stand all of ye."

He was walking about again, agitated, impatient. Sheila was tired, tired. Her eyes were tears in Mrs. McCann's sympathetic eyes.

"Well, she'll have some supper," he said. "Mamie said she'd look out for her. Ge'rl, ge'rl, and this spit of his sister Julia. She'd a fine, coarse head of red hair on her, too, Mamma, we'll have to kape an eye on these your 'sters of Con's."

"We will, Paul."

"They'll have frinda, now," he said, and blew his nose, and put his handkerchief out again. "They'll have frinda now, Ellie. You'll have to see Con's widow. Ellie—find out what we can do."

"I'll do it tomorrow, Paul, "Mrs. McCann rose, held out her hand, "Come with me, Sheila," she said, "We'll get something to eat, and then I'll take you upstairs, and see if we can't find a little rest for you and cost of Gertrude's that'll fit you. You're a real big girl, aren't you, wears bigger clothes than you'd thing——"

Walking comfortably, she went with Sheila through a very confusing day, dark, richly furnished rooms towards a dining-room and back to bright clean pantry beyond it. And here, true to her promise, Mamie had hilfred arranged a meal of coffee and salad, a little baked custard, a chocolate sclair.

Sheila, who had dragged heavily on fish-balls and prune shortcake help an hour before, realized wretchedly that she must appear to be ravenous. When providentially Mrs. McCann and Mamie left the room for a few minutes, she seized the opportunity to pour the custard, and the coffee down the sink drain, and spread out the salad in the little white enamel-ware garbage tin that was already half filled with dead flowers and wastes from the vase, eating the sclair when they returned.

They had with them a heavy soft, dark-blue coat with a fur collar; the coat of any girl's dreams, and a small, soft blue hat.——

Mrs. McCann, in her gentle voice and with her gentle smile, "there'll go well with your bag. They's Monica's—she's up at Kenwood, and she'll be glad for an excuse to get new ones."

Her hands lingered in motherly fashion about Sheila, as she helped to put them on. She smiled at the result, and Mamie brought her hands as she stood before them. It was all like a nightmare. The warmth, their kindness their goodness were all completely disarming.

"You're pure, dear, and the money in it. And tell Mamma that Judge McCann was one of your papa's old friends, and that I'll be over tomorrow to have a little talk with her. And you've your nickel for the subway——"

"You're awfully king to me, Mrs. McCann," Sheila could only rumble. She had completely abandoned the brogue, but neither of the other women was apt to notice the combination.

"Hind, my dear! When the Lord has been so good to me," Ellen McCann said humbly. She went with Sheila across the wide hallway again; it was darkened now, but there was still a dim indication of lighted lamps beyond the library archway and in some smaller room there were subdued laughter and the sound of voices. Mrs. McCann herself opened the big front door for her guest.

CHAPTER 6

Just as Sheila was about to leave the dark young man who had entered this same doorway just after Sheila had, and who had been addressed by Mamie as "Mr. Frank," came down the big, palm-decorated stairs of the central hall, and joined Mrs. McCann at the door.

"Mother," he said, He stopped in surprise, and over his rather sort, dark face only fans a smile broadened at the sight of Sheila. "Well, you look better!" he observed. "Mother, I'm sorry—but I'm going out to Benadette's for about an hour. I couldn't run Miss—this young lady home."

"Well, so you could," his mother agreed, "It's right on your way. My son's young lady lives in Spuyten Duyvil," she said to Sheila, explanatory.

"Bernadette said she'g telephone you in the morning, mother." Frank McCann said. Suddenly he laughed, and his mother looked at him in surprise.

THE SON OF TARZAN——85 (Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

The Sheik eyed Korak for a long while without speaking. He was trying to think of some form of torture that would gratify his rage and hatred toward this creature who twice had been the means of his losing possession of Meriem. Beyond the pallisade arose the clamorous din of the elephant. A half smile touched Korak's lips and he gave a low, weird call before one of the blacks guarding him struck him savagely across the mouth.

None knew the significance of that call, save Tantor in the jungle, who cocked his ears as the sound of Korak's voice fell upon them. He approached the pallisade and lifting his trunk above it, sniffed. In his tent the Sheik rose at last, and, pointing toward the bound captive called two of his biggest slaves. "Burn him," he commanded. "At once." To a stake in the open space of the village centre they dragged Korak and bound him tightly.

Bringing brushwood they piled it high about him; and the Sheik came that he might enjoy the agonies of his victim. But Korak did not wince even after the flames shot up. Again he raised his voice in the same low call and this time came the answering trumpeting of an elephant. Outside the palisade, Tantor had placed his head against the wooden logs and pushed; but the pallisade was strong and only gave a little to the pressure.

The sound of Korak's voice calling him, and the scent of man, his enemy, filled the great beast with rage and resentment against the dumb barrier that held him back. He wheeled and shuffled back a dozen paces. Then he turned, lifted his trunk and giving voice to a mighty, trumpet-call of anger, lowered his head and charged like a huge battering ram of flesh and bone and muscle straight at the mighty barrier which sagged and splintered to the impact.

PLANS 800 MILE BICYCLE TRIP

Eddie Quakenbush, Carrying Place Will Cycle to Sault Ste Marie

Carrying Place, July 28—It has been remarked that distances have been done away with by the people of this modern age, because the use of up-to-date inventions and means of transportation bring one to places from place. Be that as it may, distance has by no means stopped Mr. Eddie Quakenbush, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Quakenbush of this place, who is planning a solo bicycle trip to Sault Ste. Marie sometime next month. He is facing the prospect of an 800-mile journey without the least of apprehension, but rather with every pleasant anticipation. With his bicycle equipped with a twenty-tooth sprocket, and with favourable wind and weather conditions, he is confident of making the trip in less than a week, and states that he may be able to reach Toronto, a distance of a little more than 300 miles, the first day. Having previously wheeled to Kingston and other points, his calculations should be reasonably accurate. Eddie will leave on the morning of August 1st, and will be away for a period of ten days. Although he has not made any preparations as yet, he is completely on his way after making several visits to relatives there, and taking into account stops by the way, Canadian National Exhibition and such, he should arrive home again within a month of his departure. Just at present he is studying road maps with the assistance and co-operation of Rev. A. E. Twener, who is more interested in the proposed journey. Eddie is to be complimented on his initiative in undertaking such a trip.

While workmen were using an electric hoist to lift and lower the bell under the Rectory on Thursday, a short circuit occurred which burned out the transformer fuses. As a result, there was no power for those supplied from that transformer, including the Anglican church, Mr. Jos. Hanlon's garage and residence, and the store, the post office, and Mr. Westfall's residence. The damage was repaired the next morning by electricians from Trenton.

The acquisition of new planes at the Airport seems to have greatly increased the training activities of the officers there. On every possible occasion one sees them flying in formation and making dare-devil tacks on ground objects. The resonant hum of high powered motors has become a part of every day life here.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Wannamaker and Mr. George Kemp spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. Ross Carnrite and Edith at Presqu'ile Light, attending the Farmers' Picnic in the afternoon. A record crowd was in attendance, having gathered from far and near to enjoy this annual event. Lawyer Ross, of Belleville, who were present with several planes including their sundry, did a large passenger business. In the afternoon a ball game between Wooler and a Picton team drew many spectators. Presqu'ile Point has become a highly popular summer resort and its many attractions have brought it one of the largest colonies of summer inhabitants of any resort in eastern Ontario.

All offer congratulations to Jim Green and Willie MacDougall who were successful in passing the Entrance examinations. Jim and Willie wrote their exams at Trenton high school.

POWER COSTS AID MINING

Capital Cost Per Horse-Power Only $90 Says Henry

Toronto, July 27—A reduction in the cost of power following the acquisition by the Ontario Hydro Commission of the Abitibi Canyon Power Development of the Ontario Power Service Corporation, will make it possible to develop hitherto unmarked low grade ore deposits in Northern Ontario, Premier Geo. S. Henry stated last night.

"Power at the Canyon will be available to the province at a capital cost of less than $90 a horse-power," said the Premier, "it is the lowest cost of any major power development that I know of in the province. Power at Chippewa was produced for $140 and even the power which will be made available by the Seymour project will cost $120.

Defending the terms offered by the province to the Ontario Power Service shareholders, Premier Henry claimed that the cost of the project as planned by the province in the Ontario Power Service shareholders Premier Henry claimed that the cost of the project as planned by the province compared very favorably with the cost under the originally private ownership scheme. "Not only have the charges on which the bonds were based been reduced but the entire capital stock has been written off. There will be no dividends to pay. In addition to this the government has retained under the agreement the privilege of redeeming the bonds at par any time."

GRACE'S SAVAGE

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

Claire Norton came into the bedroom and dropped laughing on the chaise lounge.

"Guess what!" she cried, her eyes merry. "Don is bringing an Indian down for the week-end! A real one! Isn't that exciting?"

Grace Martin, Claire's friend and guest for the summer, paled a little and looked at Claire in rather an alarmed fashion. Grace was a pretty girl, black haired and brown-eyed, and inclined to be a bit timid.

"Not really!" she exclaimed. "Not a genuine savage? Oh, Claire, don't be silly. Don wouldn't do that!"

Claire laughed delightedly at the other's misgivings. "Don't get scared, Grace dear. This particular Indian is a college chum of Don's. They played together on last year's varsity. Don has invited him and three other friends down for the week-end. It'll be loads of fun, meeting a real Indian!"

Grace was relieved, but not completely so. She knew Don, Claire's brother, of old. He was always up to some sort of trick, and it would be just like him to invite one of those filthy savages to be his guest, the kind you read about and see in the movies. Despite her best efforts Grace couldn't bring herself to share Claire's eager anticipation of the visit.

The letter had arrived on Friday. The next morning Claire and Grace drove to the station in the former's roadster. Claire chattered merrily. She was delighted with the prospects ahead, and secretly admitted to Grace that she intended to exercise her wiles on the "savage" if given a chance.

Grace's heart pounded a little as the express from Boston ground to a stop. There were only four passengers and Don Norton was one of them. He was accompanied by three rather stalwart youngsters of about his own age.

Claire's face fell. There was no Indian, or sign of an Indian in the group.

"Sorry, sis" Don sang out. "Chief Setting Sun was called back to Washington at the last minute. We'll have to do without him. Claire was greatly relieved. The three friends whom Don had brought down for the week-end, especially one—a tall, dark youth, who had excellent manners, and who, compared to the others seemed reticent and reserved—interested her immensely. By time they had reached the Norton's summer place, she had assumed her usual jovial air and could readily share Grace's anticipation of a delightful week-end.

There was a party that night. Friends came from neighboring estates, and Don and Claire's parents arranged for a dance on the boat house. The tall youth, whose name, Grace learned, was nodding more or less than John Smith, claimed her for the evening. That is, when the slightest opportunity presented itself, he was at her side. Grace did not mind Mr. Smith's attentions; she rather enjoyed them. And when, at the end of the evening, he suggested a quiet stroll along the shore of the lake, she accepted but not without a little flutter of her breast.

It was a beautiful night, with moon and music combining to make the natural beauty of the lake.

"It has been wonderful meeting you here," Mr. Smith said at length, and Grace felt the slight pressure of his hand on her arm. "I was a bit puzzled at first," he went on. "You seemed so quiet and—timid. Back there at dinner—" he hesitated. Grace continued: "Were you disappointed at not seeing Chief Setting Sun in the group?"

Grace gave a little involuntary shudder.

"On the contrary," she laughed, "I was rather glad. Imagine having Don ever took it into his head to bring a filthy savage down here to meet us."

"It is a little odd," Mr. Smith agreed. "Except for the fact that this particular savage is one of Don's friends, I should think it at all filthy."

Grace made a little gesture of impatience. "Oh but they are," she said. "I've read about them and seen pictures in books. Some of course, attend the white man's college, but that doesn't change their inside. They're—treacherous."

Grace suddenly paused and looked up into Mr. Smith's face in faint alarm. He had stopped and was staring down at her coldly, strangely. She saw then, perhaps for the first time, that Mr. Smith's eyes were coal black, his hair long and straight, the high cheek bones and a rather prominent nose.

She was suddenly seized by a horrible, cold fear. She saw it all now—Don's hideous joke. He wanted to prove to them that all Indians weren't savage and filthy, that some were quite civilized and respectable.

A cold fury took hold of Grace, to be repaid almost at once by pity—and something else, utte fear. Slowly she looked up into Mr. Smith's cold, black eyes.

"I'm sorry," she said evenly. "I misjudged you in my ignorance. It's quite plain to me now that Indians are far more superior, as far as manners are concerned, than a great many white men."

Mr. Smith bowed and smiled quietly. "I'm not exactly a full-blooded Indian," he told her. "My father was a Sioux. My mother a white woman. Don thought it would be fun to play a joke on his friends here. I'm sorry, too, especially so because you had to be the victim. But I couldn't let you go on thinking, feeling the way I do...Shall we to back?"

"I said Grace without a moment's hesitation. "Let's turn this joke inside out and make Don the goat." Her eyes twinkled, as she observed her hand under Mr. Smith's arm. "I'm quite satisfied that it all turned out this way. Are you?"

And Mr. Smith smiled his answer speaking to her with his eyes.

It can hardly be disputed that the qualities which enabled a man to come to the front in democratic politics are not those which would be likely to make a man a wise ruler in difficult times.—Dead Hage.

Being at or near the end of the road there is nothing that interests you so much as your successors, those who are at the beginning of life. Ashley

It is folly for the world to go on breaking its back over military expenditure.—Herbert Hoover.

Popular demand for the most wanted of all tires has dotted the Dominion with Goodyear selected dealers. More Goodyear Tires are sold than any other kind, which means that the stocks of Goodyear dealers are always fresher and newer.

Goodyear service men are anxious to fit tires and tubes to your rims accurately, so as to avoid pinching and unnecessary wear.

But, above all, Goodyear dealers can stand back of what they sell, because these sturdy tires are "body-balanced." Carcass and tread are virually one piece. There can be no weak spots because shocks and strains are borne by the tire as a whole.

See a Goodyear tire dealer now. If he is a Goodyear dealer, he is a good dealer—capable of giving you intelligent, honest, friendly service that will make you glad to know him.

NOTED MINISTERS VISIT STIRLING CHURCHES SUNDAY

Stirling—Rev. Canon Simmons, of Kaifung, China, had charge of the Sunday evening service in St. John's Anglican Church, preaching from the text "Go home and tell what great things the Lord hath done for you" and his marvellous narration of how the Canadian missionaries were protected during the troublous times of the last five years since he and Mrs. Simmons and son sailed for China after their furlough in 1927.

When they reached Japan, they were informed from headquarters that they must proceed no further, and it proved to be a year before Rev. Mr. Simmons was allowed to go back to Kaifung and six months later Mrs. Simmons and son joined him. There are twenty Canadian missionaries in Honan Province, China, and 1000 converts and probationers who have the opportunity of hearing the gospel. Rev. Mr. Simmons is fifty millions.

Rev. Mr. Whatman of the Prohibition Union addressed the Sunday School and also preached in St. Paul's Church in the evening in the interests of the Temperance cause, taking as his text Hebrews 11: 23 and 1, John 3: 8, said he had been asked "just what has the temperance cause done in thirty years?" and he showed there had been considerable improvement. The speaker said it was estimated that every permit holder spent on an average of $125.00 a year and he told his chief reason for was going to subscribe $125 to the cause of prohibition this year as money was not flowing into the treasury as formerly.

Montgomery. Discussion read on a few items from the Presbyterial Record, to be General Assembly. After the closing hymn, the meeting closed with the Lord's Prayer in unison.

Federal Grand Jury to Probe Riots in Washington

President Hoover Orders Federal Grand Jury Inquiry

DISORDER PROBE

Policeman Still in Serious Condition, One Veteran Dead

J. A. MURRAY

WASHINGTON, July 29. — Federal Grand Jury investigation will be undertaken at the direction of President Hoover, in yesterday's clashes between the police and bonus - demanding veterans, resulting in the death of one veteran and later between federal troops and the rebellious squatters on federal property.

While a more or less general exodus from the city appeared to be taking place among the veterans, their families and adherents, and with intantrymen standing guard over the tear-gas encampments which had been bathed in tear gas to force the occupants out yesterday and on last night the U.S. Justice Department issued this statement which indicates immediate investigation.

"In pursuance of the President's direction to the Attorney General to enquire into the recent disorders in the city the supreme court of the district has been requested to lay the subject forthwith before the Grand Jury now in session."

At Emergency Hospital, George Hott, a policeman injured in the clashes, remained in a serious condition from a fractured skull caused when hit by a brick.

On behalf of Walter W. Waiter, the one-time commander of the "bonus army", it was said an attempt would be made to set up a national organization among the veterans. One of his aides headed toward Johnston, Pa., with a view to setting up headquarters there.

Day Clear Camp

Monfreville, In Maryland, a mile from the Anacosta camp that was razed by fire last night, a number of veterans voluntarily evacuated their camps after a visit from a National Guard officer of Maryland.

The officer informed them that they had been ordered later today to clear out the camp. It was a small group of veterans in this point of the area and disabled from the bonus army were cared for.

There were no signs of disorder to day, but soldiers and police were on hand in readiness especially in the vicinity of the White House.

There is also no unnecessary overnight communications had arrived from radical organizations, protesting and insisting that the Government is the result of the hangings of yesterday.

Welland Residence and Shop are Blown to Pieces

NO ONE INJURED

Bomb or Gasoline or Gas Blamed For Welland Disaster

Welland, Ont., July 29—A terrific explosion early today wrecked the shop, repair garage and residence of John Mastrionanni here. No one was in the building at the time. Not a wall of the frame building was left standing and windows in nearby houses were shattered.

Mastrionanni and his daughter were in Sault Ste. Marie for the Wolf Week celebration.

Rural Residence Wrecked

Immediately after the explosion, the wreckage burst into flames. No reason is given for the blast. All gas jets were found to have been turned off.

Two definite theories as to the cause of the blast are advanced. Assistant Fire Chief J. C. MacMillan believes it was gasoline, while police blame either gas or gasoline.

The loss is estimated at $4,000.

The Assistant Fire Chief is in consultation with the Fire Marshals' Department on the matter.

JEAN BOROTRA UPSETS DOPE

Defeats Vines Jr. in Singles of Davis Cup Competition

Blade Roland Garros, Paris, July 29—Jean Borotra, fleet footed French tennis veteran, today sprang a stunning upset as he defeated Ellsworth Vines, Jr., ace of the United States team, 6-4, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4 in the first match of the Davis Cup final between the United States and France.

The beret-loped Basque, lifting his game to the heights evidenced in the best days of the "Three Musketeers"—himself, Cochet and Lacoste—rushed the American off his feet in the first two sets, wrested the third from him in a close game back with a fiery attack to take the fourth handily.

The French gallery, to whom Borotra is a legend, was wildly hysterical as their favorite overpowered the more experienced player the United States has sent after the cup in recent years.

CAR FACTORY STAFF INCREASED GREATLY

Indianapolis, July 29.—The Studebaker Motor Car Company of America today reported six times as many unemployed men back on the job. A portion of these are for export which has been in the making for them during recent weeks. This factory reports that it now employs approximately 40 per cent during the last three weeks.

HAS NEW SCHOOL NO DEED FOR LAND

Hamilton, Ont., July 29—Dundas has a new high school, but no deed for it. Several days ago, the trustees decided to scrutinize the papers relating to the school to see that the building was in connection with a creek which skirts the property, secretary didn't have the deed. The chairman then made a hasty rush through his papers. He didn't have it. A hurried visit was made to the bank where the deed is usually buried. The deed was not there.

The Birth of Hallowell

By Fred Williams

DO YOU KNOW that Friday is the anniversary of the creation of the Township of Hallowell, in Prince Edward County?

The tenth of the counties created by Simcoe in 1792, Prince Edward showed considerable and rapid growth of population and a demand was made upon the legislature for the division of the county into two townships. This resulted in the passage of an act at the session of 1797 providing that, "a township shall be struck off from the southernmost parts of the Townships of Marysburg and Sophiasburg." That act having received the royal assent Peter Russell, president of the province, on July 30, 1797, issued his proclamation bringing the act into force and "naming the name the Township of Hallowell." It was not until February 6, 1834, that the Judicial district of Prince Edward was created by act of the legislature and by proclamation, of which Sir Colborne.

An interesting glimpse backward is given in an assessment list of the Township of Hallowell for the year 1806-9. The land owners included many men whose names have come down to the present, and whose descendants are still, many of them, on the old land. Among the largest landholders were Gilpin Bowerman, with 1,150 acres; Ebenezer Washburn, 1,100; James Blakely, 1,740; Barret Dyer, 1,200, and Silas Hull, 955. There were 101 round log houses, 42 square timber, 38 frame and under two storeys, 1 brick or stone, 1 sawmill, 2 merchant shops, 146 horses, 105 oxen, 384 cows, 90 swine, no stills, no billiard tables, no boats of eight tons, and no windmills. Widow Dugal was well-to-do; she had a span of horses as well as two yoke of oxen: but Thomas Bowerman was the largest stock owner in the township.

The assessors were Olibert Dorland and John Platt, and they are on record as swearing that of the 31,178 acres of land entered, 3,194 were under cultivation, which was not bad for a township only fifteen years old.—Mail and Empire.

Largely Attended Nomination Held at Plainfield Thursday

TWO CONTEST

Stalwarts of Party Including Leader Address

For the selection of a standard bearer for the riding in any provincial election in the offing, Thursday evening gathered of East Hastings Liberals in the Conservatives' strongest political citadel of Tory low township and held their convention in Orange Hall at Plainfield. The large gathering of the faithful attested to the keen allotment overtaking the seating capacity of the place, and many were turned away.

The Liberal leader for Ontario, Mitchell F. Hepburn, M.P., was present, and on the platform with him were William Newman, M.P.P., for North Victoria; W. A. Fraser, M.P. for Northumberland; and J. Duffus of Peterboro, president of the Central Ontario Liberal Association; Thomas Ferguson, Provincial Liberal organizer; Lt.-Col. Reuben Vanderwater, K.C., Albert Faulkner, Liberal candidate for West Hastings; Colin Campbell, Liberal candidate for Addington, and G. Hirold Ireland. The president of

FOUND GUILTY AFTER 24 HRS DELIBERATION

WINNIPEG, July 29.—Four Toronto persons, Leo Wadder, Fred Brown, Laura Rolland, and Charles Spratt, were today found guilty on charges of Arson, conspiracy and attempted fraud, arising out of the destruction of goods of the Toronto Quilting Company in the Toronto Block fire here, June 1931.

Prospecting Party in South Yukon Disbands Finding No Trace of Gold

Juneau, Alaska, July 29—A member of the Detroit expedition which flew north in five seaplanes two months ago to prospect in the Land District and the Southern Yukon Territory returned here today and said the party was disbanding after, abandoning all prospecting activities.

C. O. Buther, Detroit contractor, reported the party's breaking up saying that no promising gold prospects had been found.

The report of Harry Townsend, Alaska mining engineer, was unfavorable to continue prospecting, Butcher added, and the party's members will be disposed of within a short time.

The venture has proved a great disappointment, he declared.

The five planes had made the long flight from Michigan by easy hops across Canada.

DOCTOR FIRST LAST FRIEND SAYS PRINCE

London, July 29 (OP Cable)—The Prince of Wales has become his own doctor—at least in certain extent—according to his testimony before the British Medical Association.

"It has been a great asset service," he told the learned physicians, "that I have learned from so many others how to keep myself fit—that I have to some extent become my own doctor." The doctor," he added gravely, "is certainly a great friend in life and probably also our last."

CHARGE DISMISSED AGAINST INDIAN

Orillia, Ont., July 29—A quarrel between two Indian brothers that ended in the death of one was the subject of Magistrate Daniel McCaughrin, holding police court here today. Peter Bell of the Rama Ojibway Indians on the Rama reserve was charged.

Accepting testimony that John Bell, deceased, had been the aggressor in the dispute, the magistrate dismissed the charge of manslaughter laid against Wellington Simcoe.

Charles Simcoe, aged mother of the pair, testified in defence of Wellington Simcoe. The trouble came to the house quarrelling, trying to raise an argument and settle a long un. We didn't mind it. We took it, but we did not want him around," she said.

Prince Says Higher Level of Comfort and Well-Being will Come

Adjustment Between Production and Consumption is Most Urgent Task — Prince Refers to Imperial Conference as International in Influence

London, July 29 (C.P.-Cable) — The international influence of the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa was pointed out by the Prince of Wales today in an address before the International Congress of Commercial Education here.

"Ottawa is not in its constitution international," he said, "but it was the Imperial Conference, "but if, as we hope, it promotes the prosperity of the British Empire it will be international in its influence."

Referring to present conditions throughout the world, His Royal Highness continued: "If all employable labor were employed there is a reasonable number of hours weekly the world would have a surplus of commodities and services enabling the entire population to live on a high level of comfort and well-being than was ever contemplated in the easiest terms by the social reformer."

"The most urgent task, he declared, "is to secure the adjustments necessary to bring consumption and production into proper relationship. "It is not simple or easy, but a quite possible task," observed the Prince.

Five Men Said to Have Walked Into Volpes' Restaurant

Pittsburgh, July 29—Three Volpe brothers—Orlando, Dominic and Arthur—long political powers in the borough of Wilmerding, were shot and killed in a gun battle here today.

The shooting occurred in a coffee shop operated by one of the "Hill District," not far from the centre of the borough.

Johnnie Volpe, shot near the heart, staggered from the coffee shop and fell dead in the gutter His two brothers were dead when police reached the scene.

Business Expansion

About a year ago, the Volpes, who have been interested in liquor racketeering in Wilmerding, sought to extend their activities to Pittsburgh. The district in which they have killed is known as the new territory they invaded.

It was said that five men walked into the restaurant and without a word began shooting point blank at the Volpes.

DELEGATES TO VISIT NIAGARA

Opening of Welland Canal is Set For August Sixth

Ottawa, July 29—Delegates to the Imperial Conference will be given an opportunity to see part of Western Ontario next week when they attend the official opening of the Welland Canal. The trip, as announced today, includes stops at Hamilton, Niagara Falls and St. Catharines, in addition to the trip through the canal.

Travelling by special train, the delegates and members of the official party will leave Ottawa on August 3, arriving in Hamilton on Friday, August 5. There visits will be paid to the home of Adam Beck, before the party leaves by motor car for Niagara Falls. At Niagara Falls the party will be entertained at tea by the governor-general. On the south side of the canal at a formal dinner in the evening.

The official opening of the canal is set for Saturday, August 6, the opening ceremony to be performed by His Excellency the Governor General. Following the unveiling of Brock's monument and the Hydro electric power plant at Queenston, motoring from there to St. Catharines. The delegates will lunch at St. Catharines the delegation will return to Ottawa.

The following week-end it is planned to take the delegates down the St. Lawrence to inspect the work of the new waterway, and indications are that a number of side trips will be arranged.

Barrie, Ont., July 29—Convicted of petty theft in County Judge's Criminal Court yesterday, W. J. Holden, former mayor of Collingwood, and one time candidate for the House of Commons, was given two years' suspended sentence by Judge Holmes.

Wolf Day at Sault St. Marie Hunters and Trappers Foregather

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 29—Today is to be devoted especially to the recognition of the Algoma Wolf. So far in Wolf Week there has been American Day; Hiawatha Day, Community Day and Swim Day, but today is Wolf Day.

The Hiawatha play by the Indian Band of the Parry Island Reserve was so well received that it is to be repeated today but the feature of the program is the dinner of the Algoma Wolf Club at which one hundred and trappers assemble and professional, will tell of their experiences with the Wolf and with other animals of the Algoma bush. A prize will also be given their opportunity to challenge the Wolf of Old Sam Martin that "any man that says he has been 'eat' by a wolf is a liar."

But they'll have to produce the evidence.

There has been a surprisingly large number of visitors to the city during Wolf Week and yesterday a train brought down two hundred up from Sudbury for the big swims.

Up to 1902 most gladiolus grown in American gardens came from Europe; today 80 per cent of the varieties on the market are of American origin.

Currency, Instability in Commodity Prices and Exchange are Discussed

Feeling That Something Should be Done to Raise Commodity Prices But Caution in This Regard is Evident

NO INDICATION OF EMPIRE BANK FAVORED

Discussion of Implication of Mr. Baldwin's Speech Continues Among Delegates and Public Men of Empire and The World

(By Ray Brown, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 29—Representatives of the United Kingdom the Dominions and India yesterday discussed the decline in commodity prices and the instability of exchange rates. It was the first open business meeting of the Imperial Conference Committee on monetary and financial questions. At the organization meeting on Tuesday, Hon. H. H. Stevens, Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce, was elected chairman.

The discussion will continue today. So firm the brief official announcement following the meeting, it has already been intimated that, after an exchange of views, a subcommittee will be constituted to explore the details of currency, exchange, and price declines.

Caution is Evident

That the committee will proceed very cautiously is the opinion in well informed circles. Caution is unanimity in one respect—that something should be done to raise commodity prices—some diversity of opinion as to how this may be accomplished exists. One theory advanced is that with the gold standard return to prosperity, the value of gold will become more stable and general stability will result. Another is that the other country and Dominions should agree on some joint monetary action which would result in raising commodity prices. No indication that establishment of an Empire bank or currency is favored, exists.

British View.

London, July 29—(By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer)—Great prominence is given to in the British press to the British statement at the Ottawa imperial Economic Conference.

"The statement by Mr. Baldwin," said the Manchester Guardian "is to suggest it,is not enough for the Dominions to be content with inflation. In its background lies an informal offer by the British Government of which the reported terms suggest they are by no means uncommittee; as their public utterances indicate."

The British delegates promised to consider the Dominions' proposals in a sympathetic spirit, the prejudiced minds, indeed an earnest desire to do all in regard to the wishes of the Dominions" the Manchester paper said.

Firm Warning.

"The sentimeal does them credit," declares the Guardian, "but it is the barest truth to say the acceptance of an offer so prepared would be an indefensible betrayal of British interests. Taken at its face value the British statement that the Dominions have to recognize that the D.minions have lost their power of prosperity by the British delegates' trick to this they will leave Ottawa with no agreement nor providing a trade agreement down of D minion tariffs as a first step towards concessions on our part."

Will Take Holiday.

(By George Hambleton Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 29—The Empire Conference takes a week and off, tomorrow, delegates go to Montreal Quebec. Monday will be a conference holiday. And next week will be a short working week of really only three days, for Thursday they'll say evening, Aug. 4, delegates leave to visit Niagara Falls and the Welland Canal.

Official activities were confined to a short session of sub-committee work. But rumor was busy with stories of a hitch, that the British delegates were planning to return Aug. 6. British headquarters quickly dismissed the story as "ridiculous." The only bookings so far made it is understood are those of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and Mr. Hon. Walter Runciman who expect to visit August 20.

Ottawa, July 29—The Empire Conference moved forward to its climax.

The statement issued by Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, leader of the British delegation yesterday afternoon, identifying a review of tariff advantages by Empire goods in the British market—makes clear that the British delegation aims to secure.

(1) Reduction in the rates of duty now imposed by the Dominions and foreign countries.

(2) Curtailment of the power of customs authorities to exercise arbitrary valuation for duty purposes.

DIRECTION SIGNS TO BE PLACED

Daily occurrence of tourists losing themselves at the intersection of Front street and East Dundas street, owing to their failure to observe the small direction signs on the south corner of the walk on Dundas street, will be eliminated shortly by the erection of new highway direction signs by the Ontario Department of Highways. The new signs will probably duplicate the ones which have been installed in the boulevard on upper Front street at the upper bridge. Formerly many tourists ignored the left hand turn at Dundas street and continued down South Front street over the bridge, where they proceeded to lose themselves around the wharves. Loud lamentations on their part to city officials has resulted in the matter being brought to the attention of the Department of Highways.

Letters Arrive at Chamber of Commerce From Italy, Palestine

Increasing preference for articles of Canadian manufacture year by year comes more evident among purchasers in other countries throughout the world. And among all these other factories and workshops of the Dominion, where a million necessities are made, and find themselves transported to the farthest corners of the earth, Belleville manufacturers are by no means behind in the list. Their products, labelled with the trade name of Belleville, have become recognized and approved of even in far off Palestine, Italy and other European countries across the seas. Daily, to the desk of the local Chamber of Commerce, come letters asking for information about certain local manufactured articles. On Friday of this week two more letters, gaudy with foreign stamps and postmarks, from countries many miles apart, requested aid in locating certain articles needed. The first was from Palestine, Israelite and Shifrin, company, wished to locate some one who could quote them prices on boxed apples. The other letter was from D. V. Del Mastro, Milano, Italy, requesting the local Chamber of Commerce to put them in touch with certain manufacturers of machinery which would be useful in macaroni factories in that country. Both letters were replied to by Mr. J. D. Herity, manager of the Chamber, as are all the other letters on as many varied subjects which are received throughout each week.

Mrs. Annie St. Charles of Actinolite Will Face Trial

Mrs. Annie St. Charles of Actinolite appeared in Belleville Police court, held before Magistrate Casement in Belleville on Thursday afternoon charged with the theft of $70.00 from her mother, Mrs. Lewis Fobert, also of Actinolite.

Mrs. St. Charles pleaded not guilty to the charge when read but admitted taking a much smaller sum. After hearing the evidence submitted his Worship held that there was enough evidence shown to commit the accused for trial and she was held in custody awaiting trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction.

On Friday, Mrs. St. Charles was again arraigned before Magistrate Casement in the county police court build at Madoc being charged with stealing one fur coat from her husband, Chas. St. Charles.

R. G. Dornan, local crown attorney, appeared for the crown while the firm of Collins and Cushing represented the accused.

COAL ORDERS SLOW IN BEING FILED

Chilly winds, snow on the doorstep and ice on the milk bottle tops still seems a long way off to most citizens, according to local coal dealers, who keep careful tabs on the weather, fuel orders and the vagaries of the public, which they serve. In other years it had been customary at this period of the season to commence filling fuel orders for the coming cold months. Generally June was a good month, piles of coal still wait for initial July a little better and August one of the best months to fill the orders, which were sent in by foresighted householders. After August the orders would fall off a little until the first few zips of frost. This year has experienced a flip flop on that matter, as well as many others. Up to now the orders for fuel, which have been received can be counted on the fingers of one hand. Large city.

MEN'S SENIOR SOFTBALL LOOP

In the first two games in the play-off series of the Belleville Men's Senior Softball League the first place Canada Cement nine trimmed the fourth place Houston Club by the score of 7 to 3 at Point Anne on Thursday evening.

In the second play-off game between the second place Continental Life team and the third place Ciplex nine, the Corbyville boys took the short end of a 6 to 4 score. This game proved to be a battle through out with the "insurance" boys coming from behind, bunching their hits and scoring four runs in the sixth innings.

Johnnie O'Neil and T. Clarke were the opposing pitchers and turned in creditable showings throughout. Hanna was the only player to hit for the circuit.

In the Houston-Canada Cement game, the Point Anne aggregation banged four runs in the final frame to win their game. Yervious to this both teams had battled along on even terms throughout.

The line-ups—Point Anne—Left, Bero, Brant, Green, Hutchings, P. Bennett, B. Bennett, Sherbuck and Whalen. Houston—Knoll, Carter, Burgoyne, Holgate, Barriage, Scrimshaw, B. Hems, Sagar and J. Hems.

NO VARIATION IN TEMPERATURE

No great variation in the temperature was noted during the past twenty-four hours. Thursday's temperatures were 75 high and 51 low. Friday, however the mercury only dropped to 58 during the night and had soared to 73 at 8.30 P.M.

TRY TO LOCATE KINGSTON YOUTH

Early Friday morning the local police received word from the Victoria Industrial School at Mimico, Ont., that Gordon Knight, resident of Kingston, escaped from that institution. Knight was supposedly headed toward home and the local police are endeavouring to locate him if he passes through Belleville. He was described as being 17 years of age, standing 5 feet 8 inches in height, well built and of ruddy complexion. He has brown hair and blue eyes. When he left the institution he was not wearing a coat but had on a blue and white striped shirt.

LOAD OF SOFT COAL FOR GAS COMPANY

Waterfront activity was again heightened early Friday morning with the arrival of the Coalhaven at port in Schuster's dock, loaded with twelve hundred tons of soft coal destined for the local plant of the Ontario Shore Gas Company. The cargo which by no means taxes the capacity of the giant freighter owing to the fact that she could not make port with a full hold, is being unloaded from the boat with the aid of a power conveyor on a long boom. The coal is piled into small mountains on the land at the dock while scores of spectators watch the operation.

SALE OF PERMITS IS ON DECREASE

A marked decrease in the number of anglers' licenses sold during the past month has been commented on by the issuers of permits in the city. The past month, generally one of the best months for the sale of the necessary permit to outsiders who wish to fish in the province, has been one of the slowest periods in some time. Sale of tackle, however, still remains at average.

STRUCK BY TRAIN

NORTH BAY, Ont., July 29.—James Dale, 45, Kirkland Lake, was seriously injured here today when he was struck by a Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway freight train, 45 miles north of this city.

Bayonet, Sabre Oust Veterans as Order is Given to Clear Camps

TEAR GAS USED

Parley First Held Under Flag of Truce Without Agreement

Washington, July 29—(UP)—Cavalry troops with drawn sabers and steel-helmeted infantrymen with fixed bayonets charged into Washington Friday after the first blood had been shed in bonus army rioting. Using tear gas and a show of irresistible, determined strength they began a systematic mop-up of the bonus-seeking ex-service men.

For hours the battle of Washington waged. From the time the troops first entered the city until 10.35 when the veterans leader advanced under a white flag and announced evacuation of the last camp, operations continued.

The climax to the whole struggle came at 10.04 when infantry, supported by tanks and cavalry advanced on the great camp at Anacostia, the last to be subdued. Gas bombs were hurled at the thousands of silent veterans. Under cover of the gas troopers advanced and fired the huts. Then the veterans gave up.

Appeal to President

The troops were called out by Secretary of War Patrick Hurley, after the District of Columbia commissioners appealed to President Hoover for help. They said the situation demanded a show of force before any an outbreak of police reserves could quell the roving veterans, had gone entirely out of hand.

In rioting before the troops had been called out one veteran was shot to death and a score of persons injured.

Later the bonus-seekers were driven from their Pennsylvania Avenue camp in confusion before a cloud of gas. Hospitals were filled tonight with victims suffering from gas, sabre wounds and other injuries. One veteran had an ear sliced off. A check-up showed 54 persons in different hospitals at 9 p.m.

As the men fled from their camps, some of the troops set them afire. The gas fumes and smoke from the flaming structures added to the wild confusion.

General Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the United States army sent home for his uniform and soon was at the head of a powerful military manoeuvre, which had for its objective the clearing out of all the rickety, tumble-down shacks and buildings which the veterans had been occupying.

Used Tear Gas Bombs

The military started its operations at 4.45 p.m. (E.S.T.) and by 5.30, scene of the earlier rioting in which one veteran was killed, two others wounded and scores overcome, including eight policemen injured.

Trim and soldierly, the cavalrymen—last seen in the capital when they paraded at the funeral of William Howard Taft two years ago over the same route which they followed with weirdly treed today—established the first of their objectives speedily.

Expanding into line, they covered the advance. As the blue blaze of the tear gas spread, women and children fled in terror, horses reared and plunged, veterans and their wives fled, pell-mell from the buildings under attack.

Where some of the buildings. The first of these, an old National Guard armory, was cleared this morning before the rioting which resulted in the death of one William J. Hufnka, 2216 W. 23rd St., Chicago. Veterans were still in the others but they did not stay long.

The excitement attracted upwards of 10,000 spectators who thronged the sidewalks and spilled over into the streets. There was no purporting. Hard-boiled cavalry officers rode into the crowds waving their sabres, sometimes slapping obstreperous individuals with flat of the steel.

"Get a move on; clear out of here," shouted the cavalrymen.

VITAL PARLEY IS A SUCCESS

World Hopes Die if Imperial Conference Fails

Ottawa, July 29.—"The conference is shaping like a success," observed Lord Hailsham, British Secretary for War, interviewed yesterday. "We are all working very hard," he added.

"It is absolutely vital that this Ottawa conference should be a success," Lord Hailsham went on. "If it isn't, to my mind it means the breaking up of the Empire within my life time. And, of course, if the Empire goes, there is little hope for the world."

"Can Great Britain give the full tonnages asked for by Australia and Canada on Soviet wheat, lumber, etc.?" Lord Hailsham was asked.

"We may not be able to do all that we are asked, but we can certainly do something," Lord Hailsham replied.

JUST PLAYING AT POLITICS

Doubtful if St. Lawrence Will Ever be Deepened

Goderich, Ont., July 29.—Expressing doubt that the St. Lawrence waterway deepening will ever be completed, Senator Frank Tom, Chile, declared in an interview yesterday, "they are just playing politics. The signing of the treaty just served to furnish ammunition for the present United States administration."

Senator Tom, a native of Exeter, Ont., is on vacation in Goderich where he resided at one time. Discussing the 18th amendment, he blamed the law for the lack of lawlessness in the United States but doubted whether repeal would every carry. The rural Americans, he said, were either not familiar or not sufficiently concerned with the condition of affairs in the cities under prohibition.

"No attempt was made to enforce the Volstead Act during the first two years of existence. This time there will be no chance for the jokers to 'get set' and today they are in control of government" said Senator Tom.

Kiel, Germany, July 29.—Bodies of several of the victims of the sinking of the 'ship' training ship Niobe were reported floating off the coast of Pehrman today. Several naval vessels were sent out to search the area.

MYSTERY LIST HAS ARTICLES ALREADY ON

Offer Does Not Amount to Row of Pins Says Some

Of 3,000 Articles Named Many Have Already Been Dealt With

Ottawa, July 29.—Examination by British tariff experts of a list of 4,000 articles which can be admitted freely to Canada without injuring Canadian manufacturers reveals the fact that many of the items are so trivial in character that the proposed preferences relating to them would be inconsequential. Indeed, the list of nest without ludicrous features. One of the articles Canadian manufacturers thought could safely be admitted free of duty without prejudicially affecting their interests is "Mickey Mouse: (milchines) for the making of the noles of." Other items are "celluloid for toy rabbits" and "ditto for toy bears." They recall Mr. Dunning's "cut flowers and cast iron pipe."

It is understood the list was compiled by the Canadian manufacturers in response to Prime Minister Bennett's request for co-operation from them in assembling a schedule of articles not produced in Canada which might be admitted to this market free of duty when produced in the British Empire.

Much has been made of the claim that Canada would be able to extend British preference on 3,000 items, as a matter of fact there are fewer than 1,100 items in the Canadian tariff which are not free. "Supreme" list of "4,000 articles" has been compiled by substituting such items as strychnine, which appears in the compilation under ten different heads. Moreover, hundreds of the articles specified are admitted free from the Empire already.

British official opinion, after analysis of the list is that it "does not amount to a row of pins" and the Canadian manufacturers should know that more substantial concessions will have to be made as the "quid pro quo" for primary products of Canada. The British Government is interested in an increase in trade rather than "paper preferences" which would not bring any grist to the English mills.

DE VALERA CAN'T HAVE ULSTER IN REPUBLIC

Ottawa, July 29.—"What is the use of mediation with men like Eamon De Valera who won't budge?" asked Lord Hailsham, British Secretary for War, attending the Imperial Conference here, when he discussed the Irish situation during an interview yesterday.

Lord Hailsham said President De Valera wants, "so he told Mr. Thomas and me," an Irish Republic with Ulster in. "But Ulster doesn't want to go in," added the Secretary of War, and obviously Mr. De Valera's hope is impossible of achievement."

READY TO RENDER ANY ASSISTANCE POSSIBLE

Ottawa, July 29.—"I am here to-day to offer assistance if I can to the conference in matters in which Canada has an interest," was the explanation given for his arrival here yesterday by Hon. S. Harring-ton, Premier of Nova Scotia. The Premier is accompanied by Mrs. Harrington and Hon. Percy Black, Minister of Highways.

Premier Harrington arrived, the Premier said, lay chiefly along the lines of coal and steel, lumber and orchard products. He also referred to the long-accepted world currency, Winston Churchill.

LEONARD IS SCALING THE COME-BACK TRAIL

New York, July 29—Thirty-seven year old Benny Leonard has gone a long way toward dispelling the cold adage that they never come back.

The former lightweight champion today had chalked up the fifth straight victory of his come-back campaign, the result of a clean cut 10-round decision over Billy Townsend of Vancouver last night at Queensboro stadium.

Leonard, weighing 151 pounds, was credited with eight rounds to his foe's six in the 144-pound opponents.

"THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES"

"The Hound of the Baskervilles" has been widely published by story translation into numerous languages and by radio broadcast over N.B.C. This drama follows on the heels of "The Fatal Hour" and "The Speckled Band," and plays at the Capitol on Wednesday and Thursday.

The stories are spoken of as a series only because they are all made from Conan Doyle's famous detective tales, and because each one, of course, relates a new adventure of that master of all detectives, Sherlock Holmes, the outstanding creation of the Great British novelist. But each of these screen dramas is a complete story in itself being in that respect no different from the original tales which Conan Doyle wrote, some of which appeared at periods of years after others had been published.

The present picture is based on "The Sir Arthur's best known, most romantic and most colorful stories. No less a person than Sir Walter Walker, whose recent untimely death came as a shock to lovers of literature and drama throughout the world was entrusted with the task of writing the dialogue for this picture, the producers wishing to make sure that the story was given every advantage in the way of down-to-the minute atmosphere in addition to those splendid and exciting elements originally assembled into this fascinating tale by its author, Conan Doyle.

"The Hound of the Baskervilles" is a spine-tingling example of the writer's art. He has brought together all the edges of the great, lonely stretches of Dartmoor a group of persons typical of those dramas of English life which have made the Sherlock Holmes tales famous the world over. There are young Sir Henry Baskerville, who has just inherited the great estate and has come to live at the Hall; following the sudden death of his father, Sir Charles, at the same lonely spot on the moor where many of his ancestors have died; the family doctor, who secretly believes that his friend Sir Charles met with foul play, and had not died of heart disease as officially reported; the old family retainer, Barrymore, and his wife, who had served for Canada's track and field troops injured to an end today, 48 hours before the athletic battalions of Empire sports. The opening engagements of the 10th modern Olympic games. With the single exception of Jimmy Ball of Winnipeg, the Canuck hopefuls were pronounced in the peak of conditions for the contests.

Ball has another week to recover from a leg injury and is expected to be ready for the starter's gun in the 400 metre event.

Stern Opposition

Stern opposition faces the Dominion's outstanding performers in the first 100 metre heats Sunday according to unofficial reports of Bert Craw, Young Bert Peters, Hamilton school-boy sensation, is bracketed with the United States greatest dashman, Ralph Metcalfe. The defending Olympic champion, Percy Williams, meets Koernig, veteran German star. Until the draw is officially announced it will not be known what opposition Fanny Harold Wright, third Canadian entry in the sprints.

Farnum Ready

Attention of pre-game observers yesterday was diverted to the sculls, with Malton Leander's great eight drawing more than a little applause. The oarsmen are working out a long Beach, 20 miles from here, and are trying to become accustomed to the "feel" of salt water. The Halifax Mac Macs with their four-oared boat also shown great improvement, since their arrival, while the Vancouver double team of Gerald Mills and Ned Pratt are in splendid shape. Wright, Ajax, Toronto, former Diamond Sculls winner, who lost to Rutherford of Canada in the Canadian Henley, is believed to be in better condition and is expected to garner a few points for the Dominion.

LIVESTOCK ON THE FARM

Hastings County stands up well in the list of counties in Ontario in regard to livestock according to the last Dominion census. Livestock has a value of $4,176,927 The details prove very interesting. Horses total 14,226 of a total value of $1,262,-886. Of this total 47 are stallions. As an offset to this Hastings County has one mule, valued at 75 dollars. Some other counties do not own any while others run up to 54. Most have one or two. The cattle total in Hastings is 76,690, worth $2,191,161. In the ship division the total is 31,419 animals worth $175,455. Now Hastings has 28 goats worth $366 out of the total of 3,915 goats in Ontario.

Pigs make a grand total here of 37,596 worth $324,780. Over half a million poultry, 515,081 is worth $210,238. Of these hens and chickens total 495,658 birds. Turkeys total 9,010, worth $10,060. Ducks are fewer at 3,847, geese 7,476, other poultry 90 birds. 4,792 hives of bees in Hastings have a value of $22,926.

In Prince Edward County horses number 6,668, mules 2, cattle 24,317, worth nearly a million dollars, sheep 9,385, goats 15; swine 12,792; poultry 218,407; turkeys 3,230; ducks 5,525; geese 2,437; other poultry 76; bee hives 1,925. The total value of livestock on the farms of the peninsular county is $1,848,-935 of which domestic animals have a total value of $1,735,388.

The total valuation of all the livestock in Ontario has dropped in the last years to $172,581,370 from $235,005,271, the decrease of $62,423,895 or 26.55 per cent being explained by the decrease in the number of the various classes of livestock and partly by decrease in values during the period. Horses drop 38.84 per cent, the unit price falling from $123.50 to $87.52 and the average number of horses per farm falling down 3.38 in 1921 to 2.00 in 1931. The greatest decrease is in the percentage of stallions.

Mules have more than doubled during the decade, an increase of 2,106.30. Many increases were in the tobacco farm areas.

Cattle show a decrease of 4.32 per cent in number and 23.52 per cent in value. But the number of calves, heifers, and cows in milk or calf has increased, this tending to show that the dairy industry has advanced in this period.

There has been a phenomenal growth in the poultry industry an increase of 43.86 per cent. Bees have also increased 40.30 per cent while the value has gone down 14.41 per cent.

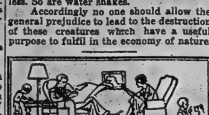
These values in the statement issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa represent the farmers' own estimate of their livestock as they would bring on the market as of June 1st, 1931. and there is a possibility that there was a tendency to underestimate.

ESPECIALLY INTERESTED

Canadians and among them Bellevillians have come to appreciate the sterling qualities of Colonel the Hon. Hugh MacNider, U. S. Minister to Canada, who is soon to leave his post to take part in the presidential election on behalf of President Hoover. The United States ambassador has been a powerful advocate from the U. S. standpoint of the St. Lawrence development proposition.

Col. MacNider has especial interest in Belleville and Hastings for here some of his forefathers lived. He was a visitor here not long ago at a banquet at which he showed the sterling makeup which has made him so well liked. He was a guest of President. Col. MacNider has undoubtedly amazing executive ability as his choice by President Hoover for the position above shows. He was also mentioned for the Vice Presidency of the U.S. and some of his friends say he is a coming president some day. If he does place candidate of the United States will be more pleased to hear of it than the ancestral home of his forefathers, that is the Bay of Quinte section.

The U.S. Minister is not only an astute diplomat but he is possessed of an unusual sense of humor and a gift of pleasantry as when he rallied the singing at the banquet here by those who did not know the words of the U.S. anthem, they were attempted to sing. He gives one the feeling of solidity and strength and straightforwardness underneath which lie the skil. of the born administrator and diplomat.



BE FAIR TO SNAKES

Those who come in contact with snakes in Ontario should not allow the general prejudice against snakes to lead them to destroy these creatures. Hereabouts there is not such a thing as a poisonous snake and indeed the only poisonous snake in Ontario is the small rattler found in the Georgian Bay district, where their area is very confined numbers are very few.

The story published in the press of the death of a child near Brantford as due to a snake bite is untrue as to the cause of the death. The local doctor denied that a bite was the cause of death for there were no poisonous snakes in that region.

"A snake in the grass," is an epithet which is absolutely unfair to the little garter snakes, which are entirely harmless. So are water snakes.

Accordingly no one should allow the general prejudice to lead to the destruction of these creatures which have a useful purpose to fulfil in the economy of nature.

A BIT OF CHEER

Never mind the clouds, dear, never mind the rain;
Trust in God and look ahead; the sun will shine again—
Singing after sorrow, and good health after pain.
Sow the seed and by and by comes the golden grain;
Sow the seed of happiness when all the skies are bright;
If the clouds come lowering down, laugh them out of sight.

Never mind the wind, though it whistles loud and long;
Whistle up a tune yourself, and then break out in song;
Laugh away your troubles, and pray away your cares;
That's the way, my sweetheart, to climb the golden stairs.

LGU J. BEAUCHAMP, poet and entertainer, has been heard in Belleville in his charming recital of wit and philosophy, and to all appearances had not a care in the world, in fact he seemed to exude happiness at every pore. Being a philosopher he could afford to ignore the hard knocks of life, and he has had his share. His principal hobby in life, aside from diffusing good cheer wherever he happened to be, was in assembling a library which would be one of the most complete of its kind in the world. Lou lived down near Dayton, Ohio, and had for a near neighbor the Ohio river, which generally was well behaved, but when it got on a spree it was a case of all hands on deck and batten down the hatches for the Ohio when wild roared where it listed and where it listed there was not much left but mud and misery and a motley collection of flotsam and jetsam. Lou's library was nearly complete and he had invested all his life's savings in it and the modest home which he had prepared for his wife and himself to provide a comfortable haven in the twilight of their lives on the banks of the Ohio. Although he built that home with his own hands, a home and the winds blew and the waters rose and after nights of horror and suspense there was no house, and no library and the efforts of the years had been swept away. Lou signed up for more lecture tours and at sixty-five started in all over again to realize his lifelong ambition. Then he wrote this bit of poetry which shows that he might be down but he was far from OUT:

PCIATOES MAY GROW SMALL IN KANSAS, as the old song goes, but that state can point with—pride to having municipalities which have abolished taxes. The fourth city to claim this distinction being Beloit, which has suspended all taxes because the city-owned light and water plants produce enough profits to pay the city's expenses. Three other Kansas cities have done likewise, so it can not be a fluke. Perhaps Belleville folks if they use more electricity and water can make a bid for the Kansas record. If the water was metered there is no doubt the revenue would be much greater.

FIFTY-FIVE THOUSAND TELEGRAMS rained down on Col. Lindbergh, from sympathizers, after the kidnapping of his son. (It is hoped they were sent prepaid.) He received nearly 2,000 letters per day for weeks. All of which was good business for the post office department and the telegraph service. Speaking of telegrams, one of 22,000 words was sent to Senator Sheppard recently by a citizens committee of Houston, Texas, to influence his actions in a certain matter. The Yanks are certainly very mercurial, we can not imagine stolid Canadians going to all that trouble and expense. A few sympathetic letters might be written, but telegrams!—hold the phone.

CRANBERRY JUICE COCKTAILS are becoming quite popular in the United States and crowding the tomato juice cocktail into second place. Cranberries are of New England which threatened at one time to be a total loss were turned into big dividend-paying by the intelligent use of newspaper advertising. Hail the conquering hero comes, even the humble cranberry is elevated to the rank of best-sellers by the magic wizardry of newspaper advertising—and to think that many an otherwise sane and sophisticated business man has gone down to defeat when he could have been saved by an energetic advertising policy.

Other Papers' Opinions

HASTE MAKES WASTE

Police tests recently conducted in cities with fairly heavy traffic prove conclusively that a driver who rushes the lights, weaves through traffic and in every possible manner crowds his car, can save at best about half a minute a mile over the speed of cars which consistently follow the rules, and whose drivers make no effort to beat the rules. This merely demonstrates a principle known to every experienced and thoughtful driver who is connected with the trade, but not appreciated by many customers with whom he comes in contact. It is expressed by the old adage, "Haste makes waste." Not only public safety but reasonable upkeep expense argue in favor of conservative driving, and many cars will give better satisfaction than otherwise if their owners are advised to be gentle with the machines and save on speed for the open road.—Tillsonburg News.

HAVE HAD RAW DEAL

The men who are walking stoop-shouldered these days are not necessarily doing so because of the weight of business worries. A week end spent at the lake in a bathing suit is likely to be the cause.—Petrolia Advertiser-Topic.

EXCURSIONS POPULAR

Three excursions have been run in this district in the past week, and in every case the Bobcaygeon Lake was crowded to capacity. A few years ago this was not the case, and excursions were almost a thing of the past, so far as the Kawartha district was concerned. Conditions must be given a few trips out into the open for a change, and there is nothing better than a steamer trip over the lakes of the district. —Lindsay Post.

RETRENCHMENT

One-tenth of our present expenditure must be struck out. That Canada is over-governed, I venture to say that it cannot be done a non-sense. It must be done and it must be. The nature of the emergency is familiar to everybody and the large scale when you have reduced expenses. The best way, as experience has proved, is to cut down all departments by a certain percentage. If boards and commissions throughout the land are compelled to economize, why should the public service be exempt? Every single category of expenditure for the Budget should be cut down by 10 per cent. Armaments should not be exempt.—Montreal Herald.

BRAVERY IS REWARDED

It is always a delight to see recognition made of brave deeds. The Royal Canadian Humane Association has now awarded certificates to two Brockville lads for bravery displayed on the waterfront of this town. In both cases, parchment certificates have been given for rescue from drowning.

Robert Campion, who is on duty as lifeguard and instructor at the Brockville bathing beach, rescued a lad to the water of the St. Lawrence off the C.P.R. wharf, and rescued a young who was in distress after having fallen out of a canoe. Master Wm. Warwick went to the rescue of the other boy who had rolled into the water from a boat.

The recognition which has been taken of these deeds by the organization organization is well deserved and with the many appreciated by the citizens of Brockville—Brockville Recorder and Times.

OUTLOOK FOR THE CONFERENCE

But while there is danger of over-confidence on the part of the public as to the success of the disarmaments that can be effected, it is significant that the statesmen outside the Empire, especially the United States, who have been watching the conference most closely, are now actively discussing the probable effect on the Empire trade relations on their future trade with the Empire countries. The disposition in the U.S. to regard the conference as a failure is redoomed to failure is no longer in evidence. Moreover, it is conceded among fair-minded American observers that the British Empire has the same right to be heard and be exercised for years in the protection and development of its own trade. Empire trade, moreover, is not primarily mean hostile tariff action against any one country, but is based on the desire to bring about an increased measure of trading with in the Empire that will restore prosperity and benefit the world as well as the British countries immediately concerned. Within larger and larger areas there must be increased freedom of trade movement.

Lausanne was the first step toward general commercial recovery. The success that was achieved there despite almost insuperable difficulties, in itself furnishes a reason to expect success at Ottawa—Toronto Telegram.

JULY 29, 1892

We had the pleasure yesterday afternoon of being introduced to and having a chat with Rev. H. Pattabiahsing Chase of Sarnia. Mr. Chase is visiting this town on the old childhood, having been born in Belleville in 1818 and baptized in St. Andrew's Church by the late Rev. Thos. Campbell. He is a lineal chief of the Ojibways; was for many years in the Civil Service having received an appointment from Lord Metcalfe, when Governor General, and twenty-seven years ago he offered himself to the Church of England as a missionary to his people. He has been four times to England as a representative of not only his own tribe, but of all the Indians in Ontario. He was presented to her Majesty Queen Victoria in 1876 and twice has been presented to the Prince and Princess of Wales. He is a walking encyclopaedia on Indian subjects. Mr. Chase says that the original Indian name for what is now Belleville was Asaukhkonk, meaning "the place where the rushes end," derived from the fact that rushes grew along the Bay of Quinte but forsaked at the Moira. Talking of the incorrect spelling of names by the public he says Napanee should be spelled "Napoza" and that it means "the place of flour," that was the only place long ago where there was a flour mill. Mr. Chase carries with him the Chief's medal given to his grandfather by King George III., and Belleville is his medal issuer, also a medal given to him by the Queen in acknowledgement of his philanthropy. Mr. Chase will be in the city and vicinity for some days and through the kindness of Rev. Canon Burke and His Worship Mayor Bogart has met a number of our prominent citizens, who have been delighted with him and his fund of information.

50 YEARS AGO

July 29, 1882

The chief local event of next week will be the excursion to Peterboro under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Andrew's Church. The success of this event may be taken as assured. The Oddfellows' Band has been engaged for the day.

A prominent citizen of Belleville was sitting on the stern of a sunken vessel near Massassaga Point yesterday fishing for bass. He got a bite and struggled to pull the fish out, but the fish struggled too, and the result was that the prominent citizen instead of pulling the fish out, he was pulled in by the fish. He slipped on the slippery hull and turned a peaceful somersault into twelve feet of water. Fortunately the wetting which, he received was the most serious result of the accident.

GARBAGE CANS REPORTED TAKEN

Mr. D. Shryver, 50 Alexander street and Mrs. Conon 56 1-2 Algonquin street both informed the local police Thursday morning of the loss of their garbage cans, and they had set out on the street the night previous for the local garbage collector to empty. Mrs. Conon informed the police that her garbage can was missing, while Mr. Shryver lost a can. With this clue in hand the police are convinced that the thief or thieves, as the case may be, have the cans in their cars and had been emptied. Both cans had been recently purchased and had only been in use for a short time. What puzzles the owners of the missing garbage cans and also the police, is why anyone should steal such a thing.

BUILDING OF STURDY TYPE

Month's Work to Complete Alterations For Hydro

Built in the days when the sturdy bricks matched the men who handled them, the walls of the old Tickell building on Front street which is now undergoing extensive alterations to fit it for occupancy by the local hydro office has well nigh resisted the efforts of the workmen to pierce them in order to place the steel beams which are necessary to reinforce parts of the building. The walls of the building, which were built over fifty years ago by some long forgotten craftsman, are three bricks thick and solidly mortared with a strength of material, which would have endured many more years to come. Other parts of the building are exceptionally strong and very little reinforcing will be necessary. Upstairs in the completed structure the hydro will have their business offices, the main floor will be set aside for display purposes and the rear sections of the building will house the service and repair departments. It is estimated that at least one month's work will be necessary before the building is ready.

2 CLAIMANTS WITHDRAWING

Wendell Estate Case Goes on With Third Withdrawal

New York, July 28—Surrogate James A. Foley announced today that two of the claimants to the $30,000,000 Wendell estate had withdrawn from the case altogether and that another had withdrawn a claim to being a fourth degree heir.

The Surrogate said that counsel for Ethel May Rose had informed that she was not a fourth degree relative of the late Ella V. Wendell, but now asserted she was probably related in the sixth or seventh degree. The lawyer was given 10 days to file an amended bill of particulars.

Claimants Reduced

Today's announcement reduced the number of fifth degree claimants to 36, nine of whom have been recognized by the estate, and there are still two fourth degree claimants, William Robert Dew and Jas. Floyd Dew.

Mrs. Richard Brooks of this city was one of the claimants as a direct descendant of the late Miss Wendell of New York.

SUN ECLIPSE AWE-INSPIRING

Astronomers on August 31st Will Observe Phenomena

Quebec July 28—The eclipse of the sun on August 31 will be interesting for the general public, but to scientists it will be merely another opportunity for cool observation and hard work. This became apparent today as the party of 40 astronomers, headed by Sir Frank Dyson, astronomer royal of Great Britain, reached here on the Canadian Pacific liner Montcalm. Divided into four groups, the astronomers will observe phenomena from different vantage points in the province of Quebec where totality will be longest.

"To the general public," said Sir Frank Dyson, "an eclipse of the sun is a magnificent spectacle that should not be missed. To the scientists it is a totally different matter. He knows what he is looking for before he starts to take his observations. The astronomer is anxious to gather all the information he can about the sun's atmosphere and an examination of that atmosphere through a prism gives him the spectrum. The lines of the spectrum of course tell their own story."

Even Morning Milkman is Steered Away

Ottawa, July 28.—Delegates to the Imperial Conference must have their sleep. Busy days of conference and nights of social activities are followed by stillness almost of the woods around the Chateau Laurier, the Ottawa home of the Empire's representatives.

During the early morning hours, circling and surrounding the Chateau are closed to traffic, a peaceful calm pervades the area. Traffic officers, on all night duty, divert all automobiles, the early morning milk driver, with his jingling horse, from the vicinity of the hotel and quiet is guaranteed.

POTTER'S FIELD GHOST TRUSTY

Wm. Chrysler Warbles to Keep up Courage in Spooky Place

JOLIET, Ill., July26. —The ghost of the convict Potter's Field will croon no more.

A sentry posted by State Penitentiary officers found the phantom singer today in the quarry whence his melodies and Latin chants had floated up to an entranced and spellbind audience from the surrounding countryside.

William Chrysler is the phantom's name — a prison trusty on night watch duty in the stone quarry down behind the burying ground for convicts. He had been on that post just three weeks and in that period the songs seeming to come from the little graveyard, had brought hundreds nightly in search of the ghost singer.

Keeps Up Courage

Chrysler was brought before Col. Frank O. Whipp today.

"I have to come down behind this old cemetery every morning," he explained, "to look at those pumps and it's kind of spooky around here. I usually sing something like 'Rock Of Ages' or 'Onward Christian Soldiers' to cheer myself up."

Col. Whipp suggested that hymns be sung hereafter in the daylight hours and far, far away from the burying ground.

15 CRAFT PASS THROUGH CANAL

Swimming Expert Instructs Children at 12 O'Clock Point

CARRYING PLACE—During the past week a total of fifteen craft of various types have passed through the canal. On Tuesday the government ship Grenville went through eastward bound. On Friday a tug, the Sydney Mac, with a dredge, S.C.H. No. 7, and a scow went east. Twelve yachts of various types also piled the canal. Most of these were of Rochester or Buffalo, with several from Toronto. It is interesting to note that of these twelve seven used gasoline as motive power, two used sail alone, while three were driven by gas and sail.

The names of the yachts were as follows: Widgeon, Sarida, Lantee II, Sea Gypsy, Rosa Bay, Boy, Revival, Thalassa, Vivette, Naomi, Tiger III and Abenca.

Work on the dock being constructed near the second bridge is still going forwarded, under the direction of Col. Saure, Canal Superintendent.

Twelve O'Clock Point, News:

With its natural advantages of pleasant shade, pure fresh air, wonderful scenery, and its facilities for amusement to recommend it, Twelve O'Clock Point summer resort is once more becoming a centre of attraction. At the present time every every one of the cottages is occupied, are some difficulty is being experienced by prospective campers in securing accommodation. All this reminds one of the time not so many years ago when this place was one of the best known resorts around, and suggests the possibility that this may soon be true again.

A highly commendable suggestion has been carried out in the securing of a swimming instructress for the younger children. Each morning these youngsters look forward to their daily lesson, either at the wading beach or, for the more advanced pupils, at the dock. A double purpose is served, for not only are the children given this very necessary instruction, but while they are away their parents can rest their minds with the under stood fatherly supervision.

Sunday picnic parties continue to come in increasing numbers. Sunday last the genial Lantz Brothers picnic groups seem to find this just the place for the entertainment of the crowd, and booking and conditioning to be the popular sports. The fishermen are also reporting quite better success recently. However, no one records having duplicated the feat of the lady who recently dragged up an eighteen-pound muskie from the canal.

Miss M. Corrigan is spending a week's vacation visiting friends.

Mr. Frank Smith of Toronto, is spending several weeks' holidays at a cottage along the Bay of Quinte shore.

While flishing one morning last week at West Lake near Wellington, Mr. Howard Hoyle and Mr. A. Norrington succeeded in getting a fine catch of pike. Fishing has been very good there this season, with pike, pickerel, bass and a few lunge rewarding the anglers; but in order to get the big fellows, it is necessary to get there early.

Rivalry between Consecon and the local boys promises to be very evident in their next ball game of which will be their last meeting this season. Although our own boys have won only three times this year, they have twice done so at the expense of the Conseconites. The next game will surely be very interesting. As one Consecon fan remarked, "When you fellows play us, you play just like veterans." This will be our last chance to see our-boys playing this year. Be sure to come and encourage them.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Norrington are spending a few days camping at Presqu'ile Point.

A large truck-load of cordwood was stranded in front of Mr. Dusenbury's home last Thursday forenoon when one of the left rear tires blew out. The truck, belonging to Mr. D. Phillips of Trenton, was forced to wait for several hours until a replacement tire could be secured.

According to information received from a reliable source, our local member of Parliament walked on Hon. Leopold Macaulay one day last week, asking informaties as to when work on the Trenton-Carrying Place road might commence. In his reply, Mr. Macaulay stated that just as soon as word was received from the Federa lgovernment at Ottawa telling them what type of bridge they were prepared to build over the Murray canal, work would be started. The road to Trenton is in a very bad condition at the present time. The roadmaster, has received instructions to leave the road as it is, since in so short a time it will be being re-built.

A large picnic from Wellington travelling via one of the Consolidated School busses passed here for a few moments on Friday morning while on their way to Presqu'ile Point.

KAN-YEN-GEH DAY MARKED BY MOHAWKS

Lord Bishop of Ontario is Made Member of Band

PAGEANT LANDING

Ceremonies on Tyendinaga Reserve Annual Event

Tyendinaga, July 29.—(Special)—The annual event of celebrating Kan-Yen-Geh Day, was held on Wednesday, July 27th at the Council House Grounds, and was very successful although the attendance was not as large as other years, on account of threatening clouds with occasional splashes of rain, which held away from the early hours to the close of the afternoon's programme.

Scenery Sets Off Pageant

The scenery was very lovely and set off the pageant of "The Landing of the Mohawks" to perfection. The scenes was delightfully portrayed by the descendants of the Loyalist Mohawk band, on the banks of the picturesque shore of the Bay of Quinte on May 22nd, 1784.

The ceremonial of the planting of a tree, and the hoisting of the Union Jack, the o-w-turning of the canoe, the placing of the Queen Anne Governor's Chair, Service thereon, and the singing of a Mohawk Hymn, was very impressive.

Powwow Presented

Mr. Tyendinaga John, a descendant of Captain John or Deserontyon, taking the part played by his noble ancestor as a Chief, and the eloquence in his role as a Christian among the Mohawks, and other Indian regalia.

The pageant, who took part were very nicely dressed in lovely beaded costumes as they flitted here and there in front of the council, setting up the teepees and cooking a meal in true pioneer fashion, while the men sat in Council and smoking the traditional pipe of peace.

Rev. John Anderson, or Sho-ho-wo-wer of Brockville, took part as a member of the Tribe.

Poem Recited

Mrs. H. A. Brant recited her own poem of "The Landing of the Mohawks."

Little Miss Ariete Miracle, a descendant of Christine Miller, the Dutch girl, who was brought by the Mohawks to Canada, when they fled before the victorious Colonists from the State of New York in the War of the Revolution, was a very sweet representative of her fair ancestress.

Mr. Charles John, the oldest member on the Reserve, and a direct descendant of Captain John, said a few words from the platform. Mr. John is 87 years of age and very feeble in health.

Bishop Loves Indians

The Bishop of Ontario, the Right Rev. Dr. John Lyons, was given a Mohawk name.

Mr. Isaac W. Green, was Master of Ceremonies and the name was conferred upon the Bishop which in turn was bestowed by three mothers of the tribe, Mrs. Percy Johnson or Ka-rah-qwis-ti-ha, Herman Chase or Ga-ya-ha-ton-do and Mrs. Irene Brant or Da-wan-dem-ah.

The name given, which means "Raindrop in the Sky" was O-ron-ya-de-ah and His Lordship chose the "Wolf" for his Clan.

The Bishop gave a short address on loyalty and of the loyalty of the Mohawks to the Crown, long before the War of the Revolution.

Rev. Sho-ho-wo-neh, A. L. Coon of Belleville, spent a delightful time with his Mohawk brethren, who value his friendship and loyalty, as a brother and member of the Tyendin Clan.

The different organizations of the Reserve, The Greenwood, The Pine Blues, The Athletic Association, The Surplice Choirs, The Little Helpers, The Junior W. A., The Girls' Branch of the W.A., the Senior W.A. and the Pupils' Guild took part in the programme.

The school children accompanied by Mrs. Gordon Brant at the piano sang "O Canada", very sweetly.

Fancy Dance

Mrs. Stacey of Montreal, gave an Iroquois dance, which added greatly to the Indian spirit of the occasion.

Have You Protected Your Children Against Diphtheria?

Dr. G. S. Cronk, Medical Officer of Health, today issued the following statement and advice on the question "How you protected your children against diphtheria?" The statement follows:

"Diphtheria is an infectious disease, transmitted from one to another through contact, from secretions from the nose or mouth, or by handling infected clothing or toys. It is also spread by infected milk, food and water.

"It begins as a sore throat, but soon greyish white patches appear on the tonsils called a membrane. It is then that antitoxin is used. Also it is given to contacts to immediately protect them, but this protection passes off in about six weeks.

"Diphtheria can be prevented by toxoid, which is given in three doses. One dose is given every three weeks until the three are given. These injections are small and safe, rarely no reaction follows and this is a permanent protection. Help to stamp out diphtheria by going to your family doctor and having your children immunized.

Moods of Soul Interpreted in Rhythm of Music by Composer

Robert Harkness, Gifted as Creator of Rhythms Pleases Hundreds

HIS RARE ART

An evening of spiritual music that gave a new power and inspiration to favourite hymns was enjoyed Thursday night when Robert Harkness of Australia, presented a sacred music recital at the Alliance Tabernacle, Metcalfe Street West. Mr. Harkness who has achieved world-wide recognition as a composer of sacred music and pianist, had a spiritual message for the congregation which conveyed in his music and in his discourses between numbers.

Mr. Harkness in his recital last evening gave a masterly interpretation of favourite sacred music numbers. He played hymn after hymn in a manner that stirred his hearers. As well as well known hymns Mr. Harkness played remarkable selections as a composer in his musical settings for various life stories which he related to the audience. As a further evidence of ability in the composition of music, Mr. Harkness set to music selected passages of Scripture, his theme and perfect conception of a musical frame for the verse meriting the highest praise. The verse was then sung by the chorus by the audience and by a soloist.

Audience Deeply Moved

The audience which filled the church to capacity was deeply appreciative of the skill and the

Her little daughter, Helen, gave an exhibition of tap dancing, and was applauded time and again for her wonderful skill in that art.

The Oshweken Concert Band of Brantford played a delightful sing during the intervals of the varied programme.

"The Ladies of the Parish, served delicious meals in the basement of the Community House.

Horseback Riding

Horseback riding and racing, ball games, horseshoe pitching and other sports were enjoyed in afternoon the pageant.

A social evening was held in the Council House which proved very successful.

Music was furnished by the Oshweken Band, and by local talent which was very much appreciated by the large gathering, who came to help along the good work of raising funds of the church.

The following verses were read at the Sunday School by a group-ed around the W. A. Badner in the Church.

THE SENIOR MOHAWK BRANCH OF THE W.A.

We are the Senior Members Of the W.A.
Seventy-four in numbers Though all 'most here, to-day.

Four years of age, last April How very young we still are! Yet far from being a tendril We're lovely branches, three.

We're pledged to work for Mission Year in, year out, each day, And so fetch glean the visions Of those sent out.

To spread the Gospel tidings To souls in need of light Upholding Truth's blest claimings To conquer evil's might.

And as true faithful members Of the W.A.
Bearing Love's golden embers In censers bulb fro aye.

We'll rally round the banner Of the W.A.
And strive in Christian manner "The Missions" need to pay.

And help all needy children With sincere heart and hand— The aged and sick brethren Who dwell in our fair land.

To King and Bishop loyal To Church and clergy true In love for God Eternal Enthroned above the blue.

We'll strive to do our duty In happy hearted way. And wreath with deeds of beauty Our beloved, W.A.

Leaves Note Telling of Her Love For Jack Dempsey

Los Angeles, July 29—Lina Basquette, 26 year old actress, swallowed poison today a few hours after she announced her engagement to Teddy Hayes, former trainer of Jack Dempsey, to stifle rumors she might marry the former world's heavyweight champion.

Beside the actress when police broke in her apartment was a note addressed to "Jack." It read: "I love you. Only you. I couldn't help it. I couldn't go on without you."

Physicians said her condition was critical.

The twice-married actress took a caustic poison after spending the evening with Hayes. She had been so despondent, Hayes said, that he telephoned her when he reached home. "Are you all right," he quoted Miss Basquette as replying in a note found in her pocket.

He said he rushed to the apartment and found Miss Basquette writhing in agony on the divan.

She was taken to the police emergency hospital where first aid treatment was administered before she returned to her home under the care of her private physician. Police said it might be several days before she would be out of danger.

FINANCIAL NEWS

RAILS LEAD IN UPSWING

Market on Wall Street Forges Ahead For Eighth Session

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER
(Associated Press Financial Editor)

New York, July 29—Bulls kept the whip hand in the stock market today in the face of further flurries of profit taking. The market followed yesterday's pattern, surging a little in the late hour, sweeping upward in the middle of the day in active trading, and easing off a little from the best in the early afternoon. The market has now forged ahead for eight out of the last nine sessions.

Many Advances

Rails led today's upswing, with advances of two points or more in such issues as Santa Fe, Union Pacific, New York Central, Pennsylvania, New Haven, Southern Pacific and others. American issues were not fully maintained, however. American Telephone, American Water Works, U. S. Steel preferred, Johns Manville, Chemical, Consolidated Gas and others also advanced about 2. Among issues up a point or more were American Smelting, International Harvester, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, American Commercial Alcohol, American Can and others. The movement demonstrated on overnight announcement of the reconstruction corporation, then recovered. The preferred got down more than 3, but then made up most of the loss.

Too Rapid Climb?

The further bond upswing took a large section of Wall Street by surprise, as many brokers had felt that the advance was going too fast, and that a temporary reaction was in order. Traders had been inclined to put out short lines yesterday and some added to their commitments of the upturn today by hasti with-drawing them. Some buying from abroad, particularly London, was again reported.

MART FIRMER AROUND NOON

Sellers Not Willing to Make Concessions Turnover Light

Toronto, July 29—Opening irregularity, due to some traditional losers among inter-listed issues, Toronto stock exchange was firmer toward around midday today when it was noted buyers were not willing to make concessions and when Wall Street overnight bullish per-ft taking.

Turnover was light Stocks generally set offered on a scale down and today's turnover the first couple of hours was the lowest for any of Thursday, the second heaviest day of this year.

When it was seen profit-taking would be a negligible factor, buyers were more lenient. Nickel got above 9 at 9¼ and was holding well up to that price. Steel Canada worked up 1-2 point and the consolidation shares were included in rise slightly Oils were led forward by B. A. Oil again, which reached yesterday's best price of 10 1-2 in the second hour today.

Implement stocks were slow, but held well. Price of Canada was unchanged at 3. B. C. Power retained a fraction gain and Consumers Gas came in for a little higher at 160. Bell Telephone was firm, O.P. R., Montreal, Shawinigan, Canada and Sylvanite dipped a cent or two each. Mines, in the main, were fractional advances; appeared in Stadacona, Kirkland Lake, Moffat, Werner and Sudpool Olga and oil stocks made small gains in a quiet day.

In the play-off, Miss Thompson defeated Mrs. Whitty 8-3 in a 4-end game. Miss Thompson is retaining the cup and Mrs. Whitty won second prize. Mrs. Duff's rink with her win and 26 points captured the third prize. PAAVO NURMI BARRED FROM ALL CONTESTS

Finnish Track Team Threatens to Withdraw From Games

MAY TURN PRO.

Federation Says Nurmi Accepted More Than Expense Account

(By Alan Geeld)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Los Angeles, July 28—Alan Gillett without the celebrated Dane in the east, the Olympic games will launch their most spectacular athletic show this week-end without Paavo Nurmi, the most gifted runner and most colorful personality, that ever-racing Finn ever known.

Swiftly and without the remotest hesitation, Nurmi, the great Finnish athlete stood barred today from all Olympic competition by a court decision rejecting his emery, based upon charges that he is being a professional by accepting money beyond his expense requirements for a 1931 barnstorming trip through Germany.

As a result, the Olympics suddenly have been bereft of their greatest drawing card. Coach Conard, Nurmi's ambition to crown a fourth Olympic appearance with a new and unique triumph has been shattered, and Finland's rugged little athletic (3) land has been thrown into a state of semi-rayroll.

Nurmi Out

No sooner had the ban on Nurmi been announced tonight by J. C. Edstrom of Sweden, President of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, than reports spread quickly today that (1) Finland's athletic officials were making its entire team from the games, (2) that Nurmi would immediately turn professional for a series of races in the U.S.

Finnish leaders, who fought bitterly to the last ditch against the odds, left the final hearing on the Nurmi case in shaken spirits. Nurmi, their most colorful athletic figure had been unjustly convicted. They said nevertheless, that they expected to go through with the games, despite Nurmi's reduced, ing efforts to make up for the loss of Nurmi.

Nurmi's exclusion almost completely since his arrival in the Olympic village for the tournament, either on the decision or the possibility of listening to professional offers, that already have begun to reach him.

BAD DECISION ROBBED LEAFS

Call of Play at First Worst Seen at Lawn This Year

Although the National Maids were credited with winning from the Maple Leafs in a league game by the score of 17 to 15 last night at the Armouries Lawn there are at least, four fans, who still are of the opinion that umpire Jimmy Ehler literally robbed the Leafs when he called the final out of the game in the ninth inning.

Had the Leafs got this decision at first, the score would have been 17-16 with the tying run on first base and the head of their batting order up. The decision of Ehler, "Little Leafs" of their only chance of winning a league game to date.

The Leafs pounded the offerings of three kid pitchers in all corners of the lot but committed altogether too many errors in the field and did not capitalize on their hitting facilities. Lou Carter and Pat Ehler hurled for the Leafs while Manager Meagher used Molly Gray, Irma Stewart and Orpha Knott on the mound.

The home run hitters were Hill, da McMichael, M. Sills, D. Rowbotham and M. M. Kelleher; M. Harkins, E. Cousins and Pat Ehler all helped themselves to three hits each. Pearl Anstiss provided the sensation of the night by stealing home in the ninth frame.

The National Maids and the CIAOO girls hook up tonight, while manager Lloyd has engaged the fast Wallbridge girls team for a game at the Armouries Lawn on Saturday evening. The Wallbridge outfit have never tasted defeat on their own park this year.

The line-ups:

National Maids—Kelleher; Melchoir; Bills; Tuttle; Knott; Thurston; Rowbotham; Harkins; J. Kelleher; Gray and Stewart.

Gas in the Stomach Is Dangerous
Recommends Daily Use of Neutrated Magnesia To Overcome Trouble Caused by Acid Indigestion

Gas in the stomach accompanied by a full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, which hampers digestion, accompanied by nausea, heartburn and sometimes severe vomiting. The distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acid. Instead get from any druggist a little Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, prevent the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent the formation of more. Bisurated Magnesia is a pure, tasteless, powder form—never in liquid or pills) is inexpensive, pleasant, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach disorders. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Knocks and Boosts

After considerable work and worry on their part the executive of the Belleville Nationals at last prevailed upon the Kingston Frontenacs to play their postponed game of June 28th in Belleville on Civic Holiday morning. This is the first meeting game over to be staged in Belleville since the inauguration of the C.O.B.L. in 1931 the game also means much to the up-and-battling Nationals as it is the one and one half game ahead of Peterboro' leader. Carl Casey or Al Weir will be on the hilltop for the locals when Reuben O'Neil Walsh calls "play ball" at 10 a.m. next Monday.

The recent O.B.A.A. draw, for the coming play-downs, brings the winners of the C.O.B.L. up against the winners of the West Toronto senior loop. In the intermediate ranks we find the winners of the local Bay Shore League battling against the winners of the Trent Valley loop, June 6 to 11. The city of Belleville comprised of Maple, Pelees, Hastings and Hawkins in the junior draw the winner of the local Bay Shore League will step on the B.A.A.A. will stack up against the winners of the Peterboro junior city league. Here again we find the winner of the Lennox County loop battling with the Kingston District winners. The junior play-downs are slated to start not later than Saturday, August 13th. The intermediates have one week longer, or until August 20th. The seniors must be ready to face the play-off barrier in the O.B.A.A. by Saturday, August 27th. The O.B.A.A. executive have issued bulletins to all leagues in the effect that the above draw will be lived up to, to the letter.

Walt Grewe's proteges are still one and one half games ahead of the Peterboro seniors and can extend this to two and one half games if they defeat the latter in measure in the Lift Lock City on Saturday afternoon. This is the final appearance of the Nats at James Stevenson Park this year and they want to set an all time record by winning all of there games. The locals are at present down in 1932. The Nats have won five games in Peterboro and are providing they play up to their usual form, should make it three in a row on Saturday afternoon. The Nats will be set for practice on Friday night with Skipper Grewe will put them through their cruches in preparation for this all-important game.

According to the Oshawa Times sport's writer the Oshawa Green will be winching the out-come of Monday's game at Peterboro when the Toronto St. Georges are scheduled to play an exhibition game at the Lift Lock City. Manager Mosier City crew seem to be of the opinion that if the Toronto ballsters "take" the Peter in "an exhibition game" they (Oshawa) will have a soft spot for Russ or it in the coming O.S.A.A. play-downs. The Oshawa City sports writer is taking a lot for granted, we would say. First Oshawa has not won the West Toronto team and second the referee is a bad third in the C.O.B. L. The Oshawa nine again exhibition games are no test by any means. Oshawa is ready—

After a 13-year suppressant which lasted a number of years the Capitol girl's softball team of Belleville was eliminated by the Kingston Frontenacs on Tuesday night when they dropped the final game of the league schedule by the score of 18 to 7. The Capitols have been "all perwe" in Eastern Ontario girls softball circles for a number of years but when they fell they surely fell hard. The Frontenac win, over game from the Frontenacs all season long played Mrs. Maclean Walker and Marion Grass at Napanee, the pitcher-catcher battery were much too good for the Belleviteed champions. The Belleville team also had a hard-luck game mighty fine games for the Capitols Belleville could not seem to stem the tide of hits which were continually from the Frontenac's bats. Thelma did turn in a fine pitching game but in the main though, The Frontenac will now have to lay idle until the winners of the local girl's loop is decided. Tonight the National Maids and CIAOO tie into each other.

Manager Walt Grewe journeyed to Toronto yesterday where he purchased a transfer of new ball for the Nationals. After looking over the present batting average of the Belleville nine, Walt is in search of new bats, or sumpin'. The Nationals have had two regular players, in the .300 class Feeney Mills is batting .333 and Al Weir is batting .300. Alex Weir is pasting the "bows" to the tune of .275. Both Pitchers, Painter and Casey are in the .300 class to, The only local player to show any improvement in his hitting of late is Harry Morrison, Harry has been off lately but today is pasting the "old apple" right up and there may be less any of the younger blood. Alex Weir is proven to be the most consistent hitter on the club, so far this year.

In the final scheduled junior game of the season the junior Moose kids battled Art Young's Crystalaze in a seven all tie at the Alemite Grounds last evening. Manager Art Langman opposed each other on the mound while Ketcher was the big semi-smith of the night with the locals and had a single to his credit. Sinfield collected two triples for the "Lac" kids.

WILLIAMS MAN TO BE FEARED

U.S. Coach Believes Vancouver Flash, One to Beat

Los Angeles, July 28—Percy Williams is the darkest cloud on the rising horizon for Lawson Robertson, United States track coach. Robertson today named Canada's double winner at Amsterdam as the man Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette negro, must fear most in the Olympic 100 and 200 metres. After Williams he regards Arthur Jonath of Germany and Takayoshi Yoshioka of Japan as the chief opponents of the United States flyer.

Tom Hampson, the British star, is the man to beat in the 800 metres, Robertson believes, holding that whoever turns the trick must shade 1.50. Eddie Gennng is the chief United States hope.

Robertson is convinced that shiner Ben Eastman or Bill Carr will win the 400 metres, regardless of Great Britain's Godfrey Rampling but is reluctant to commit himself as to which of the two he believes will make the best showing.

IRISH EYES

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"What is it, Frank?"

"Nothing!" he said. "I'll—I've got to see Mercadette."

"Give her my love," Mrs. Mc-Cann looked at Sheila. "My son don't drive you home, dear? He would 'rrive you home."

"That's between the subways."

"Oh, I wouldn't have him!" Sheila protested, shrinking.

"Why not?" Frank asked, pulling on his gloves. But his tone got a question in it, and not even glanced at her.

"Well, if you don't look stunning in Monica's old coat! Gertrude said, suddenly joining them. "You look lovely, Aunt Ella," she added. "I'm going to bed. I'm sunk. If I don't want to be taken for Grandma Keane at my own wedding, I've got to get some sleep."

"Where are you going, Frank?" This was Peter, with a sudden heart rose on a great plunge, but she could not look up.

"Kennedys'. They're having dinner for Delia's aunt from Syracuse. I said I'd come on."

"Where are you going, Peter?" the mother asked.

"I'm going out a while."

Sheila caught her breath. Still this where he had intended to go. He had intended to accompany her home in the subway, after all, her. But Frank's offer to drive her home had killed him.

She dared not look at him; she was shaking. Mrs. McCann was saying good night to her; she and Frank were descending the big brownstone steps.

"Walk for me here on the curb, my son's parked right across the street." Frank said. Sheila stood still, trembling, as the car, as she had half expected, Peter was beside her for half a second, and there was a slip of paper in her hand.

"I've got to see you!" Peter mumbled. He was gone, and Frank was bringing a small closed car up to her. In a dim Sheila let in.

"The young lady I'm going to marry lives in Stuyvesn Doyvil," Frank explained. "I'm on my way there."

Sheila sat silent beside him, and could make no answer.

"We've been engaged five years," Frank went on.

"That's a long time."

"It's a good test of mutual affection," the man said in satisfaction. "The handsome oldest son of Judge McCann was well pleased with himself. Sheila decided.

"Peter and Gertrude," he resumed, "were a little quicker about it, there's grown up like brother and sister, of course; we've all devoted to Gertrude. But Miss Keane's the girl I wanted to be sure.

"We haven't so very long to go now. June. Then I think we'll run over to Europe and stay until September."

"It sounds wonderful," Sheila observed respectfully.

"Well, it's time I settled down," Frank said. "I'm twenty-seven. He laughed, with relish.

"Are you four years older than Peter?"

It had slipped out. Sheila's very soul shrivelled with terror. There was a sudden change in Frank's voice; it became less surly, less domineering, less satisfied. He spoke surprisedly.

"Don know Peter?"

"Well, I met him. This summer, at Tupper Beach. But I didn't know until tonight who he was."

"You didn't know who he was?"

"We only knew each other one day. I didn't remember his name. And maybe he didn't remember mine."

"Ah-ha!" Frank said, as one awakening. "I remember," he mused aloud. "I remember his telling me where he had been that visit—aha!"

He fell silent; Sheila could not speak.

"You know that Peter was getting married on Tuesday?"

"Oh, yes."

Another silence.

"Peter told me that he had met your—suppose it was you," Frank observed. He stopped the car at the corner dark Street down-way. "Peter told me," he said, a little at a loss.

Sheila said, "I thank you," and "good night", and was out of the car, and heard it roar and him away as she mounted her own steps. Her thoughts stopped for a last subtlety; she stood still in the odorous thick atmosphere of the dim lower hall. About and above her was crying; the banging of pots, the sound of radios, phonographs, portables, echoed from behind closed doors.

Her heart smouldered; she stood still. One look at Peter McCann, and the agony of that enchanted summer day and night—they had had but the one—was upon her again. He had lied to her, kissed her, and she believed him, waited for him, while he had been courting and winning a rich man's daughter, a beautiful girl in her slim suit and furs, who could lose fifty dollars without ever knowing it.

And now beside all that Sheila would be made contemptible in the eyes of these friends who had prized her talent, who wanted to be kind to Mamma. They would dismiss her as a little play-acting child that she had been a hypocrite.

Even the kindly oldest son she must appear as an impostor. She was no rush artist, no friend of the McCann family in the house. Mamma would have her out tomorrow morning. Mamma could make Mamma lie. And then sat of Mrs. McCann and Gertrude, and Frank, would know that their faithful little Peter had been no beggar at all, just a bluffer.

Mamma would know and Peter would hear them disdainfully it—

She suddenly remembered the paper in her hand, unfolded it, and read it by the hall light.

"Can Mr. Marsiling Law Library top floor four-thirty tomorrow, Peter had written. "I've got to see you."

"I see myself going" Sheila muttered.

She mounted a few steps, stopped, stood, went on again. What to tell them all at home? How to make it sound complete? Without betraying in Peter, the man that Rich Miss Gertrude Keane was going to marry next June. What would Gertrude do if she knew that only last August he had kissed Sheila Carcadden, and told her that he loved her, and that he always would love another woman?

Fortunately, even after entering the kitchen, she had a few minutes in which to recover herself. Joe and Sheila Moore were there, murmuring at the table. No one else was in sight. Joe looked up from the dishes to genial wedding party downstairs, an hour ago, and evidently had been clashed, and while they were all off to the police station, Angela was sitting with the baby and Joe. Mamma had taken the two grandchildren around the corner to the flats.

Presently they both returned, and then the new coat and hat had to be handled and admired, and the story told and retold.

"The loveliest people you ever saw Mamma—Sheila's self-control was so kind, and laughing together!

"Paul McCann, I remember the name well," Sheila's mother mused. "He was a square-built fellow, wit a head of black hair on um."

"That's the one, Ma."

"They were fine people," Mrs. Carcadden said.

"And the girl their son's going to marry—the ward that their son is going to marry, Sheila! Angela asked wistfully, "is she nice?"

"Gertrude Keane."

"Is that name?"

"It was her purse I found, you know."

"Oh, sure. And is she stunning, Sheila, like we said?"

"Oh, I'll tell I saw his picture in the paper with her last Sunday!" Cecilia said with animation. Shabby and tired and poor and young, talking sadly of their prospects with her Joe, she could nevertheless brighten into interest at the thought of this more formate girl. She and Joe had been engaged for three years; she knew that they still might have to wait three more.

"Mamma," Sheila demanded, her arms stretched across the table, the dangling light bright in her eyes, and upon the shining flattened fringe of hair across her forehead, "if Mrs. McCann comes tomorrow, will you talk poor?"

"I will not!" Mrs. Carcadden answered. "If you choose to draw down the anger of God by pretending to be in throuhel when you're not, this it'll be on the job dragging your mother into it!"

"Mamma, if you'll just stick to the truth for once! Sort of make a poor mouth of it begged Sheila after an interval of unhappy thought. "I had us all but starving in the streets!"

"Well, they'll find out we're not thin. They'll not get their little hooks down on my children's throats, or tell me how many pairs of shoes I'd buy them in a year with some glm yez sell amouldering memory of settlement work!" long-ago visit.

"Mamma, Sheila began, now genuinely appalled," Mrs. McCann isn't a charity worker! She's coming as an old friend—she could I stop her. If you'll only be decent to her, Mamma, if you'll only be just polite——"

"Polite to one and all I'll ever be," her mother began. In an unyielding tone, "but beholden to one I never seen—"

"Oh, Mamma, for heaven's sake! Beholden!"

Sheila, was tired, emotionally shaken, close to tears. Joe spoke suddenly.

"You made her think we were something we aren't, Sheila. And even if it was only a joke, it seems to me that it isn't fair to drag Ma into it. If Mrs. McCann really does come tomorrow, which the probably won't, why, Mamma will have to explain to her that it was just some of your nonsense!"

"I get a chance to meet people like that, and then you queer it!" Sheila muttered bitterly.

"Maybe she'll just think it was funny, Sheila" Angela said.

"Who but you would ever think of such a thing?" Cecilia, who enormously admired the spirit of the younger girl, said, shaking her head.

"Oh, that one!" Mrs. Carcadden observed, with a glance for Sheila; a glance in which motherly pride, mollified resentment, and a desire to show herself friendly again were all blended. "You couldn't stop that one wit'a thruck" she claimed. It was a boast, Sheila felt that friendlier atmosphere, and but for that scalding memory of Peter, might have been reasonably confident and content as she went to bed.

As it was, a jealous confusion of thoughts and fears raged in her heart. She hated Gertrude, because she was lovely and rich and well bred and happy, and she hated Peter, because she, Sheila, loved him.

She tossed on her bed, seeming to the interested and talkative Angela to be in a singularly unreasonable mood.

CHAPTER 7

Sheila lay awake long after her mother had crept noisily into bed beside her.

The strange events of the day passed through her mind in restless confusion. She had recovered Peter, after all these months, only to feel with more completely lost than ever. All the new hopes and dreams that this evening's strange adventure might have launched had turned to new pain; new doubts and fears had to be open only into new problems.

Peter had wanted to see her, well, what could he do? His fiancee hardly denied that that last half-hour of theirs, that tremendous ending of their great day, had not occurred at all.

They had met at a hotel lunch. Sheila had been with Robby Blake when that either Sheila or Peter remember. Robby afterward, at all. Peter had taken immediate possession of her, they had watched the yacht races together, they had been together—alone in the moonlit the barbecue and clam-bake supper, they had danced at the Casino—strolled out into the moonlshing to talk, dancey again.

And finally they had joined an unknown group at a drift-wood fire, down the beach, and had sat there utterly content, their backs against a sand-embedded log. Peter's arm right about her shoulders, his and white-clad legs stretched toward the fire.

The others had been singing; Sheila and Peter had sung, too, and it had seemed to them that their very souls had risen to Heaven with the strains of "There's a Long, Long Trail", and "The End of a Perfect Day."

Afterward there had been silence peace about the dying fire, and moonshine gaining over firelight, and the soft rustle and rush of the sea. Sheila had been carrying her pocketbook, through this marvellous week of beach holiday, and she had opened it to find a pencil and a piece of paper, and had scribbled her name and address, there in the firelight, for Peter to carry away.

"I've got to get back," he had said. "I'm driving three fellers to Good Ground."

"I'm going up to town in the morning," she had said.

"We're going Monday. Well, I'll see you in town," he had said. And they had walked together to the beach, and past the line of cheap hooks, and on through dunes that were covered with little cabins set on stilts; hundreds of them, one ending only their great day had not occurred at all.

They had met at a hotel lunch. Sheila had been with Robby Blake when that either Sheila or Peter remember. Robby afterward, at all.

But at night, at least on this marvelous night, the colony had been wrapped in silence and sleep, and the merciful moonlight had poured beauty over the long line of peaked and little roofs that straggled off in every direction like the tentacles of a great spreading octopus.

Sheila the world had been paradise; no princess of the blood royal ever had felt a keener thrill of life and youth and love and happiness than she had been, as she had stepped into the crowded Mahoney cottage and found her own especial spot between those of the Mahoney girls and their cousins, the Moriartys.

And that had been the end. No word from him, no sign from him, no knowledge of him until tonight. And he was to marry Gertrude Keane on Tuesday.

America is no country for a happy married life. A man is so busy making money for his wife that when he gets through she's too tired to spend it.

JULY 29 MR. AND MRS. THE HARD BOILED EGG THAT WASN'T

THE SON OF TARZAN NO. 86

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Through the breach rushed the infuriated bull. Korak heard him come crashing and urged him to speed. The flames were creeping closer around the ape-man when the blacks, hearing the noise behind, turned to see the enormous bulk of Tantor lumbering toward them. Screaming, they fled and then the elephant was upon them tossing the Shelk's men to right and left as he tore through the flames he feared to the comrade he loved.

The Sheik ran to his tent for his rifle. Tantor wrapped his trunk about the body of Korak and the stake to which it was bound, and tore it from the ground. The flames were searing his sensitive hide—sensitive for all its thickness—so that in his frenzy to escape the hated fire, he all but crushed the life from the ape-man. Lifting his burden high above his head, Tantor raced for the breach in the palisade.

Rifle in hand, the Sheik rushed forth directly into the path of the maddened brute. He raised his weapon and fired once, the bullet missed its mark, and Tantor was upon him crushing him beneath gigantic feet as he raced over his Sheik's body as though it were but an ant in his pathway. Then, bearing his burden carefully, Tantor the elephant came to the opening he had just made in the palisade and entered the blackness of the jungle.

Miriem and Baynes, undiscovered, were about to scale the palisade by means of the ape-man's rope when the sounds of the tumult reached them. The girl, dazed from the unexpected sight of Korak whom she had long given up as dead, started as from a dream. "They are killing him!" she whispered, "we must go back." Cautiously the two retraced their perilous path, every step a danger, for now the whole village was aroused and moving about.

FULL MILITARY HONORS PAID H. W. HEWESON

Trenton Air Station is Scene of Impressive Ceremony

WELL ARRANGED

Veterans Join Air Force in Paying Respect to Gallant Officer

Contrasted to the whirring of rotors, the sharp calling of orders, the activity of the ground men, the roaring of planes high in the heavens, usually lasting place was the scene enacted Thursday at the Trenton Air Station when Flight Lieutenant H. W. Heweson, who came to his death from interfering rudder sustained in a plane crash on Tuesday, was silently brought back to the scene of his activities by a guard of honor, comrades in arms, veterans of the Great War and scores of civilians, many of whom were personal and intimate friends, where the simple burial service of the Anglican Church was recited by the Rev. O. G. Wright of Christ Church, Belleville.

It was the first military funeral, that Number three air squadron has performed since their coming to their new post near Trenton and the method of their carrying out elicited praise from all present. The body of the heroic officer was carried on a transport truck, the coffin draped with the Union Jack, which he so faithfully served, and upon which was placed his medals, won on foreign fields. The transport was accompanied by a firing squad under the command of Flying Officer Edwards, and the marching behind were officers of the Hastings Prince Edward Regiment, veterans from the Legion Post at Trenton, while at the hangar was stationed a guard from of the Argyll Light Infantry and the 49th Duke of Edinburgh's ville, who came to pay their last respects. Some of March's men from Bellegheen's funeral parlors in Trenton to the airport and thence to the last resting place of the hangar.

A beautiful picture presented itself, when the party arrived, Placed facing the door of the hangar were a number of machines, flown in many times by the dead officer, bright and shining, while about the bier was placed a wealth of floral tributes from friends far and near. Rev. Mr. Wright took his place beside the bier with the members of the squadron in close formation and behind which was the firing party. To the right were the veterans and the officers and to the left were the civilian population. The simple service was repeated ending with a prayer for those on land and sea and air. A shady command, broke the stillness and towards his body was fired three volleys after which Corporal Burr blew the Last Post, while all stood at attention. Reveille then sounded and as the last notes died away across the flying field, the electric doors of the hangar closed and the service was ended. The bearers were Squadron Leader Leach, Flight Lieutenant Riddell, Flying Officer Morrison, Flying Officer Wray, Flight Lieutenant W. W. Brown and Flight Lieutenant Stewart.

Early in the afternoon a Puss Moth from Camp Borden landed at the airport carrying Wing Commander Croil and Flight Lieutenant W. W. Brown, while a Fairchild Cabin brought in Flight Lieutenant Van Vliet, Flight Lieutenant Bent and Flight Lieutenant Heakes of Ottawa. At the conclusion of the service, the body lay in state until late in the afternoon when it was again taken to Belleville, where it will lie in state until the funeral train for Noyan, Quebec, for interment. The body was accompanied by Wing Commander Breadner and Flying Officer Lawrence Wray of the Trenton Air Station.

Records Show Drivers of Motor Vehicles Deserve Severe Criticism

Civilized nations engaged in war, are considered as non-combatants. But apparently the drivers of automobiles in Canada are not considerate. In this province last year, a total of 1,512 children were injured by motor vehicles. Of this number 1,144 were playing in the street. True some of these accidents were unavoidable but also deaths were unavoidable but also deaths should be made to accept some of the responsibility, but some of the blame must be shamefully one.

The trade of children in grown-up persons is proverbial. Apparently the trade is a thing that is more than a hundred times a month.

DONATE SUM TO IMPROVEMENT OF CEMETERY

On Tuesday afternoon the Quinte Branch of W.I. of this county assembled at the residence of Mrs. Noble Brown, Front of Thurlow with a good attendance. Mrs. Jas. Jarbott presided, opening with the usual ode, and Lord's prayer in unison. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved and roll call "A Suggestion or Receipt for Canning or Preserving" well responded to, and many a helpful hint passed on. Money was allocated to purchase bedding for a needy family and several letters of appreciation was read for flowers and other kindnesses. After routine business had been disposed of, Mrs. Donald Bradshaw as leader for July capably took charge and called upon Mrs. Robt. Bell for a reading entitled "I Have Found Such Joy" bringing to our minds the comforts of home and joy therein.

Community singing was enjoyed during the afternoon as "Abide With Me" and other familiar airs were sung. A pleasant surprise awaited us when Mrs. Harry Murphy of Melrose Branch was called upon to speak. Some few years ago an Institute Branch prevailed in Shannonville, and was a real live asset to that promising village. However as time went on the membership lessened but there still remained a few faithful ones who fain deposited in the bank; then Mrs. Murphy presented to our president, Mrs. Bunnett for use in the cemetery work. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Murphy by Mrs. Bell her co-workers for their kind thoughtfulness. The Gifts and Her Problem" by Miss Greenwood Hubbs was very interesting as well as instructive, touching on the struggles a girl has to maintain her life work, but all trust in God will keep her on the straight path. After the singing of the National Anthem, and grace, a dainty lunch was served by the hostess, Mrs. Brown and Miss Helen assisted by Mrs. Charlie Grass, Miss Doris Reid, Mrs. J. Donaldson and Mrs. A. Mitchell.

After lunch by special request, the members journeyed to Shannonville cemetery to view the work being done there by our efficient caretaker, Mr. Everetta and Mrs. Stoutes. Vivian Bell, Greetrix who so kindly assisted.

SUNBEAM MISSION BAND PRESENTS PROGRAMME

RAWDON—On Wednesday afternoon, July 20th, nearly fifty were present at Mount Pleasant church when the W.M.S.' members enjoyed a splendid programme put on by the Sunbeam Mission Band.

Mrs. Rose Heard 1st vice presided and all repeated the 23rd psalm and sang "Oh the World Must be Conquered for Christ." After the usual business, ten members answered roll call in July with "Why Camel Ladies' Aid in August was accepted.

Miss Isobel Turner, President of the Mission Band was then asked to take charge and she thanked the ladies for inviting the band to their July meeting. Opening hymn "Have ye heard the song from the Golden Land?" After minutes, report and roll call answered by nineteen members Eileen Phillips read Psalm 13, Marguerite White sang 'Open my eyes that I may see". Frances McKeown gave a solo solo "Rock of Ages", Six of the young folks offered Sentence Prayers and all repeated the Lord's Prayer.

Watch Tower was taken by Africa Marie Sharp; Trinidad, Audrey Sharp; Canada, Eileen MacMullen; Japan, Anna Bell.

Betty Locke sang "Teach Me to Pray", then Mildred Read a poem "In World Friends". Eileen Macmullen gave a piano solo "Good Morning." Myrtle McKeown told a very interesting story on the "Golden Rule" and "Golden Texts" taken from the study book on Korea. She also told a story "Golden Texts", Sentences, and home conditions. The grandfather lives with and a cook doctor is sent for, who administers more suffering in the night man is soon peace away. Later the baby is ill and her sister asks to set him Christian Science and she is the first appearance to the home, eventually the baby's life is saved and the family allow the little girl to again attend the mission school.

A dialogue "When we are Men" was given by Percy White, Douglas Read and Roy White, and Donald MacMullen. The offering was taken by Billy McMullen and Mizpah Benediction.

"IF IT'S CITIES SERVICE . . . IT HAS TO BE GOOD"

Here's how chemists know that a gasolene gives quick pick-up

Gasoline must fast—spinning wheels you want to spoke—getting out of the pinches when you need to—that's pick-up—and the chart above tells the chemist if the gasolene will give it.

This gasolene will. The chart shows the result of boiling gasolene, and scoring the percentage which evaporated at certain temperatures. Horizontal lines indicate temperature vertical lines, percentages. In this case the shape and position of the curve tell the chemist that the gas will respond quickly at the throttle; that in the climatic conditions under which this gasolene is to be used, it is neither over-balanced with light, quick-burning, lower-powered elements, nor top-heavy with the more powerful but more sluggish "heavy ends."

Peter McLaren, Tyendinaga Farmer, Chosen Candidate By East Hastings Liberals

the East Hastings Liberal Association, Edward Rose, of Foxboro, was chairman of the evening's proceedings.

Meeting Held Up

Lack of pre-organization held up the meeting considerably but finally delegations were checked off and it was thrown open for the nomination of candidates for the Ontario House. Five names were placed before the convention, as under:

Peter McLaren, Tyendinaga, nominated by Gilbert Silla, seconded by Arthur Vermilyea.

Joseph D. McVicker, Lonsdale, by Silas Mary Walsh and Mr. McVicker.

Dolton Charles Hungerford, by John Meagher and Chas. Hunt.

Henry Lawton Leslie, by Peter McLaren and James Hanley.

Dr. Harold A. Boyce, Deseronto, by Wm. Doyle and Hugh Parry.

Lead Three Withdrew

The three last mentioned nominees withdrew, and on balloting of the delegates Peter McLaren was chosen by the East Hastings Liberal candidate in the next Provincial election. The result was not announced however till after the close of Mr. Newman.

In nominating Mr. McVicker, Miss Walsh (a daughter of ex-Warden James Walsh of Tyendinaga) set a high standard of oratory for the speakers of the evening, but the eloquent and forceful Ontario Liberal leader had to oil up his vocabulary and delivered a splendid summary of the evening. Miss Walsh made a commanding appeal for the candidature of the aspiring young lady from Lonsdale, and her remarks showed careful and painstaking preparation on the part of the speaker had some compliment to pay her on her remarkably fine, able and most laudatory address.

Previous to balloting both candidates addressed the meeting. Mr. McVicker who is a graduate of Queens University, and obtained his degree of Bachelor of Arts while at college, spoke at some length on provincial financing and taxation. The greater portion of his well prepared speech, however, dealt with his qualifications for the role of standard bearer of Liberalism in East Hastings. This was his first time out to seek office and he had no axe to grind for the honor. The personality of a young person and the ambitions of a young man possessing the qualities of youth and the appeal of youth should be considered by the delegates in making their selection, he claimed those were things lacking in an older person. Mr. McVicker's choice of the convention he would give his wholehearted support.

Mr. McLaren spoke most briefly, he was known to all in the constituency, his deeds would be made by the delegates and if he were not the chosen candidate his support in the election "would go to his former-but-loyal opponent."

Should Interest Selves

Mr. Joseph Doyle of Peterboro, made a rousing speech and as president of the Central Ontario Liberal Association urged the necessity of thorough organization and the stimulating of interest in politics. "It is your solemn, duty, outside the duties of the election for which you are members to interest yourself in politics" said the speaker. The business of the province should engage the attention of the men and women in the province. In addressing farmers, the Liberals had no apology to make, for the Liberal party always legislated in the farmers' interests and had never snubbed them as Prime Minister Bennett had done at the Ottawa recently. Liberals in legislating in the interests of farmers condemned not neglected manufacturing, they had legislated the tariffs with a reasonable degree of sanguine by unfair price the necessities of life. Words to your interested was the only remedy to bring prosperity to this country.

W. A. Fraser, M.P., in taking the floor first lauded the Liberals of Canada in convention a scathing though happy, condemnation in their lack of activity in not nominating the young lady who had so eloquently placed the name of Joseph McVicker to their consideration. Following the election of the president of the Central Ontario Liberal Association and the next nominees of West Hastings and of Addington and the Ontario Liberal leader, the "Battling Scot of Northumberland," delivered one of his broadcast at the conservative party, and he had his heavy guns in action as Plainfield Thursday night, much to the delight of his audience. To the 1930 campaign R. B. Bennett had promised something no human being could carry out," said Mr. Fraser. "I believe he knew he was lying to the people of Canada from coast to coast. He lied himself into office," and, continued the speaker, "as long as we have Toryism you will have Tory orators trying to fool the people; Toryism is class legislation.

The Ontario Hydro Commission was to be a non-political organization and today it was administered by three of the most blinded Tories that could be found. Maguire, Bob Cook and Meighen," asserted Mr. Fraser.

The C.N.R. probe of the last session of parliament had resulted in the resignation of Sir Henry Thornton as its head" and the appointment as his successor of the gentleman in charge of the management in the hands of Tory politicians and controlled by Tories under the executive of the C.P.R. in the interests of "Tory politicians and their friends" he continued.

He urged the Liberals at the coming election to beware of third candidate contests. It was an old Tory game and he advised them not to be fooled again.

Brevity of time alone forced Mr. Fraser to close his remarks and the audience was reluctant to have him desist in his vociferous attack on the powers of Toryism.

First in 47 Years

William Newman, M.P.P., prefacing his address stated "he was the first Liberal elected in 47 years (North Victoria) unless the cabinet ministers' salary, increase in debt and claimed by Tories extravagance. To remedy Ontario's overwhelming debt he had reduced the demolone of all its bonds by a new issue bearing only 4 per cent.

At the conclusion of Mr. Newman's address the chairman announced the result of the balloting Mr. Vickey congratulated his opponent and appealed to his supporters to rally round the McLaren standard. The successful candidate thanked the convention for the honour bestowed on him, expressed his knowledge of the worth of Mr. McVicker and asked for the needed support of all East Hastings Liberals.

Words of Praise

M. F. Hepburn, M.P., in assuming the platform most personally thanked Miss Walsh for her admirable nominating address and had a word of appreciation for the fine sportsmanship displayed by Mr. McVicker in receiving the verdict of the convention. To Peter McLaren he offered his heartiest congratulations and hoped they would soon meet on the floor of the House in Toronto. Saying his compliments to Premier Bennett he said he (Bennett) had found time to confer with Lord Rothemere, but could find no time to listen to the 4,000 farmers, who had visited Parliament Hill.

There was something radically wrong with things in Canada today and only by discussion and delving into matters could we find out what was wrong. He would not blame the Tory party, entirely for all that is wrong, but the wrong was there, due to the application of the Tory policy. The social and economic conditions of today were due to the application of class who were carefully muddying up the water. If the people were fooled they only had themselves to blame. Never under Tory government had there been such good times. Don't be disillusioned by Tory policies in elections, that were the enjoyment of the people. By subdistination the Tory government were the experts to fool the farmers. The farmer can't eat his tariffs. He could not speak on butter though he had been asked to do, and Mr. Bennett had praised the policy of the Tory party was favorable toward the consumer, especially the adverse revision of the Dominion Income Tax has placed the burden of taxation on the people, the wealthy men of today were not paying their share of the source of the Dominion's revenue comparatively, because of the interest incurred during the war's receiving.

Mr. Hepburn next spoke of the gasoline taxation and claimed that there was misapprehension in regard to it. Going over much of "the ground he had already covered in several speeches in this district. The Ontario government, he said, was conducted on "honesty or truth."

He dealt briefly with the Hydro situation in Ontario and the recent acquisition of the Ahuhic interests he barely touched on, contrary to his expectations on the Beauharnois. His prediction was that the issue of the next election would be one of the latest and that exploiting Liberals would be found voting with the Conservatives. Party affiliations should be forgotten and a vote cast for the party that will bring about a much needed change. He explored and left behind him a third party at election.

Favors of Conversion

Mr. Hepburn stated he was emphatically in favor of "a forced conversion of Ontario's loans at a lower rate of interest." Overproduction and undercompetition were causes of our present day evil times. The lowest cost of production is the one that will survive. The issue is clear; either vote Tory for a continuation of the present system or show your dissatisfaction by casting your ballot for the Liberal candidate. He was proud to belong to the reformed school of thought against exploitation. Mr. Hepburn concluded his remarks with the hopeful prediction that all Liberal candidates in this section would be elected. Campbell and Col. Vanderwater made short remarks. The colonel was the only speaker during the evening to make mention of the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa, but hoped to report it might result in an increased price of farm products. John Elliott, of Belleville, had gone to Ottawa, and perhaps they might get a cent a pound more for their cheese thereby.

Dr. Pinkham, of Belleville, Liberal candidate for West Hastings, gave an excellent "get-out-and-vote" address as his time was most limited. Mr. Pinkham was elected to the provinces of the Migratory Birds Convention Act.

CITIZENS WAR OVER CANINES

Struggle Resumes in Earnest Since Park Signs Forbid Dogs

Here in Belleville you are either pro-dog or anti-dog, for the city is divided into warring camps. Friends of many years standing pass each other silent without speech. There is talk of battle flags, one of a dog, rampant, is the symbol of a faction, a few varieties from the vegetable garden, having gentry in the breast.

It's a free war. The citizens are split in the various societies are in it, and even the dog catcher is in it. And dog lovers are planning to finish the issue by appealing to the city council for their rights, or more specifically, the dog's bill of rights.

It all started when the Parks Board decided to erect and did erect new signs at the entrance of Victoria Park warning all dogs to keep out. Formerly guiltless, dogs of all breeds and ancestry, from massive bull dogs to decrepit dachs, descended on the park in droves. They displayed fearful ignorance of the sign which had been put there for their benefit, and are alleged to have romped through the grounds scattering dogs clods from the newly turf employees have labored so hard on, far and wide, and even seized control of the flower beds, to gnaw tooth and flung them to the four winds of the landscape. Irate employees who objected most emphatically to this human dog's habit of swiping at the dogs with whatever they happened to have handy

TIME IS NOT FAVORABLE TO TALKWARDEBT

Recognizes Difficulty of Discussion at Present Time

PEOPLE OPPOSED

French Finance Minister May go to U. S. as Ambassador

Paris, July 30 (AP) — France has agreed to make no move toward revision of the French debt to the United States until the election in the United States is more favorable, possibly after the Presidential election, it was learned today on high authority.

This was one of the results of an interview yesterday between Premier Herriot, United States Ambassador Walter Edge and Norman H. Davis, a member of the United States delegation to the Disarmament Conference.

Opposition Seen

M. Herriot recognized the difficulty which the U. S. government faces in connection with debt revision at this time, with Congress and the mass of the people opposed to it.

The American representatives told him that the best way to assist United States opinion toward revision would be a reduction in armaments as nearly as possible in line with President Hoover's proposal to cut armaments one-third, and by eliminating commercial friction by arranging a general commercial treaty.

Negotiate in Europe

The same authority disclosed that Premier Herriot has asked Louis Germain-Martin, his finance minister, to become Ambassador to the United States presumably for the period of debt negotiations, and that M. Germain-Martin is considering acceptance.

It was said that when the time comes the Premier would rather negotiate in Europe than in Washington; but failing that he wants to send a man of M. Germain-Martin's caliber to Washington to prepare the way.

Reports that Pierre Pleading, former finance minister, was to become ambassador to Great Britain were denied.

CONFERENCE'S FATE RESTING WITH BENNETT

Offers and Return Offers Form Crux of Conference

BEHIND SCENES

August Sixteenth Expected to See End of Parley

Ottawa, July 30 (By George Hamilton, Canadian Press Staff Writer)—Premier Bennett holds the key to the Conference.

As the Empire Conference officially rises for the week-end, that is the common commonly heard among delegates. Since the conference opened, there have been constant rumors that, if return for adequate British preferences on Canadian natural products, Premier Bennett will be prepared to go far to encourage British export to Canada. All through the week-end a subcommittee of the Dominion cabinet is working on Canada's return offer to Great Britain. On it, and the return offers of the other Dominions, may well turn the fate of the conference.

Progress is Hoped

Despite hopes that work is progressing behind the scenes, no definite progress has been made that Britain now expect the conference to terminate around August 16, and they fully expect that difficulties still in the way will be surmounted and the conference end in success.

Heads of delegations today had problems of current under review. Suggestions are made of stabilizing the Canadian dollar as against sterling although a definite schemo-has not been worked out.

WIFE BEATS UP HUSBAND EX-RING HERO

Portland, Ore., July 30 (AP) —"Come quick!" someone telephoned police. "A man is beating up his wife!"

Bill's wife had done the beating.

Missing from Ottawa, 8 Year Boy Turns Up After Ride at New Haven

New Haven, Conn., July 30.— Joseph Esposito, 8, who disappeared Thursday evening at Ottawa, Ont., where he was visiting with his mother, was found by police here today at the home of an uncle, Tony Esposito. The boy's elder brother, Ottelio, was held pending communication with Ottawa authorities.

Police said Ottelio drove the boy to New Haven from Ottawa, arriving here about 5 a.m. No charges will be filed against him until an investigation is completed, they announced.

The two boys went to Ottawa with their mother, Mrs. Violet Esposito, who recently lodged a complaint of non - support against her husband, Dr. Joseph Esposito, former State Senator. He has been in Honolulu for the last year.

Joseph is entered a car, which witnesses said bore Connecticut license plates, while on an errand for his mother. She notified Ottawa police he had been kidnapped.

Moscow 'Pans' States for WaronBonusArmy

British Manchester Guardian Calls Expulsion of Veterans "Extraordinarily Unhappy Affair" and Canadian Legion Protests

Moscow, July 30 (CP)—Moscow newspapers published accounts of the bonus marchers' riots at Washington Thursday under headlines revealing their clear sympathy with the evicted ex-soldiers.

Pravda, organ of the Communist Party, said:

"The American bourgeoisie shoots the war veterans as it pleases. The White House is spattered with blood. Barbarous fight at Washington. Gas and tanks against victims of Imperialistic butchery."

Commenting on the situation editorially, the Communist organ said:

Imperialistic War?

"The government showed its real face to the veterans in an Imperialistic war. President Hoover carried through arrests and decision to give the railroad companies and banks millions of dollars but of course did not find means to cover the debt to the veterans.

"The fight for the capitalists and lead and gas for the toilers, even if they were war veterans. Those veterans will become increasingly convinced, finally, veterans are the same as those of the workers. With the workers, they have a common enemy and a common way of revolutionary escape from the crisis."

Unhappy Affair.

London, July 30 (AP)— The Manchester Guardian today characterized the expulsion of the bonus seekers from Washington as "an extraordinarily unhappy affair."

"But," it added, "in a country where relief of destitution is not among the functions of government it is inevitable that the protests of the destitute should be spectacular."

Calling in the troops, it said, "was perhaps the only thing that could be done to end an impossible situation but there is no evidence as yet that the demonstrators were getting out of hand."

Legion Votes.

Windsor, Ont., July 30 (CP)— Sympathy with the bonus expeditionary force which was driven out of Washington was expressed by the Imperial branch No. 223 of the Canadian Legion here, and a letter is to be sent to the leaders of the B. E. F. The local meeting was open to all Imperial ex-service men and about one hundred attended.

Spreads to Manitowen.

Johnstown, Pa., July 30. — Faced with hostility from Johnstown's citizenry, staff leaders of the "bonus army" retreating from Washington, today telegraphed W. W. Waters, the commander-in-chief, and asked him to come here at once from Washington to aid in handling the situation.

Meanwhile, tattered and hungry veterans, forced to flee the capital at the point of army bayonets, continued to trickle into this city. Already there are more than 1,000 here.

Waiters was told that the situation required his presence.

Sixty Year Quarrel Over Patch of Wilderness

Buenos Aires, July 30 (AP)—War preparations maturing in Bolivia and Paraguay and predicting more serious strife, have held in dark of troubles which caused intense apprehension in South American today.

The two nations were mobilizing, economically and otherwise, with a patriotic zeal which threatened a climax to the sixty year old quarrel over the largely unexplored patch of wilderness in the Gran Chaco.

EMPIRE WEEK BROADCAST IS FINE SUCCESS

Mayor Tice, Mr. Chris G. Holmes and Artists Praised

MAYOR'S SPEECH

Stimulation of British Trade Given Boost By Broadcast

Belleville's Empire Week broadcast from CKGW on Friday night was eminently successful from a reception standpoint. From the words of the announcer which formed the setting for the program to the last word of the broadcast the reception was excellent. Mayor Tice and the second mayor of Belleville to broadcast a home town program and his patriotic and loyal message was such as to do credit to himself, the city of Canada to a realization of the desire of the people to trade in Empire products. Belleville, as this is the voice of an old Loyalist centre, is loyal. Mr. Chris Holmes, member of the Capitol Theatre spoke from the stage of British films as the salvation of the industry and also as a means of entertainment in Canada. He predicted a big future for talking broadcast. Helen Hunt Allen played the violin accompaniment to Mr. Holmes' number and Mr. Geo. B. Riggs, the piano accompaniment. Mrs. Helen Hunt Allen's number at Belleville's came through perfectly, the technical execution of the broadcast being worthy of the highest praise. A pleasing feature was the music contributed by Mr. James D. Bankier who gave "Long Live the King" very effectively.

Mayor Tice was still receiving many congratulations from residents of the city and farmers from the rural sections throughout the territory who had listened in to the radio broadcast from Toronto Friday evening. These, however, only climaxed dozens of other messages and telegrams which were received at the studio while Belleville was on the air with her second broadcast. They were sent by numerous citizens in the city who took the occasion to remark on the excellent manner in which the program was being broadcast and received, from a number of prominent residents. Compliments on the excellent speaking voice were also tendered Mayor Tice, Copeland and CKGW.

Mayor Chris. G. Holmes who arranged for the broadcast, has been highly complimented on his share in the program.

His Worship Mayor Tice spoke as follows:

City of Belleville

Occupying a position of remarkable natural beauty at the confluence of the Bay of Quinte and the Moira, the City of Belleville occupies a position of surpassing attractiveness.

Delightful drives over paved roads lead to the surrounding country. The city to view many supremely interesting old buildings. Many thousands of tourists and camping parties annually visit Belleville and its many historic attractions for those in search of rest or recreation.

"Belleville is vitally interested in the growth of Empire Trade. Empire Trade that we all ardently hope will be brought about through the policies adopted by the Imperial Conference.

Loyalist Founders

Our city was founded on the Tatler Canal, which eighteenth century by that sturdy band of British Loyalist. Our traditions and sentiments therefore strongly incline us to expand our business interests within the British Empire.

U.S. May Take Part in Economic Talk But Not One Suggested by League

Washington, July 30. — Many indications point today toward United States participation in a world economic conference, although there is a possibility that it may not be the one suggested by the League of Nations.

The request to join the League meeting is being considered by the state department officials who are pondering reports of the European situation brought back by United States Senator by Andrew Mellon, Ambassador to Great Britain, as well as published reports on the Insistance of Senator W. E. Borah, Republican, Idaho, that an International Conference should take up disarmament, war debts and economics with other problems.

The state department some time ago intimated it would accept a conference invitation provided debts and tariffs were not discussed. Pressure from many sources has reopened speculation that the U. S. government might recede to some extent on debts provided European nations first did something about armaments.

PUSH FORWARD ECONOMY PLAN FOR INDUSTRY

Hoover Defines Plans to Expand Credit and Abolish Slums

9-POINT PLAN

Broad Front Attack on Problems of U. S. Industry

Washington, July 30—Plans for a concerted push toward United States economic rehabilitation, reaching from coast to coast and into every industry, were outlined in a nine-point program yesterday by President Hoover.

Speaking quietly, the President counsted off to newspapermen callers in his office one point after another of a project upon which he and administration leaders are at work.

Reduce Slums.

Quickly he enumerated plans to replace slum districts, stimulate building and industrial construction, expand credit facilities, and speed up the movement of agricultural commodities.

When these efforts are further advanced, the President said, the business and industrial committees, composed of prominent men in each of the twelve federal reserve districts, will be called into conference, "with a view to establishing united and concerted action on a broad front throughout the country."

Correct Wrong Views.

Mr. Hoover said he spoke of his plans and efforts because of "some erroneous speculation" concerning conferences held by him and other government officials.

He then outlined activities of the $3,000,000,000 reconstruction corporation, the directorate of which he selected yesterday with the naming of Charles A. Miller of Utica, N.Y. who will be its President.

United States Can Cut Its Land Forces in Two With Safety, Stone Says

Col. Mettler However Says France Can Mobilize 3 Million Men

CONFLICT OF VIEW

Conference of Institute of Politics Hears Varied Views

Williamstown, Mass., July 30 — In a general conference of the institute of politics devoted to a comparison of the relative land forces of the United States, France and Germany, Lieut.-Col. Charles Mettler of the ordinance department, United States army, said today that the United States, under the national defense act organization, could mobilize a force of 154,000 officers and 2,830,000 men.

Col. Mettler said the national defence act was the best guarantee of continued peace.

Hoover's View

A different view was expressed by William Stone of the Foreign Policy Association who said there was a conflict between the policy of the national defence act to assure mobilization of manpower of nations in a major crisis and the policy reiterated by President Hoover in his proposal of last June to the effect that land forces should be used only to maintain order and defend the national territory.

He suggested that the present organization could be cut in half with safety and a saving to the taxpayers.

LARGE BASS HAVE PLENTY OF FOOD

"Large bass are not biting in the Bay of Quinte, and will not bite until the thousands of shad now in the warm waters to the lake from where they came some time ago. Lots of bass there and lots of them being caught, but it is emotional that the bass which have been hooked are small ones. The reason is that the small bass are too small to eat the shad, which form an important diet of the larger bass. They are too busy to eat the worms, small minnows, frogs and so on which are usually the fish hooks for bait. The big bass are not hungry and don't care," thus spoke one of Belleville's most popular fishermen. "When it will change and go back to the lake" a reporter asked. "Probably in a week or two, it will be able to catch some of the large bass you speak of."

FAIR OUTLOOK VERY BRIGHT

Increase of Interest is Anticipated as Result of Parley

Belleville Fair officials state that all indications point to a very successful exhibition this year. Every body concerned is taking a deep and active interest in the success of the annual exhibition which will symbolize, the officers believe, the beginning of a new and greater prosperity for the Bay of Quinte District and for all of Canada, following as it does so closely the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa which is expected to be a great factor in the revival of trade within the empire. Walter Aleistine, chairman of the Buildings Committee, reports that all space has been booked in the buildings from business men and manufacturers of their wares. There are still some good locations left, however, and those desiring space should get in touch with Mr. Aleistine.

Entries in all the various classes are being received at a rate to indicate that this will be a banner year for exhibits in horses, cattle swine, sheep and agricultural products exhibitions.

Special attractions this year will include a big midway with many attractions including merry-go-rounds, ferris wheels and various fun devices, together with all the glitter and hustle and bustle of this modern Babel of noise and nonsense. Afternoon and evening before the grandstand there will be fine program of special attractions including the International Revue, a group of pretty maidens and dancers in dances and songs.

Trials of speed will bring the speediest equines in Canada to the half-mile track and this feature promises the best sport seen here for years.

Stratford, Ont., July 30 — A motion for sizeable reductions in the salaries and wages of employees of the board, including school teachers and all school staffs, was accepted by the local Board of Education at a special meeting here.

EMPIRE WEEK

published an enviable reputation in the English market for cheese and other high class agricultural products. But, latterly, the 34 manufacturing organizations located at Belleville, as also the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa, have established an enormous output and their varied lines of production are now known in the remotest parts of the Empire.

"We therefore look forward hopefully to the dawn of a greater day when the manifold products of our farms and factories shall be exchanged in increasingly enlarged volume and Empire-made goods shall be returning to us in equal value.

Civic Culture

"In the civic development, Belleville has sought to maintain a high standard of cultural life, with clean and wholesome conditions amidst which to establish a home or rear a family. Expansion and progress has followed, but these have been the incidental results of a policy founded upon sane judgment and an endeavor to administer a best in Canadian citizenship.

"I hope the radio audience will enjoy the brief program presently by Belleville musical talent, tonight. And, if any of our listeners are looking for an industrial or residential location or are planning a pleasant holiday they could do no better than to visit the most congenial surroundings. Belleville will not overlook the City of Belleville, Ontario."

"NEW BROOMS"

"New Brooms" will be presented by the Canadian Players on Thursday, August 4th, opening night of Chautauqua at Belleville.

This comedy is a supreme triumph in the art of play-writing. It is literally overflowing with humor, underlying which is a rich vein of pure wisdom. The eternally interesting theme of the sad marriage, of family and business life, constitute the story. Youth and age, practice and theory, expediency and inexperience, are clash as in real life. Touches of pathos and humor are found in almost every line. It is a play which is altogether appealing and poignant and one that will give one a sense of an evening well spent and a new influence which is altogether wholesome.

L'AMABLE U. C. PAYS TRIBUTE

Record of Life of James Liddle Inscribed in Minutes

The following minutes and letter have been inscribed in the records of L'Amable United Church and resolutions and documents transmitted to the family of the late elder.

The late James Liddle was a native of Dunkins Village, Orkney Islands, Scotland. He was born on the sixteenth of August, A.D., 1855.

His parents, James Liddle and Catherine Irving migrated in 1860, the one child, James, then four years. Three other sisters, Catherine, Margaret and Jessie (Mrs. Bamburgh) Mary, who never married; and Margaret, widow of John Smith; together with one brother, William, completed the family. They settled at Rock Lake, Limerick township, Hastings County in the Province of Ontario.

The marriage of James, the subject of this sketch, took place in 1883, when Jane McGregor, daughter of James McGregor, of Wollaston Township, became his devoted wife and faithful partner.

In 1900 the family came north to Dungannon.

Here Mr. Liddle gained a wide confidence and acquired upon positions of public trust. He was grandmaster of the Wallace-ville Cheese Co., and for seventeen years treasurer of Dungannon. On the 16th of November, 1907, he was ordained to the eldership of the Presbyterian Church in Canada and inducted, along with Josiah Moore, as elder in L'Amable and Turriff by Rev. Arpad Gavan, of Williamstown, 1907.

His death occurred from pernicious anaemia on the 15th of July. He is survived by his widow, two sons Charles and Edward and five daughters, Misses Agnes, Irene, Amy and Hazel.—His funeral was held on June seventh with the Wooler odd church at L'Amable was filled by friends and relatives to pay their respect for the deceased and sympathy for the bereaved.

The following has been forwarded from the Church Board to the family:

To Mrs. James Liddle and family:

We, the congregation of L'Amable United Church, extend to you our deep sympathy in the loss of a faithful husband and loving father. We feel, also, as a church we have lost a stalwart brother and office bearer.

His record with gratitude our appreciation of his faithfulness in the building in which office he was ordained, 10th Nov., 1907.

We were not only in public affairs and the deep sense of responsibility with which he accepted and discharged his duties.

We remember his home—its unity of friendliness and hospitality his high regard for education, in the days of his own youth, his opportunity; and his beloved helpmate, who so gracefully shared in these efforts.

We express our estimate of his character, praying that we may pattern after him in all that he so nobly exemplified after his Lord. He was a man faithful in all his house; honest and industrious, he was able to enjoy the fruit of his labors; a man of good judgment and sterling integrity he held the confidence of many, even far beyond the confines of his own immediate community. A just man, he had filled a worthy place in life, full of days, he has entered upon the rest that remaineth.

Signed on behalf of the congregation by the committee appointed on the twenty-third of June. Signed at L'Amable, this seventh day of July, A.D. 1932.

EVEN HOLLYWOOD VISITS VILLAGE

Canadians Attract The Attention of All at Olympics

Olympic Village, Calif., July 30—The Canadian contingent to the games which has created such a favorable impression in pre-Olympic games work-outs, is also attracting the greatest attention of the Olympic village since its striking appearance forms. The Canadians, with the Italians, are considered the gay Brummels of the camp.

The Canadian representatives are easily spotted among the several groups, that splashes daily over the wide expanse of the campus. Their uniforms of white trousers, red blazers, with a green maple leaf on the slouch straw hats, are the envy of the village.

The Italians run them a close second with several different types of uniforms have caused something of a style sensation by changing them almost daily.

In this well-covered but sopewhat limited field, Ferdinand Von Zu Liechtenstein, a member of the Austrian team, stands out. The same room with a butcher, a policeman and a member of the Hollywood stage worker, a student and a mechanic are members of the team.

Ferdinand Kucera, the European champion middleweight lifter, who is a Vienna policeman and the guard, vies with K. Kase, a Japanese wrestler, for the spiritual title of being the most symetrical and well developed man in the village. Kase, who is officer in the navy at Cadagan, an Irish decathlon star, has considerable claim to the "best man" of the village, but he has a competitor, Ferdinand Kucera, the handsome Czecho-Slovakian shot-putter, who stands six feet three inches and weighs 240 pounds.

It is a village so strange that even Hollywood goes to see it, a reversal of the usual procedure.

SUMMER HOME AT PAUDASH LAKE BURNS

Fire broke out in Mr. Abram's summer home at Paudash Lake, completely destroying the large frame structure and its contents. Fortunately the owner, who by the way is making ready to go on a fishing trip to Georgian Bay, but had considerable bedding and camping equipment loaded on a trailer, when the fire broke out, says the insurance will cover.

In a very few minutes the fire gained headway beyond control, the prolpigly to the fire fighting equipment on the premises.

Mr. Abram's loss is estimated at $3,000 there being no insurance.

It is very typical of summer Mr. Abrams will rebuild on an elaborate scale again or not.

Timely Merchandising

Timely merchandising is the tying up of your advertising with some brand of thought, some National holiday, local event or period of the year which is in accordance and in sympathy with the psychological buying prospects at that particular time.

All throughout the year there are various events which are in the minds of the people and if you link your advertising and your displays, both inside the store and out, to the closely with these events you strengthen your own appeal. For instance, if you talk about spring overhaul of cars at a time when people are beginning to think of getting their cars out for another year season you have made a timely appeal before you begin. This is Timely Merchandising.

JANUARY—Inventory sales, the beginning of a new year always have an appeal at this time.

Furniture certain available for this time of year, canned fruit and vegetables, cheese, etc.

January is the month of many bridge parties — table decorations, menu suggestions, assortments of prizes in various price ranges will help to solve the problems of those giving parties.

Winter sports are the thought of many at this time and offer many suggestions for the wide awake merchant. One merchant because of the enthusiasm for hockey which was manifesting itself in his store window, making use of a large plate glass mirror for the sheet of ice and dressed up small dolls to represent the local teams. This window attracted a great deal of attention and was actually the means of creating a considerable quantity of winter sporting goods for this merchant. Many other suggestions are widely found in the trade papers.

FEBRUARY—St. Valentine's Day has a special appeal and practically every type of store can make use of this interest during this event. The lenten season following this again offers opportunity to feature special foods.

House furnishings are also featured this month.

Coughs and colds are likely prevalent and the featuring of suggestions for the relief of these ailments at this time of the year should not be given careful consideration. I noticed a very effective display with a photograph as the central figure. This photograph was of a small kitten bundled up in a doll's bed wit his small glass, spoon and medicine bottle. It was surrounded with the caption "I've a bad cold." In the window with the photograph were displays of oranges, lemons and grapefruit, favorable for the making of hot drinks. This window, with its timely appeal, attracted much attention.

MARCH—Easter getting closer when thoughts turn to new clothes, new suits and the first signs of spring.

The opening of the maple syrup and sugar season was featured by a merchant in his window display. He had a miniature sugar camp with a little cabin, small trees with little pails hung from them and tiny figures with buckets and yoke carriers.

APRIL—Spring housecleaning in the minds of every housewife. Group displays of advertising featuring all of the various articles which are used during this housecleaning period and which many housewives do not be overlooked. Mops, brooms, brushes, cleaners, soap chips and soap, pails, scrubbing brushes, etc., should be featured with the "clean cold." In the window with the photograph were displays of oranges, lemons and grapefruit favorable for the making of hot drinks. This window, with its timely appeal, attracted much attention.

THE PRINCE SPEAKS

Many men have had their say on the causes of the present conditions but one to whom the world listens when he speaks is the Prince of Wales, whose utterance on the question of the standard of living made in a speech on Friday was one of the sanest expressions made as to the future of human living. His Royal Highness in a few words voiced a wealth of knowledge of economics when he said that the future was to be seen beyond the naked intellect of the social reformer if all employable labor were put to work a reasonable number of hours weekly. This would enable, he declared, the entire population to live upon a very high level of comfort and well-being. Accordingly the problem of the moment, not easy, but possible, is to secure the adjustment between production and consumption. This adjusting is just what the delegates of the Empire are meeting to work out from an Empire basis at Ottawa, and the repercussion of these debates will be felt throughout the world.

MOHAWK PAGEANTRY OF 1784

It is worthy of note that on the Mohawk Reserve in Tyendinaga we possess an indigenous drama. We speak not in the festival Kan-Yen-Geh is the pageant "The Landing of the Mohawks." There is something so rich in historic lore about this event, the story of which is carried on from generation to generation that it does not fail to excite the keenest interest among the white folk of the land and those outside the Indian race. The appearance in the character roles of descendants of the original Mohawk who "landed" back in the last years of the eighteenth century is something which binds the past to the present.

This is rather strange that it has fallen not to the descendants of the race who governed Canada in those days but to the white people who came in 1784, to put on the drama which preserves the history of the coming to the new land. The Mohawk illustrates more than other Canadians a lesson in preservation of the historic annals of the people. U.E.L. pilgrimages are a similar development though not in dramatic form.

Now the Mohawks of Tyendinaga are unique in this respect. The Jutes, Angles, and Danes who founded the English race in land did not dramatize their coming and their settlement because drama was not in their way of thinking. They had something else to think of—the question of the absorption of the inhabitants, the Britons. But the Loyalist Indians came and settled on a peaceful and virgin land, although their coming and settlement meant hardships, yet it was a land where they were given that protection which the British subject always desires. Everything has suited the preservation of the story of the historic landing on the Bay of Quinte, May 22nd, 1784.

Long may the Mohawks preserve this drama of their history, rich in its lessons of patriotism and loyalty. The drama alone is a contribution to the fork-lore, folk-thought and folk-literature of this province. We implore the English-speaking brethren of the Mohawks to preserve the traditions of their race and the early days in Canada may well be kept.

Our Mohawk fellow-Canadians have blazed the way for us in art.

BURIAL GROUNDS

Belleville Cemetery directors have wrought many changes worthy of note in the burial grounds by the laying out of flower and wide paths, the widening of the roads and paths. Flowers have been planted so effectively that the natural beauty being retained in the bank overlooking the Bay of Quinte has been greatly enhanced and the beauty of nature and the art of man have merged to make a ideal setting for the silent homes of the once-Belleville citizens and others who sleep there.

These results are appreciated by those who visit the cemetery. Tourists and other visitors to the district will note with satisfaction that the last homes of the Belleville residents are well kept and not forgotten.

This improvement is in keeping with the agitation that the burial places of Ontario must be maintained at a high standard. No one has ever had a complaint to make of the care of this graveyard, but the directors are alive to the need for the attractions of the cemetery they have been carrying out the wishes of those whom they represent in this worthwhile work.

WOLF SAGA

Sault Ste. Marie has built up a wolf legend and saga which it is going to be hard for the wolves to live up to. With trappers and hunters making statements which run counter to the belief of people as to the habits of the wolf, wolves will have to be very much on their good behaviour.

This all shows what it means to have an interpreter, and friend like the editor of the Sault Ste. Marie Star to take up the cudgels on behalf of the animal kingdom.

Many may not quite believe all the things said of the wolves by Curran and his friends but they have listened to his story and that is the main point. It attracts attention to the Soo and to animal life.

MID-SUMMER NOON
By Aline Michaelis

Not a leaf is stirring now;
Not a linnet sings;
Silent dove on carven bough
Sits with folded wings.

Gay lantanas flaunt their blooms
Bravely as at dawn;
From the roses's ruddy rooms
Drunken bees have gone.

Mounting, golden waves of heat
Fill the fields and lanes;
New and sudden ardors beat
Through men's throbbing veins.

Great magnolia blossoms lie
With their petals pale
Lifted to the brazen sky,
Whence the four winds fail.

Not one thrush's roundelay;
Not one sparrow's call
Yet on this mid-summer day
Life is at its full.

MEMORY MELLOWS the "slings and arrows of outrageous fortune" in the years that are and hurts are healed and forgotten in the "good old days." Anyone who can look back into Brockville Recorder-Times editor takes up his pen in an effort to write of these "good old times" as they were in Brockville and his interesting article, much of which can be applied to Belleville in the days of long ago, a hundred years ago, is reproduced here, not with a view of taking the glamour from the aforesaid good old days, but just as an historical item to show that we are better off today, most of us, than were our ancestors, much better off, in fact, we are told, than they were when the kings lived one hundred years ago.

Sighs for the "good old days" are frequently heard. Yet it is by no means so certain that the "old days" were as "good" as they are often pictured. Consider what was happening in Brockville and the surrounding district a hundred years ago. The community then had neither newspapers nor even a postoffice, practically no barge nor gas nor telephones nor anything but mud roads. It gained its illumination from candles, fish oil and goods by wagon or barge. It lacked the means of stemming or preventing outbreaks of disease.

A hundred years ago slavery was still practiced to an a small extent by some of the wealthy landholders of the district. Colored people, imported from the West Indies or elsewhere, were still held in subjection.

When cholera broke out amongst newly-arrived immigrants, the best that could be done for them was to erect rude sheds on Block House Island (politely termed a "hospital") and endeavor to save them to their fate. The general populace, terror-stricken, would have nothing whatever to do with them and their treatment. They received was given by two or three courageous physicians, one of whom gave his life through it.

A hundred years ago, people who failed to pay their debts were still being clapped into jail and refused to remain there until the money was forthcoming. From the debtors' room of the Belleville jail, there is a story that Sir Allan MacNab, whose celebrity as a Masonic leader has since been publicly recognized, complained to the Grand Master, Ogden, of "circumstantial errors, tautologous eruptions," heedlessness and sore eyes were general among the prisoners, in consequence of the foul air. They had repeatedly protested to the magistrates against the manner in which governing their apartments, but nothing had been done for their relief. There were from 14 to 17 of these hapless unfortunates in a room, the dimensions of which were 28 feet by 16 feet, and there they had to sleep, eat, wash and do all their necessary work. Sir Allan Phillips added, significantly, that there were no drains.

One hundred years ago, the pillory was still in existence in Brockville. Public executions, however, at others by no means so notorious, were thus exposed to the gaze and the taunts of the public. It is little more than a hundred years ago that a man who stole a horse was sentenced to death at the Brockville assizes, capital punishment then governing their case. A man who stole some sheep. Neither sentence was, however, carried out. When executions took place, they were in public and any attempt to alter this practice was vigorously opposed as a manifestation of Americanism.

The great mass of the people lived under conditions that would be considered today akin to squalor. Of the hundreds, yes thousands, of conveniences that have since made their appearance, they knew nothing. They had little or no communication with the outer world, save that afforded by weekly newspapers. They had no means of checking those ravages of disease that have since been brought under control. Children died by droves where today their lives would be saved, Science was powerless to stem the progress of epidemics. And Man's inhumanity to Man was still plainly visible.

Beyond the quietness of the living then practised, the humble things that were considered sufficient, the plain mode of life that went with a pioneer and rather primitive existence (although there were then greater orgies of drinking than have since been known), there was very little to commend the "old days" in Brockville a century ago. An English writer has recently declared that the "good old days" is distinctly a misnomer and that the "good old days" are now in this twentieth century. When we compare life of one hundred years ago with life of today, we begin to think that this writer was quite correct.

SOUND DETECTION

When the agile pedestrian hears the sudden honk of a motor horn and leaps quickly to one side, he considers that his footwork has saved him. But one of his admirers, deeply into the matter, attributes the walker's escape to his ability to tell from which direction the warning came. The question which has "baffled scientists for more than fifty years" is, How does the pedestrian locate the direction of the sound-direction? The London Morning Post reports that the Medical Research Council has at last solved the problem. "The brain is capable of registering the minute fraction of a second between the time when the sound travelling at more than 1,000 feet per second, reached the two ears." These seems to be a sort of poetic justice in the fact that for the thick-headed that interval must be greater than for the long-headed. To pedestrians the newspaper offers the happy thought that "until mechanism succeeds in hurling itself through space at the rate of sound, one will always have a sporting chance of escaping a collision."—New York Times.

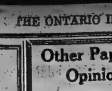
20-MINUTE SERMONS

One of the problems of the churches these days is the lack of attendance at the Sunday evening services. Often the night congregation is less than half the "full house" of the morning service. Many pastors, no doubt, contribute to this undesirable fact by preaching the most important reason, we believe, is long sermons. Many ministers apparently have the idea that it is necessary to preach half an hour or even forty minutes. The result is a good deal of uninteresting and unnecessary padding. Anyone who does much public speaking of any kind soon learns the art of getting verbosity. For instance, a minister often suffers from a scarcity of words. Gradually he learns to elaborate a simple idea very skillfully. In the end he may develop a proficient in enlarging upon his theme as to cause the hearer to lose the requirement of the occasion. In our humble opinion the speaker in 20 minutes can be the best hearing and usually has said something. — St. Mary's Journal.

THE CHEERFUL DEAN

When all the world seemed cavalierly cheerful, Dean Inge was known as the "gloomy dean." Now that the world is in the dumps, he starts to look on the bright side of things. Writing in The Church of England Newspaper, he says: "Happily, we are still in much unexhausted to fight again; and if we make peace, shall we recover our prosperity? I am, for once, rather optimistic, remember the despair which followed, say, the Baring crash in the 'nineties.' When confidence is restored, recovery, especially in America, will probably be rapid. We may compare the cheerfulness of the dean with that of another notable pessimist, Mr. John Maynard Keynes. "The outstanding ground for cheerfulness," he says in The Atlantic Monthly, 'is that the present system [the] shown already its capacity to stand an almost inconceivable strain. I am not sure that we are not up a year or two ago the actual state of affairs could not be concealed. I do not have believed that the world could continue to sustain even that degree of normality which we actually have." The ultimate capacity of the system to take punishment is the best reason for hoping that we shall have time to rally the constructive forces of the world." Since then world were written the Economic Conference opened in Ottawa, an Empire-wide effort to "rally constructive forces." "I believe that the ideas of British statesmen and even of British bankers are on sounder lines than those current in other countries," observes Mr. Keynes. "What we in London have to fear is timidity and a reluctance to act" —Hamilton Spectator.

THE SPIRIT THAT CONQUERS.



To those who have passed the half century mark, and are in revolt against the idea that because of that fact their greater usefulness has passed, there come two pieces of verse that should help them in their moments of depression.

The first of these concerns Dr. Otto Goldie of New York. Dr. Goldie is a man to imagine, nearly the most unlucky man in the world. He had worked hard as a physician and had built up considerable practice in proprietary medicine. Not very long ago his stock in trade suddenly went down with a foundered bank. His loss was the loss of all he owned. He was hit by a motor truck and had both legs broken. The motor he got in insurance after the accident was stolen on the day he received it. Then some police picked him up in a vacant lot, where he had been left after falling from exhaustion and hunger. And now this indomitable man—he is 76 years old—says that all in the world he wants is a fortnight's rest and a few dollars still and he'll be prepared to go out and start another business.

Another elderly youth of the same age, although more happily placed, says he has just completed his best year of production and is planning to live to one hundred and ten, seen a very deal of big work lying ahead of him. He is Nikola Tesla, the inventor, and he makes less than nothing of Caler or the Polish Pasteur. He is a big man and doesn't care who knows it.—Montreal Star.

A memorial column to Admiral Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, will be erected in Greenland by the Greenland Expedition of the University of Michigan.

SONG

Count not the longer kisses lost,
Nor reckon time that's spent in living.
'I less value at no moment's cost,
Since loving thee is perfect living.

No music in this lonely tree,
No beauty of the morning sky,
No breathing light up on the sea,
But is a sign to love thee by.

Thou are mine alm, my journey's end,
My pastime and my path of duty;
Where else should all mine error mend
Who are thus beadman of thy beauty.

But in they bosom and they heart?
Come, draw me by the finger tips,
Teach me in thy love and art.
The threefold lesson of they lips.

CIACOS PUNCH OUT 8-5 WIN

Defeat National Maids For The First Time This Season

Sterling three runs in the 7th innings, the Ciaco girls in the local Belleville Girls' league turned on the league leading National Maids and defeated them by the score of 11 to 8 at the Victoria Lawn Friday evening.

The Corbyville ladies not only trounced the Maids, but they outplayed them from the start to the finish, also in fielding them throughout. Beaus Doolittle hurled consistent ball and was well supported by her team mates. Mollie Gray, the Maids veteran pitcher turned equal as good a game as one can find but her deliveries were hit by the Ciaco batters in the pinches.

Circuit clouts were registered by Baker, Norris and Thompson. E. Baker, at second for the Corbyville girls, was the big hitter of the day with a home run doubled and a single to her credit. K. Gansewind and P. Tuttle each had three hits to their credit. The summary of the line up of the season, clinched up against the National Maids by their Ciaco rivals. Ciaco lineup:

Ciaco—Baker, Doolittle, Morgan, Thompson, Gansewind, Gray, Canning and Hay.

AMELIASBURG SOFTBALL LOOP

Carrying Place, July 30 (Special)—The schedule of the Ameliasburg League was brought to a close last night when Consecon journeyed here and hammered the locals to defeat by a 13 to 2 score.

In spite of the threatening weather a good crowd witnessed the game but excitement was low, the losing team having the majority of the rooters. Consecon introduced the game at the bat but failed to register a counter. One man flying out and the next two striking out. F. Green batted first for Carrying Place and got to first on an error, the next two batters got out. Hank Harris landed out on three batger, driving Green in. G. Herrington got out and ended the inning.

In the second Consecon came to bat and on revenge and secured four counters. Then the home team attempted to follow suite, filling the bases with their first three men but only one registered and they retired leaving the bases full.

In the third Consecon started in for another rally and secured three more while Carrying Place retired one, two, three.

In the fourth one man got to first base neither team scoring.

In the fifth Miller batted first for the visitors and landed out a circuit clout, the next three batters went out in order. Carrying Place also retired without a score.

In the sixth Consecon gathered up two more and sent the home team to the bench in order.

In the seventh the local lads seemed to have lost hope and several batters went down three more runs. At bat Westfall got to first, then the game again went out in order. Westfall scored.

The visitors were featured by heavy hitting and good fielding but the visiting team played their hits to better advantage. Hank and Fry each formed the battery for Carrying Place with Vance and McConkey acting for the visitors.

SAILING PUNTS READY FOR GUN

Any Punt, That Will Carry Sail and Manned by Boys Eligible

Monday will be a great day for the lads, who have been busy so long building skips, and no less seven seas but to test their strength on the winds, that blow over the Bay of Quinte. A number of boys in the city have constructed sailing punts and are anxious to try them out for speed and endurance against each other. Therefore a race has been arranged for Monday afternoon off Victoria Park, which it is expected will furnish much entertainment for spectators and keen competition for the boys, who will sail their own make of boats.

Some very fine and fast craft have been built and if the wind is fair some fast stepping will be seen for the boys are good sailors and the craft so seaworthy that it will take a hurricane to upset them.

This being the first race there will be no handicaps and no measurements or time allowances, anything that can carry a sail will be permitted to race.

Two guns will be fired to get the boats over the line and the starting gun will be fired between 2.30 and 3 o'clock. Any skipper fouled by the gun will have to return and re-cross the line.

The start will be from the south end of Victoria Park, proceeding to a buoy in the Bay, then returning up Platt's Channel, west of the park, so that a good view of the entire race can be had from the park. Owners of motor boats and other craft are requested to help patrol the course.

Three prizes will be given besides the Charles Ranna Challenge Cup, which must be won three times in succession to retain.

The committee in charge consists of William (King) Rogers, J. Arnold Thomson, and Capt. Walters.

Amidst Bustle of Parley Premier Bennett Sends Good Wishes to Athletes

Ottawa, July 30—(CP)—In the midst of his hurried minutes during the Imperial Conference, Prime Minister R. B. Bennett found time this evening to send a message of good wishes to Canadian athletes at the Olympic games. In a statement through the Canadian Press exclusively, the Prime Minister said: "On the eve of the opening of the Olympic games at Los Angeles Canada's good wishes go out to athletic representatives. I feel confident that in victory or defeat their performances will reflect honor and credit upon our Dominion and maintain the glorious record of previous Olympiads."

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

With the latest release of the Belleville Nadine's batting averages we find that the Nats are leading the ball a little more consistently of late. As a team they are leading the "Bees hide" in the time of .378, Barriage, Ethier, Cretney, Cook and Morris are the only ones who have been improving their hitting strength to any great extent. The Nats will entrain for Cook as he has played but two games with the local team of which he had never played O.B.A. A baseball.

Alex Weir has been the team's most consistent hitter of late and while Penney Mills has been hitting the ball for all he's worth he's not one of the more game before the O.B.A.A. season. Ry is doing well. Vern will become eligible to play in the play-offs. Al Nats are fortunate enough to "get in the game" a player must take part in at least three games and not be playing in the play-offs. This applies to O.B.A.A. as well as the O.B.A.A.

o—o—o—o

It seems the O.B.A.A. executive would like to see a baseball league as far as Monday's game is concerned. The Belleville Punks had booked an exhibition game with the Brockville Baseball Club for the holiday. Being eligible to play in the O.B.A.A. informed the Central Ontario League executive over the "black list" as far as they were concerned. This is no game to the Island City team for the Punks. The Punks are coming to Belleville on Monday morning all primed and cocked to "take" the Islanders. They will be the headstarters on the other hand have to play the game to keep ahead of the oncoming Fisherboro club. Manager Gerow will no doubt pit Carl Casey or Alec Weir against the Limestone City crew on Civic Holiday. Gerow's pitching staff will have Jamieson and Smith to call on for hurling duty. In the afternoon of the holiday the second game of the Hastings County Junior League play-offs will be the order of the day when the B.A.A.A. kids battle the Wellington youngsters at the Prince Edward County fair grounds.

Yesterday's Stars

In all probability the new 1932 coach of the Queens football team will be chosen today. Although no definite announcement has been made it is generally understood that Dr. Spence, Queen's editor of the Toronto Globe and coach of the famous Hamilton Tigers' last year, will be the man to take over the duties left vacant by Warren Bain. He has enjoyed special reason for calling Redden ex-officio. The fact that he resigned his position as coach of the "Tigers" against his will has left him unprovided as coach of the Toronto varsity football team, as yet. Many thought that the latter would be given the job at Varsity but as thing have turned out it is more likely that he should travel east than south.

o—o—o—o

Monday's horse show in Napanee promise to be of the highest calibre. Especially one night mention of Belleville's local entrie. Several young colts are entered. Bill Smith of Belleville, Ross Bell of Belleville have each entered a horse in the show. According to the local harness racing lovers this race will be a battle royal. Not that Bill Smith's colt, Tiller the Teller, is one of the best three year olds in the district but Bell's colt and other classes have been filled and a day's racing is assured for all the fans besides providing Jupiter Pluvius does not step in and spoil the days fun.

o—o—o—o

In order to prepare for next season the Moose Juniors and Arthur Meighen Juniors are going to play a ball game every Thursday night at the Alexandra Grounds until fall. This move is one to be commended as it will give the junior team managers a chance to build up a team for next season. All players who are over age next season will be dropped and the two teams will have a flying start on their rivals next spring. Later on in the season these teams intend playing about the country as a preliminary to the senior games. Good luck to the youngsters.

o—o—o—o

Civic Holiday will be observed by the members of the Belleville Golf Club and also the members of the Bay of Quinte Golf Club when a field day's programme of golf is being arranged by the club executives. Matches and tournaments for both morning and afternoon competitions are being planned for both women and men. Out at the Belleville Club the ladies will play a usual Duke and Duffers in the afternoon.

Painted Hair is Beautiful and Chic

When Mrs. Sour-sniffer heard about painted coiffures she snorted. "Paint, indeed!" she hissed, "what next? This world is no place for a sensible woman."

Different days, different ways, Mrs. Sour-sniffer. Think back to the past scornful moments. When daughter looked at the comets in the heavens and spoke of brilliance, might be painted! What about getting it unpainted? Was the process expensive? Are women really wearing them?

"It is a variation of an old idea," he said. "Nothing new about powdered hair. In the time of Louis XVI flour was used, and the populace made a bid of a row about it. Now we use a foundation applicator to get a flaxen, a bitter jet. The powder stays put.

"The first step is a finger wave. Better than the marcel because it is fast, doesn't fluff. The coiffure is arranged, every hair in place.

"With an atomizer the head is covered with a fine, brilliant mist. The powder—bronze, gold, silver, any color you like—is applied with pledgets of cotton. The brilliantine holds it. When the powder has been evenly distributed the hair is sprayed with banana oil, which sets the powder, making it lasting.

"All the patrons has to do is to bring along a sample of her frock, and we'll give her hair to match. No, it's no trouble getting back to normal. When the hair needs combing mist free, then give the usual shampoo. Hair isn't harmed. And thing what a sensation the lady makes as the party! She's the talk of the town for days!"

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Follett)

Hair that is tapered at the ends is better material for the permanent wave operator than ends that are cut evenly and squarely, says Antoinette of the Antoinette Salon. In winding the hair around the metal rod, straight cut hair has a tendency to escape, to sprout out here and there. Tapered ends curl smoothly and ringlets and that's what all the little dollies are after. Wet the hair with water, then wind the finger with the brush and there are are, Curly Locks.

They're giving steaming treatments now for the purpose of clearing the scalp of dandruff. Steaming is a vigorous brushing, with hair lifted up strand by strand and the brush energetically put to work. Then comes the hot oil-castor oil and almond mixture which forms a good medium—and the beauty parlorite is glad to place the customer's head covered with hot, moist compresses.

With bathing sandals popular, the beach dryers are timing bobbed hair at the beach. Then all one has to see the little dots all dressed up in their Sunday Worst, is to listen to their feet and if they're going to take the trouble to burnish and shampoo, manicure, shape and keep their little hoofs free of corns and bunions, they're entitled to some fitted shoes. "Bigger and better feet" is the firm, dainty motto.

Beware of using henna on white hair. It is likely to place upon the feminine halo a bright magenta shade, which is certainly unal-looking per becoming. On matters of hair dyeing and bleaching, it is advisable to seek professional information. Pays in the long run.

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Follett)

On almost any "x" busy buy-way where the gals go to spend their pin money, you will see the hip-swinging, hair-bobbing crowd from side to side with every step Terrible. One suspects it is an affectation. Calling to mind the days of the corn yeste shape; who knows? If it is merely a habit, which this writer is unconscious, she can shake herself out of it by taking a stroll feet closer together. The hip swing develops into a waddle. After waddling once start to stay.

Doing nothing can cook up as many fatigue bugs as doing work. More, because idleness is productive of boredom and because between mind and body there is a feeling of sympathy. There's many a woman tired of her face who could get a brand new complexion by cultivating an enthusiasm, getting steamed up on some special interesting subject or study. Fascinating women are those who are full of life, have colorful, vivid, alert. They stay young, and no wrinkle dares approach. They have their fingers in pies.

Brittle finger nails are due to deficiency in diet. It's not enough calcium to keep the little shells strong and healthy. One quart of milk a day, the juice of three oranges before breakfast, half a head of lettuce every luncheon and dinner, and ginger sheaths need. At night apply cod liver oil to finger bands inky large white cotton gloves.

It looks more and more as if the girls hate their back hair. They're steaming off the last curl material in the nape of the neck. The wide marcel finger wave ends in a charming and bewitching side sweep, and that's the end of the coiffure story. As long as necks have to be washed, rear ringlets will be regarded as much trouble for small results.

Never, never must the woman with the receding chin touch it with rouge. Rouge forms a shadow, makes the chin look more retiring. Relieve cheeks and lips, improved by war paint. Unless it is placed high on the cheek bones it makes the effect. The large nose pulls in its dimensions when its surface is fluffed over with dark complexion powder.

PRINCE INVITES BOYS TO VISIT RANCH

London, July 30 (C.P. Cable) —A party of school boys, leaving for Canada in the charge of Col. Sibley Hills today received a bony voyage greeting from the Prince of Wales.

"His Royal Highness," ran the message, "hopes the boys will visit his High River Ranch in Alberta, and sends his best wishes for this their ninth tour."

Quite Simple Indeed!

By Alfred I. Tooke

"Snippy" Morton dived into the shadow behind the library desk as the door of the room opened. With one hand he tugged down a mask from under his cap. With the other he whipped a revolver from his shoulder holster, and hoped it would not be necessary to use it.

This was fine thing to happen to him! He had served the combination of the safe and had it open, "Snippy" had stood by this "crib" for weeks, he had learned the habits of his owner. He thought he was sure that nobody was ever at home Friday nights that he had even watched on the shaded bridge lamp that he might have left burning in work by, and now.... well, he certainly had been caught napping.

The frail, white-haired old lady who entered seemed not to notice the masked face peering from behind that menacing gun; nor did it seem to strike her as remarkable that the light was on. Deliberately she closed the door behind her. With hands held slightly before her, her steps somewhat hesitant, she crossed the room to a big over stuffed chair. She nearly fell over it before she found it, then sank into it with a pleased sigh. She made no gesture, however, and her expression did not change, and "Snippy" relaxed. So that was it! The old lady was blind! She couldn't see him after all.

He grinned and pushed the mask again. He glanced at the safe, open elemily, glad that it was well filled. Then he turned to the door open. In spite of the care he had taken to keep out of sight, and the figure in the chair started, and turned suddenly towards him.

"Is that you, Mary?" the woman asked in a quite natural voice. "You can't sleep, either, can you? You must get a cick that strikes the hour. I like to hear it every day hour it is. I must have taken a sleeping pill, for I dozed off again after my long journey, you know. When I woke I thought I would sneak here and sit for awhile just like this chair of yours. If you're not sleepy, I'll go back home with me, sure as my name is Mary Smith. Isn't that a funny coincidence?"

"Yes, indeed old girl——" thought "Snippy"—but it's just as well. She's alone, so I'll just sit and stand for it, assuming as well as he could the remembered voice of John Smith, "Snippy's" pal, who was robbing: "You like it?"

"Snippy" voice had lowered and had fooled her. He turned his attention once more to the contents of the safe.

"By the way, John," she went on, "I'm glad you got me up in the kitchen for a drink of water, for I'm sure you got home early. I was afraid I would knock something over in the dark and spoil it. I gave up the attempt. Would you like a glass of wine now, or shall when you're not too busy? There's no hurry."

"Good lol" "Snippy" in his assumed voice grunted.

Carefully he removed all traces of fingerprints. Then he closed the safe door, covering any possible noise by pushing a nearby chair along his hardwood floor with his feet. That made it sound as if he was getting up from his seat. He turned to the old lady with a deep grunting cheerfully, in his pocket was a small box of cotton batting that had made his heart leap with satisfaction when he found it. Also, there was a package of cigarettes and a lighter. "Snippy" did not about it; mostly small bills, but plenty of them.

Opening the door, he peered cautiously out, then left, closing the door softly behind him. Then he walked towards the kitchen, searching other rooms en route.

The white-haired old lady in the chair sighed slightly, shifted, though listening. Perhaps she was listening for "Snippy's" footsteps coming back. If so, he seemed she would have to wait some time. "Snippy" was later. "Snippy" did return, although he had certainly gone into other rooms. His hands were manacled now, and with him were two grim-looking men—plain-clothes and otherwise. He'd been captured near a rear exit. In the front room of the old lady was John Marsden, whose property "Snippy" had so recently appropriated.

"Come right in, and bring your prisoner!" Marsden invited the detective. "We're very glad to welcome you, and to see him, too."

"Is this the man, Miss Marsden" the detectives asked.

"Why, I've never seen him before!" "Snippy" with a twinkle of amusement in her eyes—eyes that flashed with life and merriment now. "That is certainly not the man, officer!"

she replied. "Did you recover the, loot, I think you got it back?"

"I recovered this!" "Was there anything else missing?"

John Marsden inspected the contents of the jewel box and counted and found that everything is here, Officer!" he said. "You are to be congratulated on a very quick capture. That was smart work."

"I think it is your sister deserves the congratulations, sir," was the reply. "That was the nerviest piece of work I ever heard tell of! It took courage and a cool head to carry it out so well."

"Snippy" was still staring at the old lady, his eyes wide with surprise. "Say!" he exploded at last. "Aren't you blind!"

The old lady laughed musically. "None so blind as those who will not see!" she chuckled. "I dropped along unexpectedly today to visit my brother, John, you see. He had his usual Friday night meeting to attend, so, there being nobody else at home, I took a short nap to make up for the sleep I lost on my journey here. When I awoke, I decided I might as well go into the library and wait until John returned, but as I entered the room I realized that I had surprised a masked burglar in the act of robbing the safe! She paused with a smile. "He was a most desperate looking fellow, and was pointing a revolver at me. Imagine my embarrassment!"

"And I imagine 'Snippy' wasn't so much at his ease, either!" chuckled the detective.

"But, it's no joking matter!" Madden protested. "His might have shot you, Anna!"

"I realized! That's why I decided I had better be a blind lady, and I think I succeeded very well, thanks to the dim light and the fact that I have acted such a part many times in one of my plays on the stage."

"Bah! An actress!" Snippy grunted, and some of the chagrin left his face. "Well, that's different. No wonder you fooled me. So that's how the clicks are in the big city before I had time to ditch the job!"

The old lady smiled and nodded. "Soon after you started through the other room I managed to get to John's private telephone (you did, I suppose, notice the regular telephone wires) and notified the police and.... here you are. Quite simple, isn't it?"

"Yeah, if you mean me," the burglar growled.

Little Benny's Note Book

I owe Sid Hunt a cent and he's always trying to get it every day regular, and today me and pop was eating a week before supper and Sid Hunt started to go past me and thinking, G, I hope he dont ask me for that cent in front of pop.

While he dident quite, just saying, Hello, Benny, how are you, and I'll see you tomorrow, I said, and Sid said, Aw, that's what you said yestiday.

And he kept on going, pop saying, Benny, do you owe somebody money and not pay it back?

No yet, I said, He ony loaned me a cent about a week ago, hardly, I said, and pop said, A week may be long to wait for money in this time in relation to infinity, but to a lender it often seems quite long enough. Now let's go and preserve frends and keep an easy mind in this stormy world, and the wise man acts accordingly.

Well, I said, how boy, he said.

And we krpt on going and pritty soon pop stopped and shook hands with a man with spats on, saying, How goes it, Davis? and the man said, Oh keeping the nose above water with the aid of a step ladder, fairly good, at that.

I can conceivin, but I dont, much pop said, that you have made an much worse that pritty soon the sheriff will be on hand to get it better, that's the brite spot on the horizon. My bank decided not to loan me one cent to get them almost all pered off, or at least one third, so I am more conservative, he said. Well, cherrio, dont get lost in the fog, and we went on he said. Thanks, dont lose your pocket-book in the sand.

And me and pop krpt on going, me saying, G, pop, why did you convey money to Sid Hunt, that he does bleeve in borrowing?

Benny, I am sorry to say of your age can hardly understand, pop said.

Complete in every detail, equipped with modern improvements is the new home of the Belleville Burial Company located now in the building formerly occupied by the Dominion Business College on Front street.

MYERS—COOPER

John Street United Church was the scene of a lovely summer wedding at three o'clock this afternoon when Helen Kathleen, daughter of Mr. John Cooper and the late Mrs. Cooper, became the bride of Mr. Charles Roger Myers, Toronto, son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles A. Myers, Toronto. The ceremony was performed by the groom's father, assisted by Rev. Robert Hall, pastor of John Street Church.

Marguerites, blue cornflowers and pale yellow snapdragons with tall palms were used in the decoration of the church and the guests' pews were marked with white ribbon.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father made a charming picture in her bridal gown of Blanchini's lye white crepe Elizabeth which was fashioned in Grecian effect on simple, graceful lines with cowl neck and swathed skirline. Her veil was of ice white silk net with a panel of old Spanish lace, and was caught in cap effect with a shower bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and lily of the valley.

Miss Betty Cooper, the bride's sister, was bridesmaid. She wore a picturesque frock of ecru silk net lace over apricot taffeta. Her wide hat of mohair was trimmed with apricot flowers while ecru shoes and gloves completed the costume. The bridesmaid's bouquet was of Talisman roses and blue cornflowers.

Little Misses Vivian and Gwendolyn McElrath were junior bridesmaids and were attired alike in pastel Rose Greenaway dresses of green and mauve. They carried baskets of carnations and corn flowers in tones of blue and pink.

Dr. Reg. Rogers of Rochester, N.Y., was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Evan Young of Toronto and Mr. Reg. Cooper of Belleville.

Wedding music was played by Mr. Leo B. Riggs while Miss Leona Riggs sang "A Birthday". Good music most effectively during the singing of the register.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home, Mrs. H. S. McElrath, the bride's sister, in a smart gown of figured chiffon as a light ground, with large black hat trimmed with white angel-skirt with corsage of Butterfly roses, received with the bridal couple. Mrs. Myers, mother of the groom, wore a handsome Persian gown of rose patterned chiffon on black ground with appliques of black net. Her hat was a picture model of black and she wore a corsage bouquet of Tropique roses.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Myers left on a motor trip to Quebec. The bride chose for travelling a jacket frock of Independence blue flat crepe with embroidered white dot and scarf of blue and rosey red. Her hat was a small model of blue

CAPITOL EMPIRE WEEK
"TONS OF MONEY"

Ralph Lynn, who for many years has been an enormous favorite with comedy lovers of the theatre, has been until recently, merely a famous name so far as the cinema-going public all over the country are concerned. His film debut in "One Embarrassing Night" failed to establish him on the list of film stars. Nothing so funny as Lynn's performance in this had been seen on the screen for years. In "Tons of Money," the film version of the famous Aldwych farce which the Capitol is showing Monday and Tuesday he beats his own record! His performance is a long screaming laughter. He is a "silly ass" but a "silly ass" who rouses pity, sympathy as well as your laughter. It was the stage version of "Tons of Money" that first brought him into prominence as a West End actor and his inimitable humour in the film amongst the leading film actors of the day. The story is too well known to repeat, but the comedy element has been broadened and given both Lynn and Yvonne Arnaud (who also played in the stage version) an opportunity to show off their own particular brand of humour.

Joyous acting and excellent farcical comedy make the film "Tons of Money," the film adaptation of the famous Aldwych Theatre farce superb entertainment. It is impossible not to laugh at the series of comical situations Ralph Lynn contrives to place himself in. His efforts to "get out the way he does over" absurdities is inimitable. Ralph Lynn plays the part of Alfred Allington, the hard-up husband of Louise (Yvonne Arnaud) who comes to the conclusion that when, in his role of "next of kin" he discovers that everyone should make a point of seeing "Tons of Money" either on Monday or Tuesday at the Capitol Theatre.

TOM MIX

epic of the west, "The Texas Bad Man" with Fred Kohler, Jr., Lucille Lee, William Robertson and Tom Mix the wonder horse also in the cast. The story which pictures the present day cattle rustling activities as state as Texas Ranger in the days of old, is a thrilling epic of a bold, bad bandit, is an original one by Jack Cunningham. It packs thrill enough for a holidays desperate chase, daring rescues and the amazing antics of Mix and his ever-faithful steed, Tony, in a whirling series of exciting situations, and shows the adventurous Texas at his very best.

They're done it again. Not so long ago that popular pair of actors comedians, Eddie Quillan and Robert Armstrong gave us a mighty fine picture in "Big Boy" and they were better one is "The Tip Off", the second feature attraction at the Belle now.

Here is a production which has everything in the way of entertainment. There is drama, plenty of it, and there's Ralph Lynn of action. And there is a love theme running through it, the conception which will hold everyone, young and old. "Grace" is the name of baby face. Armstrong's girl friend takes care of a high percentage of the smart comedy and makes the most of it.

STRANGE EXODUS IS CARRIED ON

Bonus Seekers March Out While Camps Are in Ruins

Washington, July 30—Bonus seekers by the score carried on a strange exodus from Washington today. Scattered by a fire and tear gas, they made their encamps things of the past.

The battered groups went ushered out of the capital with a statement by President Hoover deploring an attempt to coerce the government by mob rule and expressing confidence that the challenge had been met "swiftly and firmly."

To see that the veterans really did stay out, three companies of infantry camped on the scarred site of the vanquished encampments, once most active centre. Acres of low ground in Anacostia a suburb.

Police cleared all the others that had been busy for months, now in ruins but a ruin. It was burned to the ground.

New York, July 30—The unfavorable tide of waters away from swimmers at Long Beach last into yesterday.

Old Ocean could not recall so many mackerel coming in to spend the day. Or perhaps water was black with them, making swimming impossible, despite a pastime for human beings.

The swimmers were ashore and fished, using bacteria pails hook and line and even bare hands.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 30 (CP)—Indians danced around a blazing camp fire as the Indian village once more became the centre of Wolf Week here last night. An element in the pow-wow unknown to the Aborigines was furnished by the French Canadian chorus, winners of the contest for lamp-post troubadours. They sang "Sweet Adeline" by request.

A programme of sports and the Hudson's Bay banquet will end the week's celebrations tomorrow.

Canada Asks United Kingdom for Preferred Entry of Wheat, Barley

Bennett and Rhodes With Helpers Study Return Concessions

4 CENT DUTY

Also Want Market For 50,000 Head of Cattle

Ottawa, July 30.—Canada is preparing her quid pro quo for the Empire Conference.

A sub-committee of Cabinet, meeting under the chairmanship of Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, today had the Canadian tariff on the operating table. The sub-committee, it is understood, is going through the tariff item by item. But it is giving particular attention to the rates on certain agricultural items and articles in the export of which Great Britain is especially interested.

Great Britain is reported to have already agreed in principle to give a preference on Empire wheat.

New Free of Duty.

At present, all wheat, whether Empire or foreign, enters Britain free. Canada's market free of duty, Great Britain is also reported to be favourably inclined towards a preference on meats and other natural products, provided the dominions give a satisfactory quid pro quo. She wants:

1. Reduction in tariff rates on British goods.

2. Curtailment of the authority of countries officials to fix arbitrary valuations for customs purposes.

An expert sub-committee of conference has the second of the two items in hand. Its program also is ready under review. Its discussions will, it is hoped, lead to results satisfactory to both sides.

It is the first item, tariff rates on British goods, which the cabinet committee now has under review.

The sub-committee consists of Premier Bennett, Hon. E. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce, Hon. R. B. Bennett, Minister of National Revenue, Hon. C. H. Cahan, Secretary of State.

Chatter for Week-end.

Activities of the conference proper were laid aside today as the committees on currency and to various commodities, however, many delegates and advisers leave Ottawa to spend the week-end enjoying pastoral delights of Lucerne-in-Quebec. Officially, the conference takes a holiday till Monday. There will be a suspension even of those incidental press conferences which will be lacking in information.

But, behind the scenes, heads of delegations will be busily preparing for the day on which it is expected about the middle of the coming week. The United Kingdom and the Dominions will be ready then to make concessions providing they get satisfactory concessions in return. It is those return concessions which form the real difficulty.

If they prove satisfactory, the main task of the conference will be over. Otherwise, it will then remain to be worked out.

The British African delegation is understood to be contemplating the use of a subsidy supplementing the duty issued by Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, leader of the British delegation. In South African circles the view is taken that the British review of Empire trade does not accurately present the South African position.

PEACH CROP TO BE HEAVY

Pears, Grapes and Cherries Much Better Than Year Ago

Ottawa, July 30.—(CP)—Considerable attention to the prospects and prospects for fruit crops throughout the Dominion is reported in a review issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics today.

In general the production in the Maritime Provinces will be better than a year ago, the cool, Spring with liberal frosts reducing the possibilities of harvest. In Quebec production will be slightly lower, while in Ontario the outlook varies. Raspberry and strawberry production will less than last year and a greatly reduced apple crop compared with 1931 is in prospect, says the bureau.

Cherries, peaches, pears and grapes, on the other hand, probably will yield better than last year in Ontario.

The season has been favorable in British Columbia, and apples and cherries will probably yield better than a year ago.

Imagine the United States with a population no larger than the city of New York, and you have a picture of Australia's area and inhabitants.

England Agreed on Wheat And Meat Preference

WANT RECIPROCITY

Delegates to go on Holiday Over The Weekend

OTTAWA, July 30.—Canada has laid on the table in the Imperial Economic Conference the attitudes and views of the sons of the United Kingdom. She wants:

A preference market for 80,000,000 bushels of wheat in the United Kingdom with a duty and quantitative allotment. The duty specified is four cents per bushel.

A duty upon meats: with four cents per pound specified, and a willingness to concede the necessity for lower than present imports against the Argentine.

A duty upon barley that will transfer British purchases for brewing purposes to Canada to create an annual market for 50,000,000 bushels of barley from the provinces, principally from Manitoba and Ontario.

Cattle Market Wanted

Wiping out of discriminatory restrictions against Canadian feeder cattle; which will mean a market for 50,000 head of cattle within a year.

An allocated market for dairy products in the United Kingdom. Canada will emerge with a market for cheese for thirty per cent of the basis and in which the increase in butter will be limited to an absolute 10 per cent New Zealand competition.

Continued preferences upon canned fish, wines, fruits and other products, preferences and protective preferences.

Preferential duty on lumber and restriction of Soviet imports.

Preferential duty upon copper.

Preferential duty upon such manufactured products as British raw and manufactured.

Preferential duties for asbestos, preferences over the general dutiable rate now operative in the United Kingdom.

Schedule

The list of Canadian requests is a comprehensive one, schedule of 8,000 items which the Canadian Manufacturers' Association has prepared and upon which there will be no interference with Canadian industry if preferential duties are extended.

The primary reaction of British trade representatives in Ottawa is that they have no desire to gain by raising of general tariffs against foreign imports. They would be satisfied if certain Canadian schedules in conjunction with any elevation of British tariffs and have safeguarded the United Kingdom delegation from the flood of foreign goods.

The British advisory committee is now scanning the Canadian proposals and in due course they will be submitted to the delegates who will say what can be done, not only with reference to duties imposed against foreign foods, but upon the more general line of effective restrictive measures against Russia.

Iron Out Cattle Embargo

The Canadian views of major interest to cattle raisers in Canada is in the process of being ironed out. It is what is effectually an embargo against the shipment of Canadian live cattle into the United Kingdom market.

Delegates to every Canadian Minister of agriculture has fully explained the difficulties set up by the British government against the importation of live cattle under Great Britain.

Substitution of evidence by Canada that the disease had not been obtaining in the areas from which the cattle were shipped during the terms of years were unavailing and within the last two years when the regulations were somewhat relaxed, representations could be have practicably been entering the British market by scealth.

The attitude and objective of the present conference, implemented by the present impass between the Irish Free State and Britain, is expected to work out the distribution and to provide an immediate market for approximately fifty thousand cattle from feeder cattle per year in Britain. Under present conditions a great number are now be grazed in the prairie provinces, shipped through the new ocean ports of Fort Churchill, fattened in the Maritime Provinces and then reshipped to Britain.

BIG RUSH TO GOLD FIELDS

Mexico City, July 30—The gold rush that resulted from recent placer findings in the state of Sinaloa has attracted more than 1,000 families to that district, it was reported today.

WILLING TO DO A FULL SHARE

Letter in Paper Brings Sympathetic Man to Rescue

An earnest young man, unemployed, but with an honest desire to make the most of his present circumstances, tried in vain to enlist among the army of farm workers on nearby farms. Lack of previous experience proved to his disadvantage, but undaunted, he next tried to obtain work were fruitless. As a last resort he wrote a little letter to the Ontario Intelligencer explaining his plight, and asked if any other single men without experience in farm work could get a job. A farmer in Sidney township, near Trenton, who secured the address of the lad late Friday afternoon, and now a job has been filled. "I'm willing to do a full share," he stated, "but, too", remarked the farmer.

PEN TERMS IN SUDBURY CASE

Trio Sent Down Few Hours After Attempted Break-in

Sudbury, Ont., July 29 — Three men were sentenced to penitentiary terms today, a few hours after they had attempted to break into a jewelry store and fired at police who tried to catch them.

Joe Johnston was sentenced to three years in Portsmouth Penitentiary; Louis Michaud was sentenced to two years, and Albert Garneau received one year determinate and one year indeterminate.

Sighted by Constable

The trio was sighted by Constable Robert Turpin of the local police as they attempted to gain the bars of the jewelry store window. Turpin approached and they fled, two abode of the officer and fled. After a short search they were captured.

Johnston and Michaud had been arrested on another charge a week and were released yesterday with instructions to report to police court today. Johnston had several previous convictions in Quebec.

ROAD CONDITIONS

Routes you will probably follow in touring to and from here are here listed, giving conditions of roads:

Highway No. 37—Belleville to Actinolite—29.3 miles. Belleville to 1 mile north of Foxboro Good. Gravel from this point to Actinolite. Road under construction Foxboro to Actinolite. Traffic is being detoured.

Belleville to Brighton, paved highway, No. 15—Kingston to Ottawa—131 miles. Good gravel macadam road. Construction between Bridge under construction at Lonsberry, 2 miles south of Brighton, resulting in progress between Smiths Falls and Carleton Place.

HOOVER WON'T LOAN MONEY TO FARMERS

WASHINGTON, July 29.—President Hoover has given a pocket veto to a U.S. Senate Bill intending to relieve the case of reconstruction finance corporation loans to farmers.

This was made known today at the White House after the time limit for signing the measure had expired at midnight.

Cook Tent Burns But Potatoes And Pies Saved

Prescott Pointe, July 30th (Special)—While twenty Belleville Sea Scouts were swimming at the dock here on Thursday morning, their cook-tent was completely destroyed by fire. An oil-stove had been left burning with potatoes cooking and meat roasting over it, and it is believed that it was over the flame was blown by the wind to ignite the canvas wall. "Well, never mind," said one, "the potatoes were saved." "And the meat was still good," added another. "And the pies we made," put in a third, "were harder than stove-lids." The result being that it is an ill fire that never roasts anyone any good.

BENNETT MAY FLOAT LOAN IN EARLY FALL

Relief Costs and C. N. R. Deficit to be Met by Measure

NO OTHER NEED

Success of Loan Will Depend on Condition of Money Mart

Ottawa, July 30—A public loan of from 150 to 200 million dollars will be floated by the Bennett Government this Fall to meet the costs of unemployment relief and the 1932 C.N.R. deficit, it is learned here on good authority.

The loan, it is understood, will be sold on the same basis as was the national service issue of last Fall. Interest rates, maturities and other matters, however, have not been decided. As in the business practice, they will be gauged largely by the money market at the time the loan is put out.

It is believed here that the success of the national service loan has been the big factor in persuading the Government to float a loan. Fall the national service loan was started with an objective of 150 million dollars. Within seven days was set as the time in which this amount was sought. It closed in a week 221 million dollars had been subscribed.

At the time Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, brought down his budget last Spring, it was considered significant that he made no reference to providing funds for the payments of unemployment relief and the deficit of the C.N.R. Ottawa, then, when the Commons meets again, and now a job has been filled. "I'm willing to do a full share," he stated, "but, too", remarked the farmer.

Situation at Year-End

In the 1931 fiscal year, ending March 31, 1931, unemployment relief payments totalled $30,000,000 during the current fiscal year they will be found to be amply double that, it believed here. The C.N.R. deficit for equipment, etc., brought the amount during this calendar year to $67,715,000. With these totals these two amounts, allows for these bonds payments and makes the customary addition for probable under estimates in the budget, it is easy to obtain the total amount of money to be required from the public during the current fiscal year April 1 to 150 million dollars or better.

Since the provision was made for the payment of these amounts out of current government revenues it is obvious that the sum must be raised by way of loan, unless Parliament as a deficit. The latter course would be a bad move by any government as long as the money market was open. Ottawa, says, apart entirely from the urgency of the unemployment relief and the deficit of the officer and fled. After a short search they were captured.

Johnston and Michaud had been arrested on another charge a week and were released yesterday with instructions to report to police court today. Johnston had several previous convictions in Quebec.

PHEASANTS FEED WHILE CARS PASS

Have Become Quite Tame Due to Stringent Protective Laws

There is no scarcity of pheasants in this district as several of the beautifully plumaged birds have been sighted on roadsides during the past few weeks, within the week or so. Early last evening while motoring along the Foxboro road, north of Foxboro Belleville party saw six of the beautiful birds feeding along the road. They have been reported at various points in Prince Edward County and the birds formerly were very wild and shy, stringent laws having adopted for their protection have made game of them and display quite some of the fear formerly exhibited. So tame have they become that they pay no attention to passing cars.

C.N.R. NET REVENUE IS UP $1,332,861

Montreal, July 29—An increase of $1,332,864 in the net revenues of the Canadian National Railways for June 1932 as compared with June 1931 is shown in the monthly statement of operating revenues and expenses issued at Canadian National headquarters today. This betterment in net was effected despite a heavy drop in the gross receipts.

Gross revenues in June, were $13,427,976, a decrease of $2,799,154 or 18.27 per cent from the gross revenues of June 1931. Operating expenses, however were cut by $4,132,018 from $14,344,325 in June 1931.

DELEGATES NOT AGREED AS TO TIME OF PACT

Empire Trade Council May be Formed With Bennett Head

SETTLES DISPUTES

Probably Prevent a Serious Disarrangement of Schedule

Ottawa, July 30—An Empire Trade Council, with Premier Bennett as its likely president, will be created during the Imperial Conference to assist in co-ordinating the working of trade agreements between the nations of the Commonwealth, according to a report circulated in well informed circles here Friday.

This question it is learned on good authority, has been talked of in an informal way among the delegates. The general opinion is that the consideration of this move will be deferred until toward the end of the conference, when all matters of negotiations have been settled.

The problem springs from the fact that Premier Bennett is at variance with most other delegates on the question of the time for duration of intra-Empire treaties. Mr. Bennett, as was plainly indicated in his speech to the Conference, would like any trade agreements reached to run for five or ten years. Other delegations believe this arrangement should be for shorter periods, running for from three to five years.

As a compromise between the two views, the creation of a council has been put forward. With a council of the kind contemplated, it is argued, it would be made to run indefinite term, but subject to the decision of the council of a any time either party to a pact might withdraw if the document's provisions were adverse.

The council could then arbitrate in the case. In this way it is argued Mr. Bennett's long-term idea and that of other delegates for shorter proposals can be put together to form a satisfactory plan of all.

Under the present proposal, each of the Empire countries would appoint a representative to the council. It is believed that in this way an arrangement could be brought to all such future disputes as that now which Canada and New Zealand, were precipitated in 1930 when Canada abrogated its previous trade agreement with the Antipodean Dominion.

WATER RIGHTS 12 MILES OUT

Privy Council Upholds Validity of Canadian Statute

London, July 29 (CP)—Allowing the appeal of R. B. Croft from the Supreme Court of Canada decision, Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council today held the validity of the Canadian statute which enacts that so far as Canadian water rights are concerned, Canadian territorial waters extend 12 marine miles from the coast.

Laws Affecting Ships.

In the case heard yesterday, the judgment points out, that for certain purposes, including police revenue, public health and fisheries, at least, may enact laws affecting ships on the high seas as distinguished from ordinary limits of its territory. Once the Canadian Parliament has made a topic of legislation was among those on which the Dominion Parliament might competently legislate; Their Lordships see no reason to restrict the permitted scope of such legislation by any other consideration than the distance from the shore exercise state. They held it difficult to conceive that Canada could have jurisdiction in beslowing plenary powers on the Dominion Parliament respecting the customs should withhold the power to enact provisions similar in scope and purpose to those which are an integral part of Imperial customs legislation.

400 GIRLS SEEKING $650 TEACHING POST

Hamilton, Ont., July 30—Trustees of the Mineral Springs School at Ancaster, three in number, today had 400 girls on the job of their business. They advertised for a school mistress for the little fount of knowledge recently. Already 400 replies have been received in answer to the advertisement.

Dominion Seeks Recovery Of Lumber By a Larger Preference

Market of Sawn Lumber With England Valued at $140,000,000

WANTS EMBARGO

Canada Able to Supply Two Billion Board Feet

Ottawa, July 30.—Canada bids to recover her vanished market in the world's largest lumber importing centre — England. With a potential annual market of $140,000,000 for sawn lumber in the Mother Country Imperial Conference discussions between the Dominion and representative lives of British importers are making such progress in the effort to reach a mutual agreement.

From the Dominions, sawn lumber enters England free. Against foreign countries, a tariff of 10 per cent. is imposed. But Canada only supplies 4.4 per cent. of this market. Russia under favorable conditions supplies about 36.7 per cent. Principal other exporting countries to England are Scandinavia and the Baltic States.

Representations are being made by the groups that the preferential tariff should be increased from 10 to 20 per cent. over all British Dominions. An embargo by England against Russian lumber imports has been suggested. Some of the provincial representatives have been heard by the Imperial Conference, it heard next week. While secrecy is being maintained, it is known on the basis of discussions, it is learned.

Ships 149,000,000 Feet.

Canada ships 149,000,000 board feet immediately overseas each year to the United Kingdom. Estimates which have been placed before the meetings are that the Dominion can supply to Great Britain, with care of production and safeguards, 2,000,000,000 feet board measure sawn lumber annually. This figure represents about one-half of the United Kingdom's total needs.

Roughly speaking, the computation of the supply which Canada could provide from the export from the five large timber provinces is estimated as follows:

	B. F. M.
British Columbia	1,000,000,000
Ontario	300,000,000
Quebec	300,000,000
New Brunswick	200,000,000
Nova Scotia	200,000,000
With smaller Dominion Contributions the export would be in soft wood. In the case of the latter, Douglas fir soft wood would predominate by far, as the proposals are that of the 2,000,000,000 feet, sawn soft woods 1,000 to 500,000,000 would be hardwood.

IRISH EYES

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

It was long after midnight when Sheila fell asleep. And after all it was neither Gertrude nor her sister Frank over whom the intractable Mac, on whom her last thoughts lingered. It was Mrs. Cassaday, blue-eyed, honest, generous, good-natured, and unsophisticated. She had never had-of ghastly human failings. She was a little stout, and she had been deceived in her, that she was a liar. Her cheeks burned with fear and shame, and her dreams, when finally she slept, were only a confused, troubled version of reality.

Frank said Mrs. McCann to her husband the following evening, when they were in their own apartment just before dinner, "the goodness of the poor breaks your heart." Frank was telling Peter the story of the exquisite Lyons lace cover of the big davenport, and the quaint little figure in his shirt-sleeves, without collar and tie, with his sticked feet in plain evidence, but there was instant sympathy and comprehension in the look he turned toward his wife.

"To get to see the Carscaddens to-day," he asked eagerly. "I was afraid to ask ye, what wit all ye have to do, Frank."

"I made it a matter of duty, Papa," Mrs. Frank said primly.

"Well, ye found thim?"

"In a sense, yes," Mrs. McCann laughed, and repeated her former phrase. "It would break your heart."

"It would, sh?" he asked uneasily, reluctantly, as he sat up on the edge of the bed.

"Three rooms, Papa. And you could, yet all three into this one," she added, as he muttered, as if in pain: He shut his lips, brought his feet to the floor, and began to walk up and down the room.

"If you could see the dignity of the mother, Peter," Frank said, "and the pride. Just one long tale of how good she has been! Is there a story that a wonderful son has, and that Sheila——Sheila's girl who knows Sheila—ought to be an actress, the way she carries on. She made a 'pote of' Gertrude's honesty, and her returning the money!"

"And all the time the poverty and want there, Paul, right there before my eyes!" They're a stinker from the site of your clothes closet there, and a sort of passage with a window into a kind of pit, where the two girls and their mother slept, so—so—so tight, where the son sleeps on couch! Well, you've got to be in there. Imagine it, Papa, young girls hungry for a taste of life and pleasure—living like there!"

"I knew the minute I saw the child he'd be something like that," he said. "God be good to us all!"

"Paul, I was thinking—" Paul, I was thinking—" Frank said, wondering, since this girl has lost her job, whether she'd come to us for next week? We're going to be simply rushed out of our senses. She could keep an eye on Veronica—she'd be the greatest help to Katie. Then I could get some idea of what he can do, and what they need—what is it Gertrude?"

"The last phrase was an abrupt interruption. Gertrude, clad in a dressing-gown, and with a tragic face and loosened hair, had entered the room without announcement.

"Aunt Ellie, do you know where Peter is?"

"Do I—Peter! Where would he be?"

"Well, he's not home; he's not here!"

"He's on his way home then, darling."

"Aunt Ellie, he's not! He was to meet the tailor, and meet Frank and pick out the ushers' suits and everything, and then he was going to meet me at the Paulists—and he's not! He's not! If he said he had had to go to the library at half past four and he would meet us at five, we telephoned the tailor, even, and Frank is just about to be tied! And he says he's airfit! Peter's been hurt!"

"Oh, for heaven's sake—" Judge McCann said, annoyed and impatient. "Don't lose your wits!"

"Well, Uncle Paul, all I know is that tonight is the night of the dinner dance at the Sahlite—our last before we are married, and it's to start sharp at seven because we're all going up to the Country Club, and look—it's twenty after and he don't laugh at me—do something—won't you? Won't you do something?"

"If ever I'm given another job on this earth," Judge McCann said piously, reaching for his coat, "I hope I'll have fewer throughout it!"

Sheila was nervous in the office the next morning; always pale, today she was unwontedly pale. The office girls looked at her respectfully; they knew that she had been fired, and although their care-free manner asks this meant little, yet it was impressive to have an irreplicable Sheila Carscadden subdued and complaining of headache and of a bad night.

The hours trembled by her. She would be free at two o'clock; would she go to the library for the appointment with Peter at half past three?

"Indeed I'll not!" her thoughts said indignantly, even while she watched the clock losing argument with this underman and her other musings this morning; she felt laughing and broken, after the two violent emotions of the night before. Dreamless-dreamless-dreamless! The girls questioning

"Sheila, what are you going to do now?"

"I don't know. Maybe I'll go to Hollywood——"

"I'll bet you in six months Ann Harding resigns——"

"I'll bet you in six months no decent person will speak to me."

"Sheila," said Mary McCartney, very gravely, "what has come that he can't talk in Lent."

"I don't feel nice," Sheila said morosely.

Toward mid-morning she was called to the telephone. This was quite unprecedented occurrence. No body had ever called Sheila before; it was a custom not encouraged in the office. She went to Miss Mc-Cartney's desk with her heart beating fast. It must be Peter——

It was not Peter. It was Frank McCann who had called.

"Are the first Nighter—WTG

"Sheila, I'm sorry to disturb this afternoon, Miss Carscadden—"

She was bewildered. Her wits deserted her completely.

"I mean your young lady has an engagement this afternoon," Frank said in his easy, self-confident way, "and I'm calling to ask her. Can't you, Peter, a big blow-out, up the coun. Mary sometimes and, of course, have to go. But——I have several hours free, and thought I might help, and I could go to a movie."

She felt, a few minutes later that she had not made much so brief in declining. After all, he had meant it well. After all, he was the oldest of the McCanns, and the McCanns had suddenly become to Sheila the most important family in the world But—well, it didn't matter. Frank McCann didn't matter. What did matter, supremely, was the eternal question: was she going to meet Peter in the library or not?

CHAPTER 16

Not to do so meant—just blankness. No, this time Sheila would be settled Mrs. McCann's charitable interest in the family once and for all. Leave her to Mr. When Ma chose to be magnificent, there was just nothing to it! Ma would squelch the other woman completely. After a very short, rapid talk with Mrs. McCann would never want to hear the name of Carscadden again. She would say to the judge, supposing him to continue to feel any interest in Sheila, "That girl was just fooling us, Paul. She has a very nice comfortable home in Brooklyn, and her mother said that they wanted for nothing."

And that would put an end, as far as Sheila was concerned.

There remained her tie with Peter her shadowy claim on Peter. He had hinted that they too might chart an hour together, or less, before a few minutes together, before he married Gertrude Scarsdale. That was all she, Sheila had ever wanted: it was all she wanted now. One last hour with him——

Still, she did not intend to go to the library.

She couldn't, anyway, because Joe as was usual on Saturdays called for Cecilia, and it was natural that they should all walk out into the cold streets together. Joe took them to the drugstore counter and they had toasted three-decker sandwiches and coffee. It was then almost half past three o'clock, and Sheila was a long way from the the Lay Library on Broadway.

Then it seemed that Joe wanted to see a man in Bronxville about a job. Cecilia said she would go, too, and they could stop and see Aunt Ellen. So, as always when he was with his girl, looked darkly radiant, Cecilia was as usual consulted and quiet under his attentions. Apathy was Cecilia's rule; she let the five-making to Joe.

At twenty-five minutes of four Sheila found herself alone in the cold, dirty dark street. Snow was threatened. The sky was ominous and low, the air had a cool, fresh rush.

She hesitated; walked a block east. No, she wouldn't keep this date with Peter! She turned and went resolutely westward, and into the subway local. She was going home.

In the train, rushing homeward, she looked at herself in her pocket mirror. Her blue hat was definitely becoming; the very feeling of the big soft coat with its luxurious collar was one of accompaniment. It was now a quarter to four; in twenty minutes it would be too late. She wished that the time would pass, and this indecision be gone.

Resolutely, Sheila changed to an express train, was whirled north-ward, to the thundering streets. She got out at One Hundred and Forty-ninth street, as always had happened, mounted to the sidewalk level, loitered at the bakery window, Coffee cakes were there, with holes in chocolate layer cakes with holes in the middle. The girl was stitching tiny clean signs into them: "To-day's special, 5c."

The drug-store clerk said three forty-eight. Suddenly, breathlessly, Sheila had turned, had crossed the street to the downtown subway, had dropped in her nickel, and pushed through the turnstile. She took the Broadway and Seventh Avenue train. Instantly she was rushing southward, Mod Avenue—Broadway—an rushed local.

She was on her way. She would be late, of course, he would wait. A greta relief innundaker her heart. Sheila had given in. No use fighting it any longer; she had to see him.

This was Saturday. A week from today he and Gertrude would have come up to be married and wife. Tonight someone was giving them a big party, I would be all parties from now on. But Sheila would
